BRODERICK ENDS AUDIT

SUICIDE LAID TO INSANITY

Dr. Norris Says That Victim Was Temporarily Unbalanced After Great Depression.

FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Mass to Be Said—Roosevelt and Lehman Are Among Many Callers at Home.

Joseph A. Broderick, State Superintendent of Banks, and a staff of bank examiners completed their check of the County Trust Company yesterday, an audit undertaken on Saturday following the disclosure that James J. Riordan, president of the bank, had committed suicide on Friday. Mr. Broderick said the trust company was unusually strong.

"Our completed examination," he said, "confirms what I said last night, namely, that the bank is not only liquid, but is in splendid condition and worthy of every public confidence."

The doors of the institution, at Eighth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, will be opened at the regular hour this morning. Few withdrawals are expected in the face of the official report of the State Superintendent, but a group of wealthy friends of the dead president stand ready to demonstrate their affection for him in a practical way.

It was learned last night that the group expects to open the trust company's day with deposits of great sums. Some will go into accounts already established in the bank and others will open new accounts. The group, it was said, was prepared to put in a dollar for every dollar that might be withdrawn.

Suicide Motive Undisclosed.

While the bank was being shown as "even stronger than the average institution," the motive that drove Mr. Riordan, reputed to be a millionaire several times over, to shoot himself through the temple in his home at 21 West Twelfth Street, remained undisclosed. Reports that he had overinvested in stocks persisted, as did his friends' denial of speculation, but it was insisted that whatever his market ventures had been, there had been no link between them and the trust company he headed.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, William F. Kenny, William H. English and John J. Raskob, all friends of the dead man, visited the trust company offices yesterday. They remained only twenty minutes and then left.

Mr. English, who was elected on Saturday night to succeed Mr. Riordan temporarily, was asked about reports that funds had been supplied to the bank during the twenty hours in which Dr. Charles Norris, Chief Medical Examiner, acting, as he said, at the request of the family and of friends, had suppressed news of the suicide. Dr. Norris declared he had been requested to violate the rules of his office so that patrons might not put the bank at a disadvantage during the half-day banking period of Saturday.

"It is absolutely untrue," said Mr. English, "that any director, officer or other person put any money or securities into the bank for any purpose after Mr. Riordan's death.

"So far as I know, Mr. Riordan was not involved in the stock market, but, whether he was or not, I do know that he did not borrow a penny from the bank or from any director for the stock market or for any other purpose."

Calls Cause a Mystery.

Mr. English said that he had talked to former Governor Smith and to Mr. Kenny on the death of their friend. He declared that he was utterly at a loss to account for the suicide, saying that the reason was a mystery to them all. He said that he did not expect withdrawals today.

Mr. Raskob, who was elected temporary chairman of the board of directors, said that he had merely dropped in at the bank for a moment or two. He asserted that he knew nothing of any stock speculation by the dead banker and added that Mr. Riordan had not borrowed from the trust company for any purpose. The State examiners also reported this.

Temporary Insanity, Says Norris.

Special to The New York Times.

DANVILLE, Va., Nov. 10.—To stimulate interest throughout Virginia in aviation and municipal airports, Governor Byrd will head a State-wide air tour Nov. 21 to 23 with a group of twenty State and Federal officials in eight planes.

WOMAN NOW ADMITS SHE KILLED GIRL, 4

Insisted After Surrender That Dorothy Rogers Had Died in Accident and She Hid Body.

DEAD BOY ALSO IS FOUND

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 10.—Gladys May Parks, 35 years old, of 101 Warren Street, Newark, was brought here early this afternoon from Newark, where she had surrendered to the police shortly after midnight, after learning that she was being sought in connection with the death of Dorothy Rogers, 4 years old, whose skeleton was found at National Park, N. J., a week ago.

At first she repeated the statement she had made to the Newark police, in which she admitted that Dorothy and her 3-year-old brother, Timothy, who had been entrusted to her care by their father, a widower, had met accidental deaths while in her custody. She told of disposing of their bodies secretly. Confirmation of this part of her story came when State troopers found the body of Timothy where she said she had hidden it at Absecon, N. J.

Confesses She Killed Girl.

Late tonight, however, after Mrs. Baker had been questioned for five hours, Prosecutor Clifford Baldwin of Camden County issued the following statement:

"Mrs. Baker has considerably amplified her early statement, which was made under rather imperfect conditions at Newark. She has made a homicidal confession in the case of Dorothy Rogers.

"After killing the girl a period of distress and uncertainty descended upon the woman. She was afraid others would note the child's disappearance. It is possible that her desire to vanish and cover her traces may have had considerable to do with the death of the boy."

Prosecutor Baldwin refused to amplify this phase of the statement.

Mr. Baldwin indicated he would call in medical experts to examine the boy's skull in an effort to determine whether it was fractured by a deliberate blow or injured in a fall down the cellar steps, as the woman insisted.

Detective Sergeant Shaw said tonight that he had located several men, whose names he withheld, who said that the Parks woman had attempted to extort money from them during the time she had the Rogers children in her care by claiming that the children were theirs.

The woman was arraigned before Police Court Judge Garfield A. Pancoast here this afternoon, charged with the murder of Dorothy. When the judge asked her how she pleaded, she repeated the statement she had clung to through hours of questioning both in Newark and here: "I didn't mean to kill her." Judge Pan-

FRANCE TO ASK CUTS IN CAPITAL SHIPS AT 5-POWER PARLEY

Will Propose Radical Reduction and Is Ready to Support Move for Abolition.

TO OPPOSE REPLACEMENTS

FIRM FOR MORE CRUISERS

Paris Holds Conference Is Mainly Political and Is Prepared to Bargain to Gain Ends.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The French Government intends to propose at the London five-power naval conference a radical reduction in capital ships and would support a move for their abolition.

It promises to be a French argument that the plans for naval limitation under the aegis of the Kellogg pact should look toward limiting warships to defensive ships since defensive war is the only kind of war justified under the anti-war pact. Capital ships, the French contended, are par excellence a weapon of offense, whereas cruisers and submarines may be called weapons of defense.

The French point out furthermore that with the exception of Japan the only nations which have large fleets of capital ships are America and England. Since Washington and London avow that they are proceeding on the basis that future war between America and Britain is unthinkable, it is contended in Paris that America and England should have no further use for capital ships.

This point of view is bolstered with the argument that capital ships are good only to fight capital ships, and that since the nations which boast capital ships are never going to fight they will find their battleships useless. Since the conference will hold little prospect immediately of reduction of cruisers, it is held here that the biggest thing it could accomplish would be a reduction of battleships, which are the costly part of modern fleets.

Want Further Postponement.

The French have noted the American adoption of the British suggestion made in 1927, that the replacements allowed under the Washington naval treaty be postponed for five years, and they favor making the postponement of replacements extend for ten years beyond 1931, by which time there would be very few capital ships which would not be out of date on the basis of twenty years of effectiveness. All the French battleships would be antiquated by that time.

In other words, it is the French position that if America and England seek to reduce the cost of naval armaments the best possibility lies in attacking the capital ship situation.

As for submarines, the French retain their position that they will oppose their abolition. They say that the undersea boats are the cheapest and most effective defensive weapon and they mean to keep them. This does not mean that they would oppose in theory the limitation of submarines either in number or in size, but they say that this would depend on a great many considerations.

Regarding reports that the Italians will swing to the Anglo-American position favoring the abolition of submarines, the French say that since the invitations to the London conference were issued the Italians have three times informed them that Rome will stand with Paris for the maintenance of submarines in their fleets.

Stand Firm on Cruisers.

As for cruisers, the French show every evidence of adopting a firm attitude. They point out that their program of cruiser building has not yet been completed and that, if it be true that their present cruiser tonnage would approximate a 1.75 ratio as compared with the proposed British cruiser tonnage, they made it plain at the Washington conference that they did not accept the capital ship ratio as governing cruisers.

Before the war, the French say

Robbers Wreck Limited Near Saugus, Cal.; Leap From Ambush and Hold Up Passengers

By The Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—The West Coast Limited, a Southern Pacific passenger train, was wrecked two miles west of Saugus, Cal., tonight by robbers who entered four coaches and held up the passengers.

Reports here said twenty persons were held up. There were only two robbers in the train, one of them searching the victims while the other held them at bay with a revolver.

The wreck apparently was caused by a loosened rail or one which had been removed. The engine, baggage car and smoker overturned. Engineer Bell was the only person hurt. He was believed suffered fatality.

The desperadoes apparently had planned the robbery carefully, for passengers said it was only an instant after the train stopped that the robbers entered the cars.

Among those who lost their valuables was H. C. Pierson, district passenger agent of the railroad company.

In the confusion, authorities could not learn how much the robbers had obtained.

Sixteen Parachute Jumpers in Air Together; One Woman in Group Leaping 2,000 Feet

Special to The New York Times.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Nov. 10.—Twelve thousand persons here today saw all records broken for group parachute jumping. Sixteen persons, one of them a woman, leaped from a giant Sikorsky transport plane at 2,000 feet. They came out of the big cabin door so fast that, after their silken umbrellas had opened, they formed an almost unbroken line.

This parachute stunt was the last event on a program of flying sponsored by the Aviators Post of the American Legion. It came at the close of a program in which the other most exciting feature was the stunting of Lieutenant James H. Doolittle in the latest type Curtiss Hawk fighter, which flies at 181 miles an hour. He dived at three miles a minute toward the field and then, zooming to a steep climb, he put the little plane on its back and continued climbing in the inverted position. His engine, not equipped for inverted flight, cut out as he hung above the field, head downward. The flier quickly turned over and started a long, wide-circling glide toward the field, now and then getting a sputter from the motor. Just above the field it caught on and he climbed again to repeat his performance. This time he included double barrel rolls and again his motor appeared to cut out while flying upside down. This time he pointed the plane for Mitchel Field and landed.

The group parachute jump surpassed even the work of army and navy jumpers displayed at air circuses and at the national air races. Many of the jumpers were service-trained and wore the service-type parachute packs. Harold McMahon, pilot of the big Sikorsky, said that it took only thirteen seconds for them to leave the plane. First out was William Gerhart. He pulled his ripcord almost instantly, but by the time his parachute had opened two more jumpers were spinning downward. As they continued to leap from the plane the jumpers waited progressively longer before pulling the ripcords, so that they would all be in the air at the same time. Miss Wanda Stolaruka, wing walker and parachute jumper, dropped nearly a thousand feet before opening her parachute. The jumpers all landed safely, some coming to earth on the links of the Old Westbury Golf Club, adjoining Roosevelt Field, and the others landing within the airport boundaries.

ROOSEVELT ASSAILS MILITARISTIC PATRIOT

Peace, Not Glory of Arms, Should Be Our Aim, He Says at Color-Massing Service.

POINTS TO MORAL ENEMIES

The duty of patriotism to refrain from overstressing the military element and to work for peace and the social welfare of the nation was the keynote sounded yesterday at ceremonies held in the city as a prelude to the celebration of Armistice Day today.

Speaking at the annual massing of the colors at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Ninetieth Street and Fifth Avenue, on the eve of the eleventh anniversary of the end of the World War, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt said the true function of the patriot was not alone to seek maintenance of adequate armed forces but to fight constantly against the "moral enemies of the Republic who menace ideals of liberty, equality and justice."

At the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where 3,000 persons gathered for the Armistice Day service of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, Bishop William T. Manning, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and George W. Wickersham, member of President Hoover's Commission on Law Enforcement, joined in pronouncements in behalf of world peace.

Other Celebrations Held.

Several other celebrations were held in various parts of the city during the day in memory of those who lost their lives in the war. In numerous churches Armistice Day was the subject of sermons. Today at 11 A. M. the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice will be marked by a two-minute period of silence. The main Armistice Day celebration will be held at the Eternal Light in Madison Square just after the silence period. Mayor Walker is to be one of the speakers.

The address of Governor Roosevelt at the Church of the Heavenly Rest was preceded by a military parade up Fifth Avenue from Sixty-fourth Street to the church. Governor Roosevelt, Major Gen. Hanson Ely, Rear Admiral Louis R. de Steiguer, Brig. Gen. Hugh A. Drum and other persons of note reviewed the parade as it passed Eighty-fifth Street. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the Governor, was also present.

In the line of march were forty units representing the army, navy and Marine Corps, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Salvation Army, Society of Tammany, Police Department and numerous patriotic societies. The parade was headed by Brig. Gen. Oliver B. Bridgman.

At the church the ceremony of the massing of the colors took place, and the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, the pastor, spoke briefly, followed by Governor Roosevelt, who said:

Sees Patriotism Symbolized.

"Tomorrow at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month we celebrate the eleventh anniversary of the ending of the greatest war in history. Today we are here to witness a beautiful and solemn ceremony, a ceremony which is not only beautiful as a spectacle but which is also a physical visualization of patriotism in its highest spiritual sense.

"As one by one the standards of your organizations move forward to group themselves around our country's flag, they bear with them a renewed vow of true patriotism from every member of each body they represent.

"There is, I fear, too great a tendency to give to patriotism merely

REPUBLICANS HERE AT SEA OVER 1930

MANY ASPIRE TO RUN

Leaders See Reorganization Vital, but Are in Doubt How to Proceed.

Stimulation of the hopes of up-State candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor next year has resulted from the 127,166 plurality for Mayor Walker at last Tuesday's election and the almost complete collapse of the Republican county organizations in New York City revealed by the tremendous Tammany victory.

Confronted by the double threat of a Democratic plurality for Governor of nearly half a million in New York City and the cutting down of the Republican plurality outside the city by an improved Democratic up-State organization, the leaders of the Republican State organization under the direction of State Chairman William J. Maier have come to a realization that something must be done to improve the party situation, but without any clear idea, as yet, of just how to go about it. With immediate reorganization of the party in New York City difficult if not impossible, there was said to be a growing feeling that the best way out might be to nominate an up-State man for Governor and rely upon the Republican plurality there to offset the Democratic plurality in New York City.

Many Up-State Aspirants.

Up-State aspirants for the Republican nomination are numerous and it is not believed that the number has been lessened by Mayor Walker's victory. Among those mentioned as actual or prospective candidates are Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies, of Chautauqua County, whose chance for the nomination seems to have been improved considerably; Attorney General Hamilton Ward and Colonel William J. Donovan, of Buffalo; State Senator Seabury C. Mastick, of Westchester County, and Representative Hamilton Fish, of Putnam County.

Politically the two Long Island counties outside New York City rank as "up-State," and there are two possible candidates there in F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, whose home is in Nassau County, and W. Kingsland Macy, Suffolk County Republican leader.

Another possible candidate for Governor is State Senator George R. Fearon of Syracuse, but it is generally believed that Senator Fearon would prefer to wait and try for the Republican nomination for United States Senator in 1932, a place that is understood to appeal to him more than the Governorship.

The leading New York City candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor continues to be United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, who before the city election seemed to be in a preferred position, but whose chance for the nomination has been at least impaired by Tammany's victory. Mr. Tuttle, however, is by no means out of the running, and, even though the city may not produce the Republican votes, its delegates to the State convention will be numerous and influential.

Discount Harvey's Chances.

Talk of the probable candidacy of Borough President George U. Harvey of Queens, whose re-election in the face of the Tammany landslide has given him much prestige, is accepted by the State party leaders as due mostly to General politics. County Chairman Joseph H. De Bragga, who opposed Mr. Harvey's renomination and was sworn of everything except his political title by the two Harvey victories, is said to have Capital Fears Outbreak Presages Greater Violence at Polls in Election Next Sunday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—At least three persons were killed and twelve seriously injured in a clash here today on one of Mexico City's principal thoroughfares, the Avenue Juarez, between partisans of the two leading Presidential candidates.

The encounter occurred a few minutes after 11 o'clock this morning when a procession of some 20,000 supporters of José Vasconcelos were marching in an orderly manner toward the National Palace. They had passed the headquarters of Pascual Ortiz Rubio, his rival, and were facing one of his branch committee rooms when a halt was made because of cross traffic. From the roof of the building insulting remarks are reported to have been made and these were followed by a shower of bricks and stones and then by pistol and rifle shots, first fired into the air and then into the crowd. After this, according to the best information obtainable, there followed a general pistol battle in which three demonstrators were killed and probably more than twelve wounded, including one woman and one child. About 500 shots were fired in all.

Parade Moves After Half Hour.

The marchers, according to a witness, were able to proceed again after a half hour. They had planned to march past the Presidential palace, but, according to an unconfirmed report, troops under General Eulogio Ortiz, commander of the Mexico City garrison, barred their way.

Some of the crowd broke into Señor Ortiz Rubio's branch campaign office and set fire to it. The blaze was extinguished and troops went on guard to keep out the thousands of curiosity seekers who tried to enter later.

Valente Quintana, the chief of police, was on the scene early and was slightly injured by a brick that hit him on the head.

Neither of the Presidential candidates is in the city. Supporters of Señor Vasconcelos notified him by wire, blaming their opponents for the fight and asserting that their "success" was evidence of popular support.

No one could be found tonight at the headquarters of Señor Ortiz Rubio, who is supported by the Grand Revolutionary party, founded by General Calles. At the Anti-Re-electionist party headquarters of Señor Vasconcelos, however, there was great activity.

Payne Quoted in Campaign.

The Vasconcelos campaign committee released this afternoon the following telegram as having been authorized by Judge John Barton Payne, who, with Charles Beecher Warren, negotiated recognition of the late General Alvaro Obregon.

"I have treated on the Mexican situation personally and directly with

SEEK EXAMPLE FOR NATION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Developments during the last few days have led to the conviction here that District Attorney Leo A. Rover, with the approval of the White House and the Department of Justice, is engaged in a full-fledged campaign to clean up the national capital and demonstrate to the nation that a city can be made dry and free of gamblers and objectionable night clubs, if enforcement officers, unhampered by political considerations, set out to accomplish that end.

Things have gone so far since Senator Brookhart of Iowa appeared before the District grand jury to tell all about alleged drinking at a dinner given by Walter J. Fahy in 1926, at which several men from Wall Street were present, that friends of the Eighteenth Amendment are said to fear the effect it may have upon enforcement of the liquor laws throughout the country if no definite results are attained toward making Washington a "model" city.

Less Gossip About Parties Now.

Mr. Rover was represented today as wishing it understood that he intended to break up every known gaming establishment and disorderly house, and run down every bootlegger whom his agents could locate and that he expected all good citizens to cooperate. Orders have gone out, it is understood, that the campaign is not to be confined to any particular class, and almost anybody who indicates that he knows anything of value to the prosecutor may be called upon to tell it to the grand jury.

As a result of such developments gossip about "drinking parties I have known" is being carried on in restricted volume, and in hushed voices.

Miracle Seekers in Crush at Cemetery Shrine; Police Forced to Remove Priest's Gravestone

MALDEN, Mass., Nov. 10.—Officials of the Holy Cross Cemetery here were forced to carry off the gravestone of the Rev. Patrick Power on a truck tonight and secrete it as the only means of clearing the burial ground of a throng of thousands who literally fought each other and extra police details throughout the day in their efforts to approach the stone, which in the last week has become a shrine as the result of reports of miraculous cures wrought on those who have prayed and touched it.

The cemetery probably will be closed tomorrow and Tuesday until iron rails can be put around the grave to take the place of the police ropes which were broken in today's stampede.

Crowds at some of the most famous shrines in the world were equaled if not exceeded in numbers in the greatest pilgrimage that Boston has experienced. Scenes approaching panic were enacted several times when the throngs got beyond control of the city policemen on duty. Women fainted, children were trampled and several were carried away in a state of collapse. Thousands were disappointed after waiting for hours.

Traffic was blocked for miles around the cemetery all afternoon by thousands of automobiles and heavily loaded street cars clanging to get through the mass.

Stout ropes, which the police stretched around the priest's grave, might as well have been thread, so quickly were they broken and trampled down.

There were scenes of joy as a few cried out that their ills had been helped. Cripples proclaimed they had been cured. Hundreds of others wept because they could not get near the shrine, or had found that their physical burden had not been lightened.

So eager was the crowd to reach the scene of the cures that the gravestone itself was damaged, two pedestals being knocked awry in the crush. Two tombstones near by were pushed over.

Thousands were forced to leave the cemetery without getting within fifty yards of the gravestone. Many of the disappointed were cripples, who had traveled many miles and waited many hours for an opportunity to pray at the graveside.

CALL PARTY DISORGANIZED

Politicians Hold Senate Situation Is Stirring Electorate.

SAY HOOVER IS PERTURBED

BORAH NOW IN SADDLE

But Observers Are Wondering If He Will Actually Lead in Opposing President.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Something like a revolution appears to be taking place in the Republican party, in the view of a considerable number of politicians and political observers here. If certain discerning Republican workers see the situation correctly, part of the electorate in every section envisages the party as disorganized and is beginning to look askance at its claim to being a model of business efficiency which brings prosperity to the country and may be depended on to run the nation's affairs in the most satisfactory way.

Certain Republicans are contending that the substantial Democratic victory in Tuesday's election in Virginia was partly due to a hesitation on the part of many Democrats who had voted the Republican national ticket last year to align themselves permanently with the Republican party. While the return of Virginia to traditional Democratic allegiance is generally regarded as having been due chiefly to other causes, considerable influence in bringing about the change is being ascribed to a feeling on the part of many of those termed "Hoovercrats" that the usual Republican solidarity is not being maintained.

Effect of Senate Split.

They are credited with seeing an analogy between the condition of the Republican party now and the situation in the Democratic party in 1924, as indicated by the turmoil that prevailed in the Madison Square Garden convention. Politicians adhere to the belief that the confusion there drove large numbers of Democrats to vote the Republican national ticket that year.

Feeling that the Republican party as a national entity is badly disorganized arises from the situation in the Senate, with the Republican regulars helpless in the face of the combination of Democrats and insurgent Republicans which is dominating consideration of the tariff bill. The appearance of party disintegration in the Senate is looked upon by a good many politicians as having an influence on the electorate, which, it is being said, is asking what has become of Republican leadership and is wondering if the regular organization has dwindled to a minority.

Democrats Hopes High.

While President Hoover is keeping his counsel, it is not doubted that he is considerably perturbed over the turn events have taken, if for no other reason than the danger that threatens the party and his own political fortunes in the Presidential campaign of 1932. That the Democrats have a good chance of making gains in next year's elections of Senators had been contended by some political observers even before the split in the Senate.

Since these difficulties have been intensified there is a more widespread disposition to suggest, at least, that Democratic chances of electing candidates for the Senate have vastly improved in New Jersey, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Delaware, Rhode Island, Colorado, Oklahoma, Kentucky and Iowa, where seats now held by Republicans will be contested next year. Optimistic Democrats go so far as to see a turnover that would give the Democrats a clear majority of the Senate.

Borah Now in Command.

The prominence Senator Borah of Idaho has assumed in the opposition to the tariff rates proposed by the regulars is a marked feature in discussions of how party prospects have been and may be influenced by the complete collapse of regular leadership of the Senate. Mr. Borah, at last, appears to have taken on the responsibility of a real leader. Heretofore, even when he has attained a foremost position in legislative battles, he has declined to accept authority to lead.

But in the current instance he not only has the power to determine what course the coalition shall take, but has become militant in exercising his command.

In the Presidential campaign last year Senator Borah was a tower of strength to the Hoover cause. There are many who accord to him the chief credit for bringing about the massive victory which came to the Republican national ticket. In that campaign Senator Borah assembled a large personal following, especially in those States of the West and South in which he spoke in behalf of Mr. Hoover's candidacy.

The assertion is made that his influence still holds among those who heard his eloquence or followed the course of his campaign tours. Even among politicians there is a disposition to ask whether his present attitude of opposition to his party's tariff policy is not causing large contingents of Republicans to believe that there must be something radically wrong with their party if he has quitted its breastworks.

In the eyes of some political observers here Senator Borah has become the most logical prospective leader of any new national movement that may arise from the revolt in the Republican ranks over the tariff situation.

His Leadership a Problem.

Whether he will assume any such leadership is problematical for, according to his critics, Mr. Borah's chief trouble is that he "never strikes twelve" in his demonstrations of party independence. That is to say, in all his protests against party policies or tendencies he never takes himself quite outside party alignment, and usually is found showing a marked degree of regularity in political campaigns.

It is a striking feature of his present commanding position, however, that when the Senate takes up a tariff rate Mr. Borah has only to raise his voice in favor of or in opposition to it, and the coalition follows his lead. The argument might be advanced that he, in taking issue on the tariff with his party as it is represented in the Senate and House, is in accord with President Hoover's repeated call for "limited" tariff revision.

But Mr. Borah has taken direct issue with the President on the farm export debenture plan and the President's appeal that Congress continue the authority vested in the executive to raise or lower tariff rates if the necessity for a change is shown by the Tariff Commission.

Public Interest Aroused.

Generally in political circles here the feeling exists that the country, except in sporadic, sectional instances, is not particularly interested in the details of the tariff debate.

But with that opinion goes the assertion that the people are greatly interested in the exposition of Republican inability to put through the tariff revision drafted by its leading member in the Senate and in the contention of the Democrats and the insurgent Republican group that the rates proposed by the regulars are bad for the wage-earning class.

Moreover, the country at large is credited with being aroused over the testimony of Joseph N. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, before the Senate Lobby Committee, the case of Senator Bingham of Connecticut and Senator Moses's reference to the Republican insurgents as "sons of the wild jackass."

These incidents are causing worry to leaders who are afraid that they have not improved prospects in the West.

The situation is complex and it is evident that some of the regulars regard it as threatening the most serious threat to party solidarity since the La Follette defection of five years ago.

EXPECTS CAPTURE OF NEXT CONGRESS

Democrats Are Sure to Win 20 Seats in House, Byrns Estimates.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The reaction against the Republican party shown in the recent elections and the split in the Senate on the tariff may give control of the next Congress to the Democrats, Representative James W. Byrns, chairman of the Democratic National Congress Committee, declared tonight.

If a sweeping change in the Democratic direction should occur, he said the Democrats would probably control the House. He said the Democrats would gain nineteen seats in the South, lost in the Hoover election, and eleven normally Democratic seats in other sections. He also expects gains in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and the New England States.

"Following the elections in several States last Tuesday, which it had become known that the Democrats had been generally successful, I made the statement that if the tide continues to run in our direction for several months, as it is now clearly apparently running, the probabilities are that we will gain control of Congress in the election next November," Mr. Byrns said.

"I have been asked for a 'bill of particulars,' or in other words, to show just where and how the Democrats are going to capture Congress.

Counts on Republican Split.

"I shall confine myself to the situation with reference to the House of Representatives, except to say that the Senate situation is similar and our party's prospects for control of that body are brighter than they have been since 1918.

"Certainly, if Senator Moses, the chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, continues to call Western Republicans 'wild jackasses,' Senator Reed to refer to them as 'Communists' or 'Socialists,' and we can get Joseph Grundy, the Pennsylvania tariff boss, to go on the witness stand again, the independent-minded Republicans in the West are bound to be resentful and Republican prospects won't be helped any.

"With reference to the House situation, to me it is analogous to that of 1922, when Democrats overturned upward of fifty Congressional districts and increased their membership in that body to 230 in the last Congress there were 185 Democrats and two Independents who usually voted with us. In the present Congress there are but 100 Democrats and one Independent. Much of this loss was in the South, due to the peculiar political situation in 1928. Last Tuesday's election results in Virginia and Kentucky make it certain that we will get back every Southern Congressional district we lost in 1928.

Predicts Victory in the South.

"There are nineteen of them; five in Kentucky, one in Maryland, six in Missouri, two in North Carolina, two in Oklahoma and three in Virginia. In addition, we lost in the Congress eleven States which we held in the Seventieth Congress and which are usually Democratic and which we are sure to get back next year. They include two in New York, one in New Jersey, one in West Virginia, three in Ohio, one in Indiana, one in Illinois, one in Nebraska and one in Colorado.

"Recapture of these nineteen certain Southern districts and eleven ordinarily Democratic districts in the East and Middle West account for thirty seats we are practically certain to get back, which would bring our membership up to 130, or twenty-three short of a majority, not including any independents, who usually vote with our party.

"Even if it were sufficiently familiar with the situation in individual districts to be in a position to do so, it would be unwise to single out this or that district and say we are going to carry this or lose that particular district.

"But one has to go back no further than the 1922 and 1926 off-year elections to find that there are nearly fifty districts in the East, North and West which are so close that they are usually doubtful. For example, in 1922, we elected six Democratic Congressmen in New Jersey, where we now have but two from that State.

"In that same year we elected six Democrats from Pennsylvania, but do not have a single Pennsylvania Democrat in the House at this time. There are ten, possibly twelve, Congressional districts in Pennsylvania which are doubtful, and in six or eight of them the probabilities of success usually rest without party.

"Certainly we are going to make gains in these two States, and we are just as sure to pick up some New England districts. With conditions only normal, we would make gains in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, but conditions are not going to be just normal.

"The shocking tariff disclosures, the failure of the Republican Administration to keep its campaign pledges to the farmers, the bad economic situation bound to follow the near-panic on the stock market, with the serious losses which thousands of individuals have suffered from the stock decline, are bound to hurt business and react against the party in power.

"Particularly are the farmers resentful, because for nearly ten years now the Republicans have put them off with promises, most of which have been kept. The situation has grown steadily worse, and the farmers are not likely to be in a mood to again take seriously the promises of a party whose pledges long and bitter experience have shown to be of no value."

LEAGUE SENDS DRAFT FOR PACT ON TARIFF

Members and Non-Members, Including America, Asked to Attend Conference.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

GENEVA, Nov. 10.—The United States, as well as other non-members of the League of Nations, will be acquainted officially this week with the draft of the convention on customs recently elaborated by the "Preparatory" Economic Committee, of which Lucien Coquelin is unofficial American member.

A circular letter sent out yesterday to all League members and to the United States by the Secretary General communicates the text of the preliminary draft of the convention with a view to concluding a customs truce. Sir Eric Drummond reminds the governments to which the letter is addressed that this draft is intended to serve as a basis of discussion, and he asks them to advise the League before Dec. 31 whether they are willing to participate in the proposed conference, and if so to give the names of their delegates.

Great Britain has answered beforehand in the affirmative and has advised that Sir R. Graham will head the British delegation.

Sir Eric's letter draws attention to an unframed article in the convention regarding the exclusion of flexible tariffs. The Secretary General says he has been asked to point out that it was for a future conference to consider how the convention's scope could be limited to protective duties.

TARIFF COALITION FOSTERED IN HOUSE

GROUP COUNTS ON 64 VOTES

Leaders Seek to Join Those With Democrats to Enact Measure on Farm Lines.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The coalitionists in control of tariff action in the Senate are planning to form a similar coalition in the House in the hope of completely dominating the enactment of a bill with high farm rates and low industrial rates, according to a program which became known today.

The program of the fifteen insurgent Republican Senators is to exert their influence on their respective State delegations in the House, urging them to follow their Senators in the tariff fight and work with the Democrats in the House on rates and the fundamental administrative features of the measure.

Manifestations of a small revolt of the Western members in the House who accepted the Hawley bill are now becoming evident as the corn and wheat belt Representatives return to Washington. The Eastern regulars, who have been pinning their hope on the House to restore the higher industrial rates when the tariff bill reaches that body from the Senate now fear that the "revolt of the West" may upset these calculations.

Returning House members representing the fifteen States of Senators who have been combating the Finance Committee bill in the upper branch are reported to have changed their attitude of a few months ago relative to the industrial rates and to be accepting the Senatorial revision.

A revolt in the House cannot be as easily staged as in the Senate, due to the big Republican majority, but those promoting it believe a House coalition can be formed that may succeed in compelling the regulars to accept a bill that will be more agreeable to the West and to the Democrats.

Borah Increasingly Confident.

Senator Borah and his associates feel confident that the sentiment swaying the West and upholding the Senate insurgent movement will have a powerful effect in the House and that a tariff bill will get through Congress that will be acceptable to the President and those who have been opposing the high industrial rates.

He believes that the breakdown of the regular Republican program in the Senate, announced yesterday, will have the effect of lessening opposition to a moderate tariff bill in the House, while its consideration is expedited in the Senate.

"I am confident a bill that will carry out the President's tariff program will be enacted and approved by President Hoover," he said.

The Western States represented by the insurgent Senators have 61 votes in the House, and if all of them should join with the Democrats, the tariff situation in the House might be controlled against the conservative forces.

Some of the insurgents believe that such a plan can be put through in its entirety. Regular Republican leaders do not believe it will succeed. They say that the House will undoubtedly give more on some of the rate changes made in the Senate, but will not recede on the flexible tariff provision and will reject the farm debenture amendment added by the Senate.

Garner Cites Votes Necessary.

"Give us fifty-three Republican votes and we will do the work and accept the rates in the Senate bill," said Representative John N. Garner of Texas, Democratic House leader.

Mr. Garner was not so confident that the House members would accept both the farm debenture provision and the Simmons-Norris amendment, taking away from the President power to fix new duties after recommendation by the Tariff Commission, and he indicated that the debenture plan might be abandoned.

"But if we give them their rates, the Senate accept the flexible amendment of the Senators," he said. "We will never give them up."

The Republicans now have a majority of ninety-four in the House. To obtain the votes required for a successful combination with the Democrats, the projected House coalition must capture virtually all the Republican votes in the trans-Mississippi agricultural States.

There are sixty-four Republican members from twelve of these States as follows: North Dakota 3, South Dakota 3, Nebraska 4, Kansas 7, Minnesota 9, Wisconsin 11, Iowa 11, Missouri 10, Oklahoma 3, Montana 1, Idaho 2, New Mexico 1.

Representative Hoch of Kansas said it was a question whether the House should vote first on the tariff bill sent over from the Senate or to send it at once to conference, and he vetoed a Presidential veto if the Senate amendments on the flexible provisions and the debenture plan should remain in the bill.

"My judgment is that Western Republicans would probably be ready to accept the rates fixed by the Senate," Mr. Hoch asserted. "If the present tendency continues and is carried through to a finish. In other words, we regard the action of the Senate as materially improving the House bill as far as the rates are concerned.

"Personally, I hope before the Senate gets through it will remove the duties proposed on sugar, cement, brick, lumber and shingles in order to help with what some of us tried to do in the House. Also, the rate on hides should be increased and the proposed duties on shoes and leather goods reduced."

Representative Strong of Kansas is agreeable to supporting the Senate tariff rates. He said that the Western House members last Spring accepted the high industrial rates of the bill in order to get agricultural increases.

"We paid no attention to the industrial rates, but centered on farm rates," Mr. Strong said, "depending on the Senate to cut down the industrial rates. Now the Middle Western Republicans in the House will support the Senate action on rates, as a general proposition, in my judgment."

Accomplishment Still Uncertain.

Present indications are that the Senate cannot dispose of the tariff bill in the remaining days of the special session and that the bill will not reach conference before the middle of December. If the coalition movement in the House should become powerful, consideration of the bill might not be long delayed, but if the regular majority in the House controls, much time will be consumed in the conference and the probability is that a bill will not reach the President until about Feb. 1.

The Republican regulars in the Senate apparently will place few obstacles in the path of the coalitionists over this issue and follow the action of Senator Smoot in offering to surrender the measure to the insurgent Democratic majority. But even this group is not united on the character of the bill as many Democrats will not accept rates sought by the insurgent Republicans. This made it impossible for the coalitionists to agree to Senator Smoot's proposal that they rewrite the bill and report a measure which could be acted on without debate.

The coalition will divide on many items, but, generally speaking, it is acted on the main proposition to retain high farm rates.

Less than a third of the rate items have been disposed of, and unless the Senate speeds the necessary votes, with little real debate, it would appear physically impossible for it to pass the bill before the regular session begins on Dec. 2. Sitting tomorrow, when the business of other governmental branches halts for the Armistice Day holiday, the Chamber will still have to complete the metals schedule; the third of the fifteen in the bill, with no agreement upon means of limiting talk.

The prevailing opinion is that the Senate finally will send a bill with high farm rates, but with the duties on hides and boots and shoes eliminated and accepting the House provision placing lumber on the free list. As to the industrial rates, the program of the coalition is said to comprise a high level for textile items and a few others, but broadly a re-enactment of the present Fordney-McCumber law otherwise.

Walsh Gives View of Situation.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, in a statement during the day expressed a widely accepted view that the Senate will not act on the completed bill much before the Christmas recess in the regular session.

"The immediate cause of the existing situation in the Senate," Mr. Walsh said, "is that the group, the industrial protectionists of the Republican party in the Senate that usually attend tariff bills and are used by the right of amendment of the House will, if the schedule the passage of the amended House bill, in this extra session of the Congress has been unbroken.

"And yet it still remains nominally in charge of the bill, although the real control is manifestly not in its hands. There is a condition of divided responsibility which, always with respect to any branch of human affairs, makes the expeditious and efficient conduct of business impossible. It is a situation parallel to that which exists when the leadership of a political organization has on its hands the management of a campaign for a candidate on a platform of principles which it has had thrust upon it unwillingly."

The regular Republican leadership has no heart in the kind of tariff bill that the majority of the Senate appears to desire.

"The condition of divided responsibility with respect to the tariff bill now before the Senate has arisen immediately because of the artificial nature of the formal organization of the Senate. All who bore the Republican label joined as a majority in organizing the Senate for the work of this session, which included the naming of the Republican members of the Committee on Finance.

"Then, when the majority of the members of the Finance Committee, representing mere label-counting from the total membership of the Senate framed and reported the amended bill, it was discovered that a majority of new emergency interests and not of issues in the Senate is opposed to the bill and will not accept it without radical reconstruction."

LURED TO ASSASSINATION.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Three telephone calls from his young wife, the unwitting tool of his assassins, early today lured Joseph Piccallo, 29 years old, from a point game to his death.

Piccallo dropped with seventy-two bullets and fourteen shots in his body as he left a poker party to the home of Andrew Randazzo in Calumet City in response to his wife's calls urging him to go to Terre Haute to bail out a friend who was in jail there.

Mrs. Piccallo said some one she did not know had phoned, urging her to get her husband to go to Terre Haute.

"I thought it was a friend who needed his help," she said.

Police of Hammond, Calumet City and East Chicago expressed the belief that Piccallo had been murdered in connection with the recent Federal investigation which resulted in the indictment of ten men and women in Northern Indiana, most of them on charges of violating the Volstead law.

High Valley Railroad, who attended the Fahy dinner, will appear before the grand jury by invitation tomorrow to testify as to his version of the occurrences at that affair, concerning which Senator Brookhart has had so much to say. He will be followed by Frank S. Higgs, manager of the New Willard Hotel, where the dinner was given. A third witness on the schedule is Walter W. Liggett, writer of an article in the Machine Plain Talk, in which he characterized Washington as "wet-to" that before prohibition.

More Disclosures Awaited.

Official and social Washington is waiting with intense interest to learn whether other witnesses of prominence will be summoned as a result of what may be divulged within the next few days. There have been unconfirmed reports that all of the Senators, as well as financiers and business men, who were guests at the Fahy dinner may be summoned.

While there had been some gossip about the "wetness" of the National capital, no situation of interest amounting to "sin and vice" developed has confronted Washington since prohibition became a law.

The current nervousness among many citizen gumshoers of liquor, as well as bootleggers and night club proprietors, had its inception in an address in the Senate by Senator Howell of Nebraska, to the effect that drinking was general in Washington and that enforcement could be made effective here if the White House took a hand.

President Hoover answered with a request for details upon which to act, and since that time the controversy has been going on at full blast.

The final impetus was given to the drive now in progress under the direction of Mr. Rover by the arrest and imprisonment of three newspaper reporters for refusing to answer certain questions by the grand jury into the speech in the Senate by Senator Brookhart about the Fahy dinner, and his subsequent appearance before the grand jury.

The question worrying those who may be affected by developments is just how far the campaign will be carried in the effort to make Washington the "model" city when the White House said it desired.

Some of Liggett's Figures.

Before Prohibition. 1929.

Night clubs	100	6,000
Consumption of whisky, wines and beer (gals.)	1,000,000	1,000,000
Cases of liquor confiscated (1916) 6,780	(1928) 14,000
Arrests for violation of prohibition laws	(1916-20) 7,414	(1921-29) 15,000
Arrests for drunkenness (1916) 2,000	(1928) 10,444

"According to Mr. Liggett," the statement said, "while the drys are stronger in Washington than in almost any other city, while they dictate the selection of judges, police chiefs, district attorneys, &c., and while the police are remarkably uncorrupted, it is not in the least difficult to get liquor there.

"He declares that there is still plenty of drinking in high government circles, and that Capitol Hill is probably the wettest place in Washington, with an official bootlegger in the Senate and at least six in the House, two of whom it is the government's..."

MANGANESE TARIFF GIVES $336,000 RISE

INDUSTRIES ARE IN CLASH

Steel Interests Cite Small Domestic Output, but Producers Promise Large Increase.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Government revenue from the tariff on imported manganese will be increased about $336,000 annually, experts say, if Congress approves the change made in the duty when the Senate adopted the Oddie amendment by a vote of 50 to 14 last Thursday.

Under existing law, there is a duty of 1 cent a pound on the metallic content of ore containing more than 30 per cent of metallic manganese, ore with less content entering duty free. The Oddie amendment would tax the metallic content of ore carrying more than 10 per cent of metallic content.

Last year 756,178 long tons of dutiable ore were imported, valued at $6,707,218, and a duty of $6,007,216 was collected. In the same year, according to tariff commission experts, some 15,000 tons of manganese below 30 per cent content was imported duty free.

The experts figure that under the Oddie amendment this 15,000 tons of manganese would pay a duty of about $336,000, which, added to the $6,007,142, would mean a total revenue of $6,342,142 from the manganese tariff, if importation continued as in 1928.

In all, the experts assert, about 5 per cent more revenue will be added, whereas had the Senate adopted a graduated scale amendment which Mr. Oddie originally proposed the added revenue would have been about 50 per cent of the 1928 duties.

Imports in Last Six Years.

Imports of manganese in the last six years were:

Manganese

Year.	Content.	Value.	Duty.
1925	251,196	4,691,417	4,778,523
1926	301,280	4,464,240	4,128,000
1927	307,680	4,554,240	4,625,560
1928	309,177	4,120,692	4,638,210
1928	268,176	4,767,219	6,007,142

Year.	Long Tons.	Year.	Long Tons.
1925	60,324	1929	45,000

The Senate's decision to tax manganese instead of putting it on the free list as the Finance Committee urged came after a fight which began last Summer.

The steel industry, which uses 90 per cent of the imports, argued that the domestic production was low grade in quality and limited in supply. The hemp producers insisted that they could soon meet the nation's annual requirements if protection was retained, even though it was not needed.

Manganese is essential to steel production. As a result of the World War, when foreign supplies were unavailable, American production was stimulated so much that the home mines produced 305,869 tons in 1918, compared with an average of 2,612 for 1910-14.

Duty Imposed in 1922.

Encouraged by this, Congress, desiring to encourage the home industry, removed manganese from the free list and imposed a duty against it in 1922, when the Fordney-McCumber law was passed. This duty still obtains.

The steel industry, in opposing a duty, is supported to an extent by the Tariff Commission's findings. The commission says that, with the exception of the war years, domestic output has been "only a small fraction" of the American requirements. It further says that about one-third of the home production is chemical, or low grade, ore which does not compete with the foreign. Many, according to Senator Bratton of New Mexico, a supporter of the Oddie amendment, the production containing from 10 to 30 per cent metallic content in 1927 was 124 long tons; that bearing between 5 and 10 per cent of metallic content was 1,327,000 tons.

The world production from 1923 to 1928, both inclusive, was 2,655,049 long tons. Of this quantity, India supplied 841,338 tons, Russia 773,870 tons, the Gold Coast 287,973 tons and Brazil 242,937 tons.

Soviet Russia is the chief exporter to the United States, with Brazil, British India and the Gold Coast supplying the rest of that manganese brought in.

"Due to favorable natural conditions, one-half to two-thirds of the world's supply of manganese is furnished by the Gold Coast of West Africa and British India at relatively low cost," the Tariff Commission states. "The remainder of the world's needs can be supplied either by Russia or Brazil."

Domestic Supply Inadequate.

In the United States the developed deposits of high-grade ore are not sufficient to meet the requirement of the domestic steel industry. Discoveries have tended to increase domestic productive ability, but, unless further discoveries are made, the prospect for a larger domestic industry rests mainly upon the application of modern methods to the utilization of large resources in the form of low and medium grade ores.

Domestic interests operate, with forty companies and 216 deposits, in thirty-two of the forty-eight States. Montana is the chief producer, but there are operations in Georgia, Minnesota, Virginia and in several States in the West and in the Appalachian chain.

The American producers insist that they will be able to meet the demand and say that they pay $2,000,000 to American miners and $4,000,000 to the railroads.

They point out also that President Hoover told Colorado people in a Pueblo speech last November that manganese depended on protection.

Senator Bratton asserts that in New Mexico alone there is sufficient manganese to supply an annual consumption of between 700,000 and 800,000 tons for twenty-five years. Westerners, such as Senators Bratton, Ashurst, Pittman and others, hold that the "steel trust" is trying to stifle the American industry because the "trust" can buy manganese cheaply abroad.

Called an "Enormous Subsidy."

One of the witnesses for steel companies told the Finance Committee at its hearings on the tariff bill that a duty of $45,771,000, paid in the last six years, was "an enormous subsidy" to the Americans, in view of the fact that their total product was valued at only $2,972,000.

This witness stated that while the American production in 1928 was only 561,000 tons, the duty paid on imports was $6,007,142. He said that the average home production was only 34,813 tons, against a requirement of 600,196 tons.

Headed by the American Manganese Producers Association, the domestic industry asserted that millions of dollars had been invested after the application of the duty against foreign manganese in 1922. In Georgia alone a production of 20,000 tons last year would expand to 120,000 tons next year, through improved processes, it was asserted.

URGES TARIFF ACTION SOON.

Edgerton Says Senate's Delay Is Imperiling Business.

Further delay in action on the tariff bill will "seriously imperil business operations in every part of the country," John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said in a statement made public yesterday.

"Failure of the present Congress to enact a tariff bill in accordance with the President's call for the extraordinary session, or, more properly, the strangulation of the whole Congress by a handful of willful obstructionists in one branch of Congress," Mr. Edgerton said, "has contributed more than anything else, in my opinion, to stifle business conditions throughout the country."

Although the effect of the uncertain tariff situation on consumer buying is not definitely known, he added, "it is easily conceivable that if Congress is permitted to pass a tariff bill and end the uncertainties incidental thereto, the restored confidence would do more than offset the disruptions of temporary speculation" in the stock market.

Views the Tariff as Basic.

Saying that the tariff "has been continuously the determinant of our economic status" and the protection of the wage standards of the United States, Mr. Edgerton continued:

"Yet a coalition of approximately fifty men within the Senate are spurning up the business movement of the nation while they dissent themselves in political games. Industry and commerce are now in many instances unable to conclude sales and even many programs of development are writing or threatened with abandonment, while party politics, the politics, personal politics and sectional politics are manoeuvering for this or that advantage, or to avenge this or that defeat, or embarrass this or that political personality."

Saying that "general depression in business public" if industrial wage standards are not maintained, he added:

"The House of Representatives has performed its duty. Why cannot the Senate act or frankly acknowledge its incapacity to legislate and let the country know the conditions to which our skewed economic machine must adjust itself to move forward?"

The action of Congress, Mr. Edgerton said, has furnished an argument for the establishment of a more fully empowered Presidential Tariff Commission, under which "there would be little occasion for Congress to stay politics with the tariff as there now is for it to play politics with transportation," controlled, as the latter is, by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

For Presidential Action.

"The common sense of the nation can see no reason why the tariff cannot be as effectively removed from the field of political manipulation as transportation has been," Mr. Edgerton continued. "As long as Congress itself shows its utter inability to relieve the necessities of the situation, can it reasonably demand that the power with the aid of the Tariff Commission will make a greater success of it than it has?

"President Hoover has correctly interpreted the majority sentiment of this country for an improved and a flexible tariff administration. His insistence upon early action and upon the retention of the flexible provisions of the House bill expresses undoubtedly the dispassionate business judgment of this country.

"If the rates finally agreed upon do not meet the situation in any instance, and if there is a functioning Tariff Commission created in accordance with the specifications of the House bill, then there will be nothing to fear, for rates can be adjusted in a practical common-sense way without an extra session of Congress. This is undoubtedly the wish of a nation that is growing more and more weary of politics."

DESSAU, Germany, Nov. 10 (AP).—Three persons were killed and three seriously injured today when a Magdeburg-Leipzig passenger train ran through a closed switch at Dessau station and was in collision with a standing freight train. A fourth death resulted from the accident when the passenger train's engineer, blamed for the wreck, hanged himself.

TREACHEROUS ICE BALKED M'ALPINE

AGAIN DOWN TO LAST FISH

FINAL DASH AT 27° BELOW

Frost Nipped Faces and Feet in Race to Safety—Eskimo Woman Took Baby Through Chill Waters.

This is the third instalment of the adventures of Colonel C. D. H. McAlpine's aerial prospecting party lost in the Arctic for two months. Yesterday Richard Pearce, the party's chronicler, told how the eight men, guided by Eskimos, fought their way over ice and snow to Kent Peninsula, across Dease Strait from the trading post of Cambridge Bay, and rested awaiting cold weather so the water would freeze for the crossing of the strait.

BATHURST INLET, Above Arctic Circle, Northwest Territory, Canada, Nov. 10.—On Oct. 26 we started on our trek across the treacherous Dease Strait to the trading post at Cambridge Bay. Breakfast came at 5 o'clock and then we were off. The traveling was difficult, but one of the Eskimos said we would reach the other side in three hours.

Suddenly, to our consternation and apparently to that of the Eskimos as well, we ran into a lead of water. A hurried consultation took place among our guides and we started along the water looking for some place to cross.

There was none, but soon an ice floe, 100 yards wide, was noticed to be moving, showing that the strait was breaking up again. It was a crushed party that journeyed back to shore, the two miles or so that had taken nearly three hours to cover.

Igloos were rebuilt and hope was held of colder weather that night to close up the leads. Instead it turned warmer. The temperature rose to above zero, and a wind blew strongly all night.

Hills Hide Flares From Post.

That evening flares were set off on the top of a high hill on the chance that some one on the Cambridge side of the strait would notice them and help be sent out. We found out later that Eskimos 180 miles away had seen the flares, but that the people at Cambridge were unable to do so, as that settlement is surrounded on three sides by high hills.

The food question again became acute on Oct. 27. All the frozen fresh fish were gone by that time and there was nothing left but dried herring and whitefish. That the Eskimos had expected no difficulty in making the crossing is indicated by the fact that no tea, coffee, flour or oatmeal had been saved.

Eskimo Smiles Disappear.

There was a long conference that morning in our igloo and for the first time since we met them, the Eskimos had lost their smiles. Two of them started off late in the afternoon for Dease Point, intending to travel all night and expecting to be back in two days. Colder weather would by then close up the straits again.

Oct. 28 gave us little comfort in the way of weather. The wind continued and the ice moved until there were open stretches two to three miles wide separating us from Cambridge Bay.

Much of the ice which had been there a few days previously had moved down the coast and it looked as though it would take a long time to repair the damage. Although the day seemed comparatively mild, it was raw in the igloo; so we spent our time in our sleeping bags until the Eskimos warned us we had better get up, as the continued heat was causing us to perspire.

Down to a Few Raw Fish.

So we had to get up and were even more miserable. The old order of staying in bed until noon that had reigned at Dease Point, so as to cut down on food requirements, again went into effect. But it was a long wait until the two Eskimos, Charlie and Jimmie, returned about 6 A. M. on Nov. 1.

By that time our food supply had dwindled to almost nothing. Our fuel had run out and there was no way of heating the only food left—frozen herring. It was a question of eat the fish raw or not eat at all. And we had to eat.

Joe, another of the Eskimos, had gone for seal blubber, but there was not enough of it to use for fuel. It did, however, give off a dull light, but that was little comfort to us who wanted cooked food.

The Eskimos offered us blubber, but one trial convinced those of our party who tried it that blubber requires an acquired taste, and we had not that got to the stage where we could stand it. Two four-gallon tins of it were alongside my head all night and the odor alone was nauseating.

At this time the total food supply for the party, humans and dogs, was twelve pounds of herring and the skins of perhaps a dozen or more others.

When Charlie and Jimmie got back they ushered in another reversal of conditions. They brought fish, ptarmigans, ground squirrel, flour, sugar, coffee and tobacco. It did not take long for the Eskimo women to make bannock and, though it was cooked with seal oil, it tasted wonderfully good to us. And the tobacco was an unhoped-for treat.

The Eskimos told us that on Oct. 27 the Eskimos who had stayed behind at Dease Point had heard a plane but could not see it. No better news could have been brought us as it showed that a search was being carried on and that prospects were good for our being picked up at any time.

Efforts to persuade the Eskimos to start for the post on Nov. 1 were not successful, though from all appearance the straits had closed up again. Another suggestion, that one of their number take a note to the post, was refused. They said the dogs were to be spent on feeding up and it was out.

The morale of the whole party rose to a high point again late that afternoon when it was announced that we were to start in the morning for Cambridge Bay. It was twelve days since we had left Dease Point, days during which patience was tried to the limit. If there had been any encouragement from the heads of our party, other members no doubt would have tried to make the crossing.

Diary's Record of the Crossing.

For the actual crossing of the straits, which I feel sure was the most momentous part of our whole experience, quotations are taken verbatim from my diary, as follows:

"Saturday, Nov. 2.—Had a wonderful breakfast of three cups of tea, a half bannock and a big slice of boiled Barren Land trout. The hour approaches. I hope, when we spend the night at Cambridge Bay post."

The following was written that night:

"What a tough day, hour after hour trying to pick a course through a large ice floe, wandering this way and that for the best going. Sleds were tugged and pushed over ice hummocks that seemed to us unlimited as impossible to cross.

"And there was the scrambling out of the way as we tumbled into holes between ice cakes. It was all nerve-racking and oh, so tiring. Narrow leads of unsafe ice had to be crossed, but before doing so the Eskimos tested them with spears.

"Alice, wife of the Eskimo with whom McAlpine, Baker and I were traveling, took her boy, 3 years old, after he had been tossed from the sled several times, stripped him naked and tied him on her back under her clothing. This did not stop her from continuing a man's share of the work of urging on the dogs and helping tug the sled over the most difficult spots.

"Crossing a weak spot of ice, apparently frozen only on the night before, Alice broke through to her knees. Instead of trying to scramble out and probably sinking deeper, she lay flat and one of the Eskimos rescued her.

"On we went for a quarter mile. Then Alice stripped off her clothing and changed into dry clothing out in the open without any apparent great discomfort, even though the temperature was well below zero.

"The experience might have been tragic to one of us whites, but Alice whom redressed, calmly rolled and lit a cigarette and carried on as before.

Forced to Await Thicker Ice.

"At 4 P. M. we struck thin ice, which the Eskimos could find no way to cross. It was then a matter of parking for the night on the ice, hoping that in the morning the ice would thicken and become safe going.

"Some of the party were fearful that the strong wind then blowing would carry the floe down the straits and perhaps break it up. The Eskimos assured us that the wind would die down during the night. The Colonel, Bob Baker, and I crawled into our sleeping bags and I doubt that I was ever more tired in all my life. I had to be awakened between cups of tea.

"The Colonel was in agony from chafed feet. But never a complaint from him.

"As the Eskimos are still up, an opportunity is given to bring up the diary, but we are getting near the post and Sunday should see us there unless we run into more grief.

"The Colonel just told Bob that he had a hunch our fortunes were going to switch tomorrow. Our bad luck had passed and better things were in store for us. Then no more of trying to keep up this record with half-frozen fingers in the away-below-freezing temperature.

"An igloo is being built with a sweeping wind searching us to the marrow. The Colonel and I are unable to do much except a little chinking and a few other minor things such as trying to move snow blocks into position for Jack to work.

"As Bob is skilled in that Jack prefers his assistance to any the Colonel and I can offer, but we had to do something to keep warm, so the Colonel and I helped hold a tarpaulin on the top of the igloo, while Jack covered the edges with small snow blocks.

"My frozen moccasins slipped in the dark and I crashed in a part of the house. Jack flew up for a few seconds at my clumsiness, but cut new blocks, and we were eventually settled for the night."

Swift Cold Race Across the Ice.

For the final day of the trip to Cambridge the diary is also quoted as follows:

"Night of nights, we are at Cambridge Bay. Messages have gone out to our families, and we can go to bed in peace, but what a day!

"It started at 6 A. M., with a very scanty breakfast and then a race across thin ice. The Colonel, who was in apparent great discomfort, got a ride part way over the first five-mile stretch, but the rest of us had to run, dodging the dark green spots in the ice that one could see wavering under the man ahead.

"Dogs were urged by word and lash to keep moving and we had to keep up, knowing that if anything happened to one of us, there would be real danger in the other stopping to try to help. My second wind passed by without recognition, and I was running on my fifth about the second mile. How we kept going I don't know, except that we had to.

"By the time we got on safe ice it was early. Our legs were tired, sore and chapped, and the bitter wind, combined with 27 below zero temperature, bit into our lungs.

"Even with the strenuous exercise, faces and fingers were frost bitten. The thin ice had a layer of salty slush on it which worked into our footwear and in no time moccasins, duffles and socks were frozen together.

Frostbitten From Nose to Toes.

"Poor Dan Cat see his face as he struggles along with feet frostbitten from the day before. As we traveled, one member of the party cried to another, a hurried search was made for frostbitten features. 'Your chin or 'your nose is frozen' would be heard. Most times any nose was thawed out during the day.

"My personal casualty list for the day was: Six finger tips, ten toe tips, both cheeks, chin and nose frostbitten. This was probably an average for the rest of the party, excepting Dan, who was worst hit.

"We had twelve miles to go, but we must have traveled at least thirty, dodging around the bad spots the best going. Just when we needed rest most, the dogs played out and it became a question of a continual walk, or trot, as the going permitted.

"None of us will ever forget Nov. 3, 1929. We had every reason to remember it miles away from Cambridge Bay. Those miles seemed extra long. We could see what looked like a beacon post for ships."

BYRD'S SLEDGERS END 400-MILE TREK

TELL OF SHAKING TERRAIN

Say They Had No Time for Fear as Undermined Surface Rumbled Under Foot.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Nov. 10.—Four grimy-faced and bewhiskered men came up the slope to the camp yesterday, having traveled more than 400 miles on the Barrier and having twice crossed an area of crevasses, holes and haycocks so dangerous that it echoed beneath their feet and roared and growled around them while they slept.

They were the members of the southern supporting party, Arthur Walden, leader; Joe De Ganahl, navigator, and Christopher Braathen and Jacob Bursey, dog drivers. They were a little thinner than when they left, but they were in perfect condition.

Walden's grizzled gray whiskers made him appear even more the trail veteran that he is. Braathen's beard curled in every direction and the faces of Bursey and De Ganahl were burned by the sun and on one of Joe's cheeks was a round blistered spot where he had been frozen.

Byrd Praises Heroic Effort.

Commander Byrd was greatly pleased with their work and their safe return.

"They had cold, difficult going, he said, "but they made not an excuse or a complaint and carried out their orders exactly to the letter and did even better by leaving 200 pounds more food at the advanced base than we thought possible.

"They carried the 'message to Garcia.' This enthusiastic effort the men are making in the name of geology will be more than justified if the advanced geological party reaches the great mountains where they can obtain information that will help solve the mystery of this great continent."

The men were glad to unharness their dogs and get inside.

"It was a great trip," they all said, "although traveling over the Barrier is about the most monotonous work in the world. But we had enough thrills in the crevasses to make up for all the dull days."

They were all hungry after their last day's march of forty-two miles, although they said the trail rations were perfect. "I never had such good food on the trail," said Walden, "but I want a cup of sweet tea and I want it now."

No Time for Getting Scared.

Everything went well until they reached the crevasses, the centre of which was Latitute 81:12 south. There they ran into a condition which even yet they are finding difficulty in describing, because it so far surpassed anything they expected.

Walking over a surface which shook under them, crossing wide crevasses only a few feet from places where the bridge had fallen in, camping at night where their bags dropped under them, the ice shook and there was a continual thunderous rumbling sound of titanic pressure—it was an awesome experience.

They didn't have time to get scared while going through, but at least two of them admitted to a shudder a little bit when they had passed and looked back at the treacherous and honeycombed area through which they had found their way.

"We were busy keeping out of trouble on the way through," De Ganahl said, 'our wits working all the time, turning sharply first to one side and then the other along the edge of wide cuts, but when it was all over I don't think there is one of us who wouldn't admit to being thankful that it was over.

"It made me think of the Bad Lands of the Dakotas in ice or the breaking edge of a glacier," said Walden, who, despite his fifty-eight years, came in as fresh as a daisy.

The high ridge of pressure ice and crevasses was forced up at least 150 feet, forming a long serrated line against the horizon when they reached it. It seemed an insuperable obstacle. As far as they could see, it stretched to the east and west.

Their first indication of the nature of the surface to the north was a series of filled-in crevasses and large holes, apparently left by collapsed haycocks. They came to the conclusion as they went on that there was a definite evolution of formations caused by the Barrier sliding over land far beneath.

On the southern side are open crevasses and large holes, in the centre of the area are countless crevasses, some bridge and others open; haycocks and enormous holes, some of them covered by a rimy layer of snow and others yawning blue and black. And north of the region the ice, apparently seeking equilibrium and readjustment, settles down and the holes and crevasses fill up with concave snow bridges, most of which can be crossed with safety.

They reconnoitred the front of the broken hillside on skis at first, roped together, tried it east, west and south, and found holes and hillocks everywhere. These hillocks cover deep, round holes in the Barrier, generally linked up with crevasses.

They picked out a place to go through and had traveled only a little way when crevasses, many of them twelve feet wide or more, and many open holes, blue at the top and growing blacker and blacker as they went down, forced them to the right.

In a short time they found themselves completely blocked, a huge open crevasse in front, a maze of holes as if in a Swiss cheese on one side and the treacherous haycocks on the other. Here they turned and retraced their steps, being forced to go up on the side of two haycocks to turn the teams.

Intricate Roping of the Men.

They were roped together ingeniously. The safety ropes on the men ran back from Bursey at the front of his sledge to a radio pole lashed across the rear end of the sled and sticking out on the side on which the men were traveling on their skis.

It was fastened there with a light piece of cord which was attached to De Ganahl, who was at the rear of the sled, and then out again to the end of the bamboo where it was lashed with a long string. From there it ran back to the end of a bamboo on Walden's sled and with similar light lashings ran into Walden and out again and then back to Braathen.

In this way the line was carried by the bamboos so it did not fire the men, and if a man fell through, the light lashings would break.

The sledges were lashed so that a rope running from the rear of the first went back to the line on which the dogs are harnessed to the second sledge, a similar rope being fastened between the two rear sledges.

This system of lashing provided a separate system for sledges and men. When the dogs went in, as they did frequently, they were hauled out by the gang line, and, if they were on the second or third sledge they were pulled out by the other sledges going ahead.

Camp Amid Huge Ice Blocks.

After backing out of their first impasse, they camped for the night north of the ridge of pressure. It was not like ordinary pressure; more as if the Barrier itself had been sliced into tremendous blocks and tossed about, some huge blocks being forced up like monoliths fifty feet into the air. It was awe-inspiring, this vast convulsion of nature.

That night was not one of rest. The Barrier boomed hollowly under them and at times they seemed to feel the snow on which they were lying sink down, while growls and cracks were all around them.

They were glad when it was time to move on again. This morning they went ahead on skis to find a way through and headed more to the east. Everywhere the upheaved and towering ice masses loomed above them except in one spot, where through a narrow valley they could see the smooth Barrier beyond.

This seemed a possible entrance and they got the teams and went in, feeling their way between crevasses, haycocks and open holes, zigzagging all the time.

Feel Way Round Vast Cavern.

The valley stretched ahead of them smooth and inviting, but suddenly it rang hollow. They halted and tapped it. Everywhere it seemed a wide level roof of snow over some cavern, the extent of which taxed their imagination.

They felt their way around the edge of it, hardly believing that it could be so large. It was, as they said, "as big as a city block." This whole covering sheet was apparently held up by snow pillars somewhere, or perhaps walls between tremendously wide crevasses.

They worked their way around the western edge of it, dodging between haycocks, taking their sledges over narrow ledges running between deep chasms and holes, frequently on a slope from which they might have slipped into the depths below them.

Once two open crevasses came together before them in the shape of an arrow and on one point where it was bridged by snow they went across gingerly with holes on either side.

Many of these crevasses and even some of the holes, fifty or a hundred feet wide, were covered with a thin film of snow with a crack in it through which they could look from the side at the black caves underneath.

Fortunately they had sunlight and could avoid these traps large enough to have swallowed the whole caravan.

Got Out Just Ahead of Fog.

Once through this valley, they came out on the level Barrier again, although even here it was badly crevassed. They camped that night in the midst of the crevasses which extended fifteen miles south of the five-mile ridge of pressure, and all night it growled and cracked under them at intervals of less than a minute.

"It had hard metallic sound," Walden said, "as if some one were dropping sheets of steel on the floor. It was continual but, strangely enough, on the way home we did not hear a sound."

They had used seventy flags in two and a quarter miles going through this region, no winding was the trail, and every one believed in each of reliefs when they finally emerged.

They turned back to look at it and, even as they did so, fog began to form and in ten minutes the whole area was blotted out. If they had waited a day longer they could not have gone through.

"It was one of the most spectacular sights of the whole trip to see that veil of fog settle down and shut out that awful mess of broken ice," Walden said.

The rest of their trip was fairly easy. They reached 81 degrees, 45 minutes south and laid down their last depot and then started back with light sledges.

They did not suffer greatly, although two of them had wet sleeping bags and did not get a comfortable night's sleep. Otherwise they fared well due to the good clothing and plenty of food.

They had some cold temperatures for the trail, 38 below zero at times going out and 25 below on a few days coming back. They spoke mostly of the monotony of the Barrier after getting through the pressure ice each time, due to the reaction from the excitement of dodging danger.

McALPINE READY TO FLY.

Party Plans Return Within Day as Blizzard Clears.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10 (Canadian Press).—The McAlpine party of eight flying explorers with their four rescue planes under command of Captain Guy S. Blanchet are expected to take off from Bathurst Inlet within a day or so, according to information received here tonight.

On Saturday a wireless report was received by A. M. Narraway, head of the Aerial Surveys Division and Assistant Surveyor General, saying that a blizzard of considerable intensity was sweeping the barrens about Bathurst and that the temperature had sunk to 21 below.

Tonight, however, Captain Blanchet reported that a southwest wind of moderate intensity was blowing. The temperature was -t 20 below and officials here concluded that the weather was clearing.

The first jump, it is understood, will be made to Baker Lake, 450 miles east of Bathurst.

RIORDANBANKSOUND BRODERICK REPORTS

burial of suicides in consecrated ground, Dr. Norris was officially reporting that Mr. Riordan was of unsound mind when he shot himself. The death certificate filed by the Chief Medical Examiner attributed the banker's death to "a gunshot wound in the brain and head, self-inflicted while he was in a condition of temporary insanity."

Dr. Norris had not treated Mr. Riordan prior to his death. He first saw the dead man at 7:20 P. M. on Friday. The body of the banker had been found, slumped in a chair in his bedroom, at 5:50 P. M. The discovery was made by J. P. Geagan, a brother-in-law of Mr. Riordan and a director of the trust company. Mr. Geagan and his wife occupy a floor in the Riordan home.

The medical examiner's theory of insanity, he admitted, was based on conversations he had had with Dr. James Clarke and Dr. Raymond P. Sullivan. Dr. Clark had been treating the banker during the two weeks preceding his death for an extreme nervous condition, bordering on melancholia. Dr. Sullivan, a prominent surgeon who has attended Governor Smith, was called in when the body was found.

"I arrived at that conclusion," said Dr. Norris, "after considering all the facts available to me. All of his friends to whom I had talked and his attending physicians, Dr. Clark and Dr. Sullivan, reported to me that Mr. Riordan had been terribly depressed for a period of about two weeks.

"The physicians said they feared that he had been on the verge of a complete mental and physical breakdown. At no time did I glean any information that would explain his mental condition. That he may have lost heavily in Wall Street may account for it, but I do not know that to be a fact, for it only an assumption on my part as I was told nothing about his private or business affairs."

The dispensation to permit burial in Calvary Cemetery tomorrow was granted by Bishop John J. Dunn, acting in the absence abroad of Cardinal Hayes. It was issued on the application of the Rev. Patrick Drain, rector of St. Bernard's Roman Catholic Church, of which Mr. Riordan was a parishioner. The application declared that Mr. Riordan had committed suicide while of unsound mind. The church prohibition does not apply against persons who take their lives while insane.

Mass to Be Said Tomorrow.

The solemn high mass of requiem for the dead banker will be said at 11 A. M. tomorrow in St. Bernard's, which is in West Fourteenth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues. It is probable that there will be no honorary pallbearers, although a final decision on that was left until today. The wishes of the family are that the funeral be private.

Throughout yesterday a stream of persons called at the home to view the body. Hundreds of floral pieces were delivered and messages of condolence poured in on the family, which consists of two daughters, Elizabeth and Florence; two sons, James and Robert, and two sisters, Mrs. Geagan and Mrs. John J. Murray.

Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt were among the callers. They were followed shortly after by Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, who remained in the house fifteen minutes. During the afternoon the lines of automobiles on both sides of the street extended virtually from Fifth to Sixth Avenues. Among those who called at the home last night were former Governor and Mrs. Smith and Alfred E. Smith Jr. John F. Gilchrist, chairman of the Transit Commission; Public Service Commissioner George R. Van Namee, William F. Mooney and his brother, E. J. Mooney, and Daniel J. Mooney. Mr. Riordan's attorney.

SHEARER'S SPONSOR REPORTED RETIRING

F. P. Palen Said to Be Resigning Soon From Newport News Shipbuilding Company.

NAVAL CONTRACTS IN ISSUE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The Chicago Tribune today received the following dispatch from its Washington correspondent:

"F. P. Palen, the official primarily responsible for the employment of William B. Shearer as a shipbuilding lobbyist at the Geneva Naval Conference in 1927, is slated to retire shortly from the vice presidency of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, according to reports now current in New York and Newport News as well as Washington.

"The reports of Palen's impending retirement apparently confirm predictions freely made following his appearance before the Senate Shearer investigating committee on Sept. 24, when this official defended Shearer's activities as 'an observer' and readily admitted it was he who first suggested that the navy send a publicist be sent abroad to represent three shipbuilding companies—his own, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation and the New York Shipbuilding Company.

"Sources close to the administration have reasoned that, inasmuch as Henry M. Robinson, California banker and one of President Hoover's closest advisers, is chairman of the Newport News company's board, Palen would be the first of the shipbuilding executives to feel the axe if any moves were made in the shipbuilding industry to 'clean house' in accordance with the indicated desire of President Hoover when he formally denounced Shearer's activities abroad.

Pending Contracts Seen as Factor.

"Aside from the embarrassment to Robinson as the President's friend, if Palen were retained, it has been pointed out that desirable naval building contracts are to be advertised in the near future, upon which the Newport News Company naturally would bid.

"Reports that Palen will be allowed to resign from the Newport News Company followed hard on the heels of published newspaper articles representing the administration as considering withholding future contracts from the three shipbuilding companies which employed Shearer.

"By taking an affirmative action in advance of the advertisement of the forthcoming aircraft carrier and cruiser construction contracts, the Newport News Company apparently would be making a bid for removal of the implied 'blacklist.'

Resignations of other officials in the other companies involved in the Shearer incident would not be surprising to official Washington, as it is assumed the administration's displeasure over the part played by the shipbuilders in sending Shearer to Geneva is equally well known to them.

Confirmation Is Sought.

"Attempts to confirm Palen's retirement in Washington, Newport News, New York and Hot Springs, Ark., have not been completed.

"At Newport News, home of F. R. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, there was a refusal to confirm or deny reports that Palen was to retire shortly. Mr. Ferguson, who declared to the Senate investigation committee that he was not consulted by Palen when Shearer was employed and knew nothing of the latter's activity until Shearer's return from Geneva, intimated that a statement regarding Palen's future connection with the company might be given out at a later date.

"'Mr. Palen has not left the company's employ,' Mr. Ferguson said. 'He will return from Hot Springs on Nov. 20 to go on a shooting expedition at the same club of which I am a member. I may have a statement to make later, but I have nothing to say now.'"

Committee May Resume Hearings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Senate committee investigating the activities of William B. Shearer may resume its sessions before the end of the present special session, according to Senator Shortridge of California, chairman of the committee. It has planned to hear two witnesses, including Dr. W. J. Maloney of New York.

Dr. Maloney is the author of a skit published in 1921, which, it is declared, formed the basis of the alleged "secret British document" presented to the committee by Mr. Shearer. The latter said he was informed that Sir William Wiseman, formerly of the British Secret Service, was the author of the document.

The plans of the committee are now in abeyance owing to the absence of Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic Senate leader, a member of the committee. When he returns in the next few days the committee will meet and then determine whether to hold a hearing in the remaining three weeks of the special session or take a recess until some time in December.

3 HURT IN BARGE BLAST; BRIDGE SET AFIRE

Three men were seriously injured yesterday afternoon in an explosion on a gasoline-laden barge tied up in the Hackensack River at Secaucus, and the barge, cut adrift, set a lake of flame to raging on the surface of the river, set fire to the bridge connecting Secaucus and Carlstadt and tied up traffic for hours. The damage was unofficially estimated at $100,000.

The barge, a motor-driven craft, was one of four owned by the Warner-Quinlan Company tied up at the dock of the Clinton Asphalt Company near the Paterson Plank Road in Secaucus. On it at the time of the explosion were Captain Frederick Kirk of 172 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn, and George Mahl, a deckhand, of 339 East Nineteenth Street, New York. Winfred Derby of 83 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, an employe of the asphalt company, had just stepped aboard it for a drink of water.

When the gasoline exploded Derby was thrown thirty feet onto the shore. Kirk and Mahl both were hurled into the water. A half dozen employes of the asphalt company waded and swam to them, while another man rowed out in a boat, and together they brought the injured men to shore. The three were taken in a serious condition to the North Hudson Hospital at Weehawken.

Meanwhile employes of the asphalt company, fearing that the fire would spread to the other three barges, cut the burning barge adrift. The wind and tide carried it 800 yards north to the old white bridge between Secaucus and Carlstadt. There the barge caught in the piling under the east end of the bridge.

Gasoline, gushing from the barge, covered the river and for an area nearly half a mile in diameter pillars of fire rose. Boathouses on the river front caught fire. The flames rose fifty feet from the barge itself. The shack from which the drawbridge was operated was directly over the flames. The bridge tenders were forced to run, and presently the shack itself fell into the river. Two of the piers and much of the surfacing of the bridge caught fire. Telephone cables under the bridge were burned out.

Fire apparatus from Rutherford, East Rutherford, Carlstadt, North Bergen, Union City and Secaucus fought the flames. Meanwhile the bridge was put out of operation and both trolley and automobile traffic was halted until after 8 o'clock last night.

NEW GUATEMALAN ERUPTION

Volcano Santa Maria Believed to Have Opened New Crater.

GUATEMALA CITY, Nov. 10 (AP).—The volcano Santa Maria, which destroyed many lives and much property last week, again was in violent eruption today. Smoke belched from the crater in such clouds as to obscure near-by hamlets.

Loss of life was not expected to be nearly as heavy as last week, when several hundred were killed, for residents have deserted the country for miles around the peak.

The town of El Palmar was again threatened, however. Lava had poured into the beds of the Rivers Tamber and Nima, causing the waters to boil and to overflow the banks.

It was reported that a new crater had opened.

AUSTRIA HOLDS ENGLISHMAN

Dicketts, Said to Be Wanted Here and in Canada, Arrested.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Nov. 10.—Walter Charles Dicketts, an Englishman, said to be wanted by the Ontario police for the embezzlement of $3,000,000, and by American authorities for frauds committed in the United States under the alias of Moreton, was arrested yesterday at Salzburg.

Dicketts is alleged to have fled to Europe, posed at the recent Barcelona Exhibition as the representative of an American firm, the Gladstone Corporation, and obtained credit on that basis. The immediate cause of his arrest at Salzburg was his borrowing small sums from the management of its leading hotel, after which he hurriedly left town. The police of Ontario and Barcelona and American authorities are being communicated with.

FRANCE TO ASK CUTS IN CAPITAL SHIPS

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

they had the entente with England under which in time of crisis she would protect French Atlantic ports while France could concentrate her strength in the Mediterranean. They no longer have any such arrangement with England.

Furthermore, it is contended, while Britain and America added to their fleets during the war, the French did no naval construction then. They are just getting financially to the point where they can afford what they regard as their needs. England is basing her cruiser position on her national needs, America is doing the same thing, so why should not France?

When it comes to placing a limit on their cruiser construction the French immediately bring up a number of considerations. There is the Italian fleet. The French do not accept the thesis of equality with Italy in total tonnage but argue that an arrangement may be possible by separating the French navy into Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets.

Would Consider Spain.

Also bearing in mind their need of preserving communication with Northern Africa, the French say that the Spanish fleet must be taken into consideration since there is always the possibility of an Italian-Spanish combination and since Spain is about to embark on a naval construction program. They also point to Germany's construction of cruisers superior to those permitted under the Washington naval treaty.

When one asks the French if this means that Spain and Germany should be invited to the January conference they reply in the negative but add quickly that the situation shows that the final arrangements must be made in Geneva, where all the interested nations can take part in the discussions.

The French also still insist that there is a connection between naval and land disarmament and to illustrate they say that their most important naval problem is to insure communication between France and Northern Africa, front which they would draw man-power for their army in another war. They say that they must remain in a position to guarantee that line of communication against any possibility of danger. Fast cruisers and submarines, they maintain, are the best weapons for this purpose.

Regard Meeting as Political.

The French insist on regarding the London meeting as political more than anything else. They do not accept the situation as being one in which England and America have merely eliminated their previous disagreement, thus opening the way for definite naval limitation for all the sea powers. They say that the total result, as far as Britain and America together are concerned, will be an increase rather than a reduction of cruiser strength. They argue that the negotiations are dominated by the parity arrangement between England and America, which they call essentially political, and they see no reason why political consideration should be absent from their own program for the meeting.

While recognizing fully that England wishes a settlement in the Mediterranean satisfactory to her interests, the French contend that does not constitute any reason for a sacrifice of French interests. It would thus become apparent that if England refuses to make a cruiser arrangement with America prior to setting the Mediterranean situation to her satisfaction, the naval conference may become much more complicated than is expected in London and Washington.

There is no reason to believe that the French will not be ready to bargain in London. They will bargain, but feeling that this time they are in a much stronger position that at the Washington Naval Conference, they wish to get something politically out of the conference, which they regard as being dominated by political accommodation between America and Britain. If the present government remains in power that long, it is likely that the French delegation will be headed by Premier Tardieu, which would be in keeping with the protocol since the British delegation will be headed by Prime Minister MacDonald. Negotiations will be in the hands of Foreign Minister Briand.

MISS BOOTH SEES HIROHITO.

Received by Japanese Emperor in Tokio Palace.

TOKIO, Monday, Nov. 11 (AP).—Emperor Hirohito, for the first time in history without his Empress by his side, today gave audience to a woman. She was Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States. The rules were suspended because she was regarded as an officer of a "military organization" in the service of humanity.

The commander wore her uniform of the Salvation Army instead of the usual court robes. The Empress was unable to be present because of the recent birth of a daughter.

Police Say Bomb Was Cause of Londonderry Explosion.

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland, Nov. 10 (AP).—An explosion, which the police attributed to a bomb, partly wrecked the Northern Counties Club here this evening.

People who were leaving the churches at the time were greatly alarmed. The windows in neighboring buildings were shattered.

Last Friday a hall for British ex-service men at Inchicore, near Dublin, was blown up. No one was injured.

The hall was being reconstructed after a fire last year. In November and December, 1928, there were several bombings reported in the vicinity of Dublin.

SAYS WE MUST MAKE PACT FOR PEACE LIVE

Smuts of South Africa Calls on America to Pledge Action Against War Aggressors.

SEES DISARMAMENT NEXT

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OXFORD, England, Nov. 10.—In his second Rhodes lecture at Oxford yesterday General Jan Christian Smuts, former Premier of South Africa, said the difficult question of freedom of the seas would be eliminated if the United States would take the next logical step to supplement the Kellogg pact by laying down a procedure whereby the United States would automatically act with the League of Nations against any State violating the Kellogg pact.

General Smuts also is confident that when the United States does make this next move in her leadership toward world peace, there will be an end of the danger of "private wars" among nations.

"The only kind of private war we need to consider," said General Smuts, "is that most flagrant one where the League of Nations has pronounced unanimously against an aggressor and the members of the League, as a matter of public duty, bind themselves together for an economic boycott of the disturber of the peace. Will the United States claim her commercial rights as a neutral in such a case, and insist on the right to supply an aggressor, nullify the boycott and commercially and financially aid the aggressor?"

Attitude Called Impossible.

"It would be an insult to the United States to put such a question gravely. It was most improbable even before the peace pact. It has become starkly impossible after it. There might have been before a claim of abstract right which, however, never would have been exercised in a real emergency. Now, after the Kellogg pact, even the form of abstract right has virtually disappeared.

"You cannot declare a person an enemy of the human race, but when the hue and cry is raised against him proceed to harbor and comfort him. To profit by a publicly declared crime and assist the criminal to escape is to put yourself in pari delecto. And the American conscience is at least as keen and active in these matters as that of other people."

Nevertheless that which he considers "starkly impossible" as a matter of fact he wants made so by some form of convention in which the rest of the world will have that assurance from America."

Says We Can't Stand Still.

"The United States can not afford to leave the matter where it now stands in the peace pact," he continued. "It will have to draw the logical conclusions from its declared policy. Nobody expects it to become a member of the League of Nations or be bound by decisions of the League. But by international convention or otherwise it will have to lay down a procedure by which it will be legally competent, when occasion arises, to take independent action of its own in sympathy with and parallel to the action of the League under Article XVI of the covenant. It could be legally entitled to deny financial or commercial assistance to a disturber of the peace or breaker of the peace pact and until the United States is so entitled the policy of the pact will remain inchoate and ineffective.

"And the League will continue to remain in the dark as to the policy of the United States in any concrete case of aggression in which the League may have to take action in the interests of peace. The cause of peace will be enormously strengthened by clearing up these uncertainties and thus giving notice in advance to intending peace violators of what they have to expect from the United States when trouble arises."

Peace Pact Called First Step.

Although he did not mention them, General Smuts no doubt had in mind some such device as that provided by the Cooper resolutions, which were pigeonholed by the American Senate last Winter.

"The peace pact is only a grand beginning," continued General Smuts, "and unless its implied policy is explicitly rounded off, its full beneficent effect will not be felt. The peace ideal will be realized only when all the great States agree not to furnish financial or other aid to a violator of the peace pact. That will be the end of private war.

"Perhaps the simplest step of all that could be immediately taken to secure world peace would be for the great powers to agree to confer whenever circumstances arise which might seem to threaten peace and to concert measures for the prevention of war. Such a conference with the United States participating would probably prove effective for all practical purposes and render the more elaborate and difficult machinery unnecessary. A similar arrangement already exists in the Pacific pact and it might be given more general application."

Disappointed on Armaments.

Concerning disarmament, General Smuts said that the moves toward it had been so disappointing and the disarmament preparatory commission so largely a failure that the prestige of Geneva had been injured and that because of the importance of Geneva, the initiative in the matter already was passing to other quarters.

"So far America carries the honors in this great cause," added General Smuts. "Largely because of American initiative, naval disarmament has already made very substantial progress and it is to be hoped that when the naval conference meets in London in January it will complete the great work begun in Washington in 1921 and will not only call a definite halt on all of these competitive naval programs, but also initiate materiel all-around reduction of naval armament. In view of that conference and the advanced state of preparations for it, due entirely to the energy and statesmanship of President Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald, it would be a waste of words for me to say more at this time.

One Cause for Optimism.

"With regard to land and air armaments, as bad as the situation undoubtedly is, it is not so hopeless as it looks. League authorities seem to be struck with paralysis and unable to make the least move of any real value. But my feeling is that this state will not continue long.

"There is one great governing fact which is often lost sight of, but which eventually is going to control and revolutionize the apparently stationary disarmament situation. That is the disarmament of Germany. The most powerful nation on the continent of Europe, the greatest military power of yesterday, the greatest potential power of tomorrow, is disarmed while the surrounding nations are armed to the teeth. The situation, inherently impossible, cannot continue long. Either Germany once more will resume the initiative and again outrival her neighbors (and incidentally we all know what that would mean for the world) or all around land and air disarmament will have to take place on a grand scale."

Armament Called Betrayal.

"There is no escape from this dilemma, and within a comparatively short period it will become a very live issue, demanding decision one way or the other. To let Germany re-arm would be an intolerable surrender and betrayal of those who fought for a better world. But if that be thought of, the other alternative becomes absolutely imperative, permitting no indefinite delay. Unless this matter is tackled on similar lines to those of the far less dangerous reparations question and with similar earnestness and determination see the job through, nothing will be done and Europe may continue to drift once more into a grave crisis. Handling the disarmament question may yet become the real touchstone of the League and the sooner its gravity is recognized, the better it will be for world peace."

It is only fair to the League of Nations to say that, despite his criticism of it on disarmament, General Smuts, in the early part of his lecture, paid the League great tribute for its work of substituting world conferences for the old diplomacy. And, concerning Woodrow Wilson and his associates responsible for the League, who had been condemned as impractical visionaries, General Smuts added:

"The time may come when the world will recognize that the authors of the covenant were the only really practical people at the peace conference."

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 10 (AP).—Premier James Henry Scullin today received a message from Sir Douglas Mawson, Australian explorer, saying his ship, the Discovery, arrived at Possession Island last Thursday.

Sir Douglas sailed from Cape Town, South Africa, Oct. 16 last, intending to explore a part of the unknown South Polar continent.

Possession Island is in Lat. 71.50 degrees S., Long. 171.20 degrees E. near the coast of South Victoria Land. It is the spot where Captain J. NOWADAYS I do my own dry cleaning, and safely—with a Duette. I put in gloves, frocks—anything—pour on the non-explosive Duette fluid, and turn the handle a minute or two. And out come my things, spick and span. The Duette can also be used as a washing machine. I use it that way for the baby's things. $14.85. (Duette fluid, gal. $1.75; ½ gal. 95c)

"HMM, this new coffee certainly has flavor," said the Big Chief. And I smiled, for it was the same coffee as usual, only nowadays I store it in a Quik-Seal Jar. Quik-Seals are air-tight—and are specially designed for foods that lose their freshness when exposed to air. They snap-fasten easily. The tops are japanned in blue, green or white. 2 qts. $2.50; 3 qts. $3.00

NOW that outdoors will soon be asleep, I have plants indoors—on sunny window ledges. Window Plant Shelves help there because they add 4" to the width of the ledges. They hook into cleats fastened to the window casing and can be extended to fit windows from 27" to 47" wide. Of bronzed steel. $2.50 each.

THERE was many a protesting squawk from my young ones over hand scrubbing and tooth brushing until the advent of Steppup. He boosts small folk up to the wash basin—which makes cleaning up easy for them. His smiling puppy face forms one end of the stool, his tail makes the handle. Around his middle is oilcloth. He's painted pink. (Light blue, too.) $3.00

I JUST had to have more storage space, and this half-portion White House Kitchen Cabinet fills the bill exactly. It has one drawer, and below, plenty of space for pots and pans. Also, as it's only about 35" high, I use the top as a table. Of white enameled steel, 26" wide, 12" deep. $35.00

MY sister has been dressing up her bathroom. I encouraged her by giving her a Bathroom Hamper. It is painted rose color and is decorated with a genuine old print. It was one of a colorful group in rose, green, yellow and blue—all of them lovely to look at. 18" wide, 24" high. $15.00

I HAVE often sung the praises of my 3 compartment Utility Tray, for this handy little affair saves me endless steps. I can keep my brushes, cloths and polishes together and carry them all about comfortably. Mine is yellow, rimmed with berry red—a cheerful little tray. You can also get them in red, blue or green. $3.00

HEAR BELGIANS PLAN FIGHT ON BANK SITE

FRENCH DELEGATES IN PARIS

They Will Return Today With Views of Tardieu Cabinet—Report Expected Wednesday.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BADEN-BADEN, Nov. 10.—The intention of Belgium to fight at the second Hague conference for a reconsideration of the selection of Basle as the site for the Bank for International Settlements, as announced in dispatches from Brussels, had no official confirmation here.

The Belgians' vexation is understood and sympathized with among the delegates of the Latin countries, but it is generally stated that Brussels could never have been successful in the competition for the bank. The Belgians assert that at one time they had assurances of five to seven votes in their favor, but they say the Germans blocked the poll and by political arguments turned the sentiment against them. Belgium's great desire to obtain the bank is understandable, as, ever since the invasion of 1914, they have been anxious to secure an international institution within their territory, believing that such an institution would serve as a guarantee against the violation of Belgian neutrality in future conflicts. They consider the status of The Hague as a world peace centre was one of the factors that kept Holland out of the war and that Switzerland's neutrality was in great measure due to the numerous international organizations located there. If Belgium could get the bank, they feel it would form a guarantee of security.

But Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief German delegate, stubbornly maintained the position that if the bank was located in Belgium the German people would have the impression that the institution was under the domination of France, and it was the desire to avoid such a reminder of war suspicions that caused most of the delegations to reject the Belgian proposals. It is believed here that the Belgians will have but a slight chance at The Hague of achieving a rehearing of the decision and all are satisfied that the governments will approve Basle as the permanent site for the bank.

Some committee members worked today on the statutes of the charter, but a large number left Baden-Baden, some of whom, being auxiliary experts, will not return. Both the chief French delegates, Clement Moret and Pierre Quesnay, went to Paris, taking news of their diplomatic success concerning the domiciling of the bank at Basle. France, which is ambitious to resume her former importance as a world gold centre, had the strongest reasons for opposing London as the site, but she would have supported Brussels had Germany's attitude been different. Realizing this was impossible, the French concentrated their efforts on Basle and were at last successful, though the compromise with the Germans, who at first favored Zurich, may cost concessions on France's part.

The French delegates will return here tomorrow fully instructed as to the views of the Tardieu Government. The long delay in formation of the French Ministry has been one important reason for the postponement of the decisions here.

It is thought here that the committee, reassembled tomorrow, will make short work of the outstanding problems and that the report can be completed by Wednesday. Whether the report will be made public or kept secret until the second Hague conference apparently depends chiefly upon Chairman Reynolds. Most of the delegates have expressed themselves in favor of publicity, for it is recognized that in the last analysis the decisions taken here are of immense importance to the public, as the money the bank will handle will represent the taxes the people pay and the work they do.

The chairman, however, has ignored the petition of the press for an answer about the publication of the documents and seems, alone among the delegates, to regard the proceedings here and the findings as strictly an affair between the banks and the bankers.

French Welcome Basle Choice.

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—The French press today expressed general satisfaction with the selection of Basle, Switzerland, as the seat of the world bank.

The choice of the frontier city was said by Le Temps to be logical, but the newspaper called attention to the fact that the decision of the committee must be ratified by the various governments at the second Hague Conference, which will probably be held next month.

Le Journal in an editorial said: "We consider the decision a happy one and hope that Belgium will agree in order to avoid discussion which would be vain and dangerous."

SOVIETS TRY 42 OF SECT.

Accuse Voronezh Religious Group of Arson and Counter-Revolution.

VORONEZH, Russia, Nov. 10 (AP).—The trial of forty-two members of a religious sect charged with committing terroristic acts ranging from arson to counter-revolution opened here today. The defendants were divided into two groups, "inspirers" and "executors."

Dimitri Parkhomenko and his colleagues wore immaculate white robes decorated with crucifixes and other religious symbols and chanted hymns as they walked from their cells to the courtroom. To efforts of the public prosecutor to learn of activities of their organization they replied, "I know nothing; God Almighty knows everything."

Portugal Lifts Ban on 86 Officers.

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Cabinet council today authorized the return home of eighty-six officers and non-commissioned officers who were banished to the Azores for participation in a plot against the present dictatorship. Among those included in the amnesty are General Sacardozo, Colonel Costa Pinto and Colonel Helder Ribeiro, who played a leading part in the coup d'état of 1927.

ITALIAN AIR MINISTER PLANS ATLANTIC FLIGHT

ROME, Nov. 10.—General Italo Balbo, Minister of Aeronautics, who two years ago initiated a series of flights over long distances with a large number of seaplanes, is making more ambitious plans for a group flight next year. He plans to lead a group of Italian seaplanes in a flight from Italy to the American continent. The feasibility of the plan is being investigated by a technical committee of the Italian Air Force.

General Balbo plans to fly at the head of a small group, probably a half-dozen seaplanes, specially fitted for the long-distance flight, and he will pilot his plane. He proposes to make the journey by stages, probably via the Canary Islands, Cape Verde, Barbados, Cuba and from there to the United States.

The plan, however, at present is hardly more than an idea, pending the decision of the technical committee.

General Balbo two years ago began the group flying idea, leading a squadron of sixty-four seaplanes on a tour of the Western Mediterranean in a half dozen stages. Last year he led a group of thirty-two seaplanes on a tour of the Eastern Mediterranean as far as the Black Sea. The success of the first two attempts, which was generally considered to be excellent evidence of the efficiency of the Italian Air Force, induced General Balbo to formulate the plan to lead a smaller squadron over a greater distance to America.

MAIL PLANE DOWN ON MEDITERRANEAN

Passengers' Lives Imperiled in Second Algiers-Marseilles Craft —Ships Try to Aid.

PARIS, Nov. 10. (AP).—For the second time within a week a seaplane on the Algiers-Marseilles route was in difficulties today and the lives of passengers were imperiled.

This plane was forced down on the Mediterranean twelve miles north of Minorca, Balleario Islands, at 10:30 A. M. Vessels attempting to rescue the passengers and mail encountered the most difficult conditions with a heavy sea running.

Yesterday passengers of the first plane were landed safely after having tossed on the water in their crippled plane for several hours while relief ships searched for them.

At the Le Bourget Flying Field today it was said that the last week had been the worst for flying in many years. They received reports of forced landings throughout France. The Paris-London service was canceled on Friday and curtailed yesterday and today. Two Americans were slightly injured on Friday in the forced landing of an airplane on the Brussels-Paris route.

BUSES PAY IN WIESBADEN.

Profit Shown After Substitution of Them for Street Cars.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WIESBADEN, Germany, Nov. 10.—An interesting experiment which Wiesbaden was the first large German city to undertake, substituting auto buses for street cars, has proved very satisfactory here.

A report just published for the first six months shows that the net profit was more than $50,000, although the fare is only 15 pfennigs (about 3½ cents), as against the 20 pfennigs charged by the neighboring cities of Frankfort and Mayence. The total length of the omnibus system is about thirty-seven miles.

Colombians Disagree on Envoy.

BOGOTA, Colombia, Nov. 10.—After a seventeen-day debate the Senate has adopted the report of its Committee of Justice declaring that the charges of the lower house against former Minister of War Rengifo are without merit. Referring to the appointment of Señor Rengifo as Minister to Great Britain, the lower house today voted approval of a resolution declaring that he was unworthy to represent the republic before the British Government.

ITALIANS FETE KING, WHO IS SIXTY TODAY

ROYAL PRAYER RENEWED

Supplication, in Abeyance Since 1870, Is Heard Again in Churches —Prince Weds Jan. 8.

ROME, Nov. 10 (AP).—King Victor Emmanuel III, Italy's "soldier King," tomorrow celebrates his sixtieth birthday, and his 40,000,000 subjects will celebrate it with him.

Tonight the public buildings throughout the kingdom were festooned with flags, bunting and strings of electric lights. Rome's ceremonies began today with a review of the capital's garrison, followed by parades of Fascist organizations. In the late afternoon band concerts were given in the public squares, as was the case in the provincial cities.

With the Lateran treaties in operation, today's advance commemoration of the anniversary was participated in by the Catholic Church in Italy in imposing fashion. The prayer "For Victor, Our King," in abeyance ever since the events of 1870, when the forces of Victor Emmanuel II occupied Rome and put an end to the Pope's temporal power, was intoned aloud by the clergy.

The King, rounding out the fifty-ninth year of his life and half way through the twenty-ninth of his reign, will go down in history as the sovereign whose government affected the final solution of the "Roman question" and the resumption of normal relations between his kingdom and the Holy See. This accomplishment alone would be enough to make 1929 a banner year in the history of the royal House of Savoy.

Added to that is the general rejoicing over the engagement and approaching marriage of his only son, Crown Prince Humbert, to Princess Marie José of Belgium, and his heir's escape from a would-be assassin's bullet in Brussels on Oct. 24.

During the past year the King and his family have made two important royal progresses outside continental Italy. One was to the island of Sardinia, from which his ancestors derived their first kingly title, and the other was to Rhodes and other Italian possessions in the Aegean.

His birthday finds King Victor in good health and ready for the round of court duties awaiting him in the Winter season. His Summer and Autumn holidays, spent at San Rossore or farther north in the mountains at Santa Anna di Valdieri, has been interrupted by only a few formal functions, such as the opening of the big art exposition in Venice and the inauguration of monuments to the war dead.

He made a flying trip to Rome late in September to review the Italian ex-combatants who had come to the capital after their annual convention in Naples. While at San Rossore, he received the American transatlantic fliers, Williams and Yancey, and a delegation of the Order of the Sons of Italy from the United States.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10 (AP).—The wedding of Princess Marie José and Crown Prince Humbert of Italy was definitely set today for Jan. 8, the birthday of Queen Elena of Italy.

SOVIET PRESS JEERS BRITISH PROTESTS

DENIES LINK WITH PARTY

Asserts Comintern's Activities Are Not Subject to State Control—Diplomats Divide on Subject.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—The revival of protests in the British House of Commons against alleged Russian propaganda once more has excited the Soviet press, which inveighs angrily against certain implications in the statement of Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Minister. Invsetia says:

"The article in the Anglo-Soviet agreement to which Mr. Henderson referred concerns abstinence of both parties from interference in the other's internal affairs. It is clear that this applies only to the Soviet Government and its organs.

"As regards the Comintern, however, it has been a thousand times demonstrated that this is an international organization of the revolutionary working class on behalf of which the Soviet Government takes no action and for which it can undertake no obligations."

There in a nutshell is the categorical definition of the Soviet attitude on the propaganda question which split such floods of ink in the United States and elsewhere. Whether the Russian Communist party does its fast control both the Soviet Government and the Comintern is a question without bearing upon the strictly legal aspect of the case.

It is a significant fact that none of the many "raids" and "revelations" and "documents" of the last five years have shaken the Soviet position or brought adequate proof that the "Soviet Governments and its organs" are carrying on "propaganda."

Foreign diplomats here with long Russian experience tend to fall into two schools of thought on the subject. One school, including Persians, Turks, Afghans and other subtle Orientals of greater importance but who use greater caution in expressing themselves, accept the Soviet thesis regarding propaganda and therefore they do not hesitate to deal with Communist agitators in vigorous Asiatic fashion. If there are any Soviet objections, they reply, "But did not you tell us the Comintern's activities had nothing to do with you."

The adherents of the other school, whose names it would be invidious to mention, regard the matter from a more philosophical point of view.

"We do not want to split hairs about the responsibility for propaganda," they said. "What interests us is whether the advantages of diplomatic relations with Russia are worth while and whether the said propaganda is really dangerous to our regimes.

"We consider—and otherwise we should not be here—that the diplomatic protection of our nationals and their interests is worth while and we do not let ourselves be over-worried by Communist activities in our countries or colonies. Finally we Continental Europeans have never been able to understand the English habit, apparently inherited by the United States, of making a fuss over a question of principle, seemingly without regard for material facts."

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 10.—The resumption of diplomatic relations between Soviet Russia and Great Britain has been agreed to by the new Australian cabinet.

HELD IN OLIVE OIL FRAUD.

Prominent Portuguese Industrials and Officials Arrested in Lisbon.

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 10 (AP).—A number o prominent industrialists and excise officials of high rank were arrested today as the outcome of a government inquiry into charges that wholesale quantities of olive oil had been adulterated.

The police called the adulteration a gigantic fraud and asserted thousands of gallons of the so-called moonshine product found its way into the retail trade. Large quantities of olive oil were seized, and samples taken to a laboratory for analysis.

The authorities summarily locked up the suspects except two believed to have escaped into Spain. The Commodity Exchange remained closed today.

NEW CODE FOR WORLD HAILED AS PEACE MOVE

Dr. F. B. Smith, Opening World Friendship Session at Nashville, Says 'Revolution' Is in Progress.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 10.—A revolution which has for its purpose the establishing of a new world code and for which "the forces of peace are pressing forward in a way that could hardly have been believed a few years ago" was declared to be in progress by Dr. Fred B. Smith of New York, chairman of the American Division of the World Alliance for International Fellowship, in his address opening the fourteenth annual session of the organization here this afternoon.

Asserting that the League of Nations was not final and that the World Court and the Kellogg pact were not perfect, Dr. Smith said that war would not cease entirely until the moral indignation of the world had been sufficiently aroused to regard it as a crime against humanity and a sin against God.

Dr. Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University, in an impromptu speech, urged his audience to become militant pacifists.

Dr. Bruce E. Payne, president of Peabody College for Teachers, presided over the meeting, which was held in the War Memorial Auditorium erected by the State of Tennessee and the city of Nashville in memory of the State's soldiers. Various student bodies were represented among the 2,000 assembled for the three-day conference.

SEEKS TO REMAIN AT YALE.

Senior Revealed as Married and Father Will See Dean Today.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—The case of Frederick Sanford Shaw, senior at Yale, who married Miss Mildred Meehan of this city secretly in June, has not yet come before the university officials, it was said tonight by Dean Clarence W. Mendell of the academic department.

The secret wedding was revealed yesterday when newspaper men who were looking up an automobile accident found a record of the marriage at the City Hall.

Shaw's father, Judge Shaw of Fairfield County Common Pleas Court, is a Yale graduate and has been State Senator and Representative.

Judge Shaw came here from his home in Redding upon learning of his son's marriage and forgave the couple. He and Mrs. Shaw have met their son's bride, with whom young Shaw has attended social functions since last Winter.

Tomorrow Judge Shaw plans, with his son, to hold a conference with Dean Mendell and ask for permission for the young man to remain in college. Under a rule made two years ago an undergraduate automatically separates himself from the institution upon marriage unless the dean, using his discretion in the case, permits him to stay.

Ismet Pasha Wins Confidence Vote.

CARDINAL HAYES IN TITULAR CHURCH

THRONG ATTENDS SERVICE

Police Have to Clear Way Through Cheering Crowd Outside—Most of American Colony Present.

By ARNALDO CORTESI.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 10.—Cardinal Hayes of New York today made a solemn entry, after several years, absence from Rome, into his titular church, Santa Maria in Via, where he crowned the image of the Blessed Virgin which Romans for centuries have venerated.

The church was crowded to overflowing for the occasion, almost the entire American colony in Rome being represented. An outburst of acclaim filled the church when the Cardinal, at the end of the colorful religious ceremony, placed a golden crown on the head of the image of the Virgin, standing in a niche high above the main altar.

Cardinal Hayes, wearing his full cardinal's robes, arrived at the church by motorcar, followed by his suite. He was greeted at the door by the rector and chapter of his titular church as well as by Mgr. Burke, the rector, Mgr. Breslin, the vice-rector, and Mgr. Kiley, the spiritual director, of the American Ecclesiastical College here. Every one fell to his knees as the Cardinal, after donning ecclesiastical vestments, walked to the high altar, bestowing his blessing right and left as he went. He seated himself on the Archbishop's throne erected to the left of the main altar, from where he presided at the high mass sung by Mgr. Breslin.

After the mass Cardinal Hayes, wearing his Archbishop's mitre of golden brocade studded with jewels and carrying a golden crozier in his hand, mounted the flight of temporary steps placed over the front altar to the niche containing the statue of the Virgin. After raising his hand in blessing he took the golden crown, resting on a red damask cushion presented to him by an attendant, and placed it on the head of the statue to an outcry of "Viva Maria" from the congregation.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted for almost two hours, the whole congregation crowded around Cardinal Hayes as he made his way out of the church in order to kiss his ring. The police were obliged to intervene outside and cut a lane for him to his motorcar through large crowds which, having been unable to gain admittance to the overcrowded church, had waited outside to catch a glimpse of him at his exit. There were cheers and handclaps as he drove off.

NANKING'S FOES GAIN IN FIERCE FIGHTING

NATIONALIST TROOPS REBEL

By HALLETT ABEND.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 10.—While fierce fighting continues in the vicinity of Chengchow and Mihsien, Yen Hsishan apparently is casting the die in favor of the rebels by sending large shipments of ammunition to them from the arsenal of Taiyuan.

In three determined onslaughts yesterday on Chengchow the rebels almost captured this important junction. They are eager for this prize because Tan Sheng-chi sent word that he would join them when they took that city.

Chiang Kai-shek had hurriedly left Chengchow and was proceeding southward to Hsuchow, when he saved the day by recalling two crack divisions from the Mihsien front and rushing them to Chengchow.

Many minor commanders are holding aloof from the fighting at present, awaiting a decisive victory, when they will probably join the winners. Meanwhile the rebel enveloping movement south to the Han River is developing rapidly. From Peking it is reported Yen Hsi-shan has ordered the Thirty-sixth Division to proceed to Shantung to reinforce Tahshew, and the Forty-third Division southward along the Peking-Hankow line to help Shih Chiao-chung. This is believed to mean Yen will either assist the rebel Kuominchun or force the acceptance of himself as mediator.

A brigade of Nanking troops at Wuhu is reported to have mutinied and to be marching overland with the object of capturing Hangchow, which is stripped of defenders.

Though Nanking officially is claiming progress, all foreign observers declare the best the government can hope for is a military stalemate and the collapse of the rebels through lack of money, food and munitions.

UP-STATE FLIER KILLED IN FALL NEAR SCRANTON

Harold Pope, 21, of Newark Valley, Was Doing Stunts at Low Altitude in American Legion Meet

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP).—Harold Pope, 21, of Newark Valley, Tioga County, N. Y., was instantly killed when his airplane crashed in the Mid-Valley Airport, six miles north of here, this afternoon.

Pope was flying at 5,000 to 6,000 feet from the ground when the mishap occurred. He was doing a triple spin and was about to right the plane for the third time when it crashed to the ground, upside down.

Pope had flown to the Mid-Valley Airport yesterday from Binghamton to participate in an air meet sponsored by the American Legion. He has held a pilot's license for about a month, after completing a course at the Binghamton Airport.

ARMISTICE EVENTS SOLEMN IN FRANCE

Americans, Including Pershing, Attend Church Services Marking Occasion.

TOMB OF FOCH VISITED

Highest Officials and Diplomats to Attend Ceremonies at Unknown Soldier's Tomb Today.

PARIS, Nov. 10 (AP).—The anniversary of the armistice of the World War, no longer a merry and frolicking celebration, but one of meditation and prayer, this year is occupying two entire days of observance in France. It began today with solemn and moving ceremonies in churches and cemeteries.

A special service was conducted in the American Pro-Cathedral by Dean Beeckman. General John J. Pershing and Major General William W. Harts, American Chargé d'Affaires Norman Armour, practically the whole staff of the American Embassy, a delegation from the American Legion and prominent members of the American colony in Paris heard the Rev. J. W. Cochran preach at 11 A. M. on "The Peace Gains of the Decade."

The Marshals of France were patrons at a solemn mass in the Church of St. Louis des Invalides after which the tomb of Marshal Foch was visited. Bishop Herscher presided at the ceremony at the Sacred Heart Basilica in Montmartre, to which the American Legion sent a delegation, as did the British Legion and the French War Veterans.

Tomorrow the greatest ceremony is scheduled to be held at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 11 A. M., when President Doumergue will receive the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber, members of the diplomatic corps and high military officials. After a minute of silence, General Henri Gouraud will speak and then an elaborate military procession made up of units from all military, naval and air veterans' associations including the American Legion, will be reviewed by the President of the Republic.

General Pershing tomorrow afternoon will visit the tomb of Marshal Foch. Later he will call on the Marshal's widow and afterward on the war-time Premier, Georges Clemenceau, who has so far recovered from his recent severe illness that he was able to go out yesterday for a brief time.

General Pershing sent a message to the commander of the American Legion to be read on the evening of Armistice day and broadcast throughout the United States. General Pershing will sail for home on the Levinthan next Tuesday.

"Trees of Memory," planted on Armistice Day around the thousands of village monuments to war dead, have inspired a popular movement to replace the depleted forests of France.

The symbolic gesture has been turned to practical use and today thousands of acres are being replanted. The growth of the movement in three years encourages authorities to hope government cooperation will stimulate reforestation to the extent of the 2,500,000 acres needed to make France self-sufficient in her wood supply, for consumption has threatened extinction of forests with ensuing damage to agriculture in many ways.

GIVES WAY TO CHECK WAR.

General Stotesbury Wants Compulsion Extended to Labor and Money.

The "extension of the policy of compulsion not only to the raising of an army but to the raising of laborers and money" as part of a program of preparation was advanced last night as a means to check war by former Adjutant General Louis W. Stotesbury at an Armistice Day celebration held in the West End Synagogue under the auspices of the Shaaray Tefila Brotherhood and Sisterhood.

General Stotesbury advocated adherence to the International Court of Justice and other "machinery created for peace." Justice Joseph M. Proskauer of the New York Supreme Court said that "a furious psychology causes war" and urged all Americans to rid themselves of religious and racial prejudices and hatred. Two hundred attended the celebration.

Legion to Plant Christmas Tree.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Announcement was made today that the Westchester County posts of the American Legion would plant a 40-foot living Christmas tree in front of the newly erected $500,000 county centre on the Bronx River Parkway at Central Avenue, White Plains, tomorrow. They will keep it illuminated during the entire Yuletide season. The tree will be a tribute to the World War dead.

BUTLER LAUDS PACT OF PARIS AT SERVICE

WICKERSHAM SEES VICTORY

Hopeful of Peace Efforts of Statesmen—Dr. Manning Also Speaks at Church Federation Meeting.

Nearly 3,000 persons assembled in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Morningside Heights yesterday afternoon to give, in the words of Bishop William T. Manning, "thanks to God for a great and blessed vision, the vision of universal brotherhood and world peace."

The occasion was the Armistice Day service of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, in which clergy from many Christian churches participated. Besides Bishop Manning, President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University and George W. Wickersham, chairman of the Hoover Commission on Law Enforcement, spoke in behalf of world peace movements.

Bishop Manning urged his hearers to believe that it is possible for men to live as brothers, and for peace to reign on earth. He ended with a special prayer of thanksgiving, for "the new hope now stirring among us that the vision of brotherhood may be fulfilled."

Butler Stresses Paris Pact.

Dr. Butler, the second speaker, stressed the power for world peace inherent in the pact of Paris. After reading the names of the signatory nations and two of its provisions, Dr. Butler said:

"Weigh these names and these words and the fact that being signed by the United States it becomes constitutionally the law of the land, and take note of what has happened. It is so vast an achievement, so complete a revolution, that men, governments and public officials are slow to appreciate it. They still think in terms of a day gone by.

"They still talk of self-defense. There can be no defense if there is no attack, and every nation in the world is pledged not to attack. They still talk of freedom of the seas. The seas are free and can no longer be put in danger, any more than the trade route of the Ohio or Mississippi Rivers. They talk of parity. If there is to be no war, what difference does it make how the police force of New York compares with that of London, or Paris with Rome? Shall we suppose that other nations, or ourselves, in signing the pact were guilty of falsehood or deceit?"

Mr. Wickersham reviewed the efforts for peace on the part of various statesmen following the World War, and after declaring that peace can be secured only through the will of the people to have it, spoke hopefully of the leaders by whom the work is being carried on.

Sees Sure Progress Toward Peace.

"The press of a day or two ago," he said, "contained an account of a wonderful new invention which enables an airplane to maintain its flight under automatic control for hundreds of miles, undeflected from the direction upon which it was set. So with as sure an accuracy is the progress toward peace of the enlightened modern statesman of the civilized nations.

"The eyes of these pilots are fixed upon the dawn of a new era; the determinations of their governments and of the peoples have set their courses. Woe to those who would stay their flight or deflect them from their destination. They are moving forward with immovable and unchangeable intent to the broader civilization of a permanent, sane and Christian peace."

FINDS ARMISTICE DAY A GOOD AD FOR PEACE

Prof. Louis Bader Says Business Men Should Continue Effort Throughout Year.

The effect of Armistice Day as a peace advertisement should be carried on throughout the year, declared Professor Louis Bader, Professor of Markets at New York University, yesterday in an interview. Professor Bader believes that the American business man should put forth the effort.

"Armistice Day has been chosen as the occasion for focusing attention on the possibility of world peace," he said. "Many commendable things are done during the week of Armistice Day to advertise the fact that world peace is a desirable goal toward which to strive. From the viewpoint of business generally, world peace is most desirable.

"Through publicity given to conditions in this country growing out of our participation in the World War and subsequent position of economic importance, together with the world-wide use of American products, the attention of the people of Europe has been called to our standard of living. In no uncertain terms they are demanding some approach to that standard for themselves.

"American business, in trying to satisfy this aroused need, has an opportunity to carry out the marketing selling function and in this manner knit the peoples of the two continents more closely together."

Professor Bader declared there were many difficulties, mostly economic, in the way of raising the standard of living in Europe. He said that war, as has often been demonstrated, is not the way to solve the difficulty.

How Paris Solves the Problem of Exaggerated Curves

Many of us have them alas, but there is no real reason for grievance since Paris shows us so many clever ways of making them invisible. President's Armistice Day Speech Will Be Widely Broadcast on Short Waves.

KELLOGG TO RECEIVE HONOR

French Ambassador Will Bestow Award—Services to Be Held at Wilson's Tomb.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The broad foundations upon which the foreign policies of the administration are based are expected to be outlined by President Hoover in his address here tomorrow night at the annual Armistice Day observance of the American Legion at Washington Auditorium.

The President's address will be heard by members of the Cabinet, the diplomatic corps, members of Congress and jurists, as well as high officers of the army and navy, who will attend the Legion services.

The address will be broadcast over extensive radio networks in the United States and transmitted by short wave stations to other countries.

Particular attention is expected to be paid to the President's address in the capitals of Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, which will participate with the United States in the naval armament conference in London.

Pershing to Speak From Paris.

The other speakers at the services will be O. L. Bodenhamer, the new national commander of the American Legion, who will introduce the President, and General Pershing, now in Paris, whose greetings to the former soldiers of his army will be brought to the services from overseas.

President Hoover at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning will motor to Arlington National Cemetery to lay a wreath upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The President will be accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, who will lay a spray of roses upon the tomb.

The services at the tomb will be in part a repetition of those held at the entombment of the Unknown Soldier Nov. 11, 1921, and will be conducted by the clergymen who officiated at them—Colonel Axton, formerly chief of army chaplains, and Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron. Following the services taps are to be sounded over the tomb.

Numerous other ceremonies will mark the capital's observance of the anniversary.

At 10:55 o'clock in the morning the National Guard of the District of Columbia will hold a ceremony upon the east steps of the Capitol. Directors of the Washington Chamber of Commerce will place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 11 o'clock in memory of soldiers of the capital who died during the World War.

Service at Wilson's Tomb.

At 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon memorial services will be held before the tomb of Woodrow Wilson in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral. For the first time since the death of the former President, Mrs. Wilson, who is now in the Orient, will not attend this service.

The Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor will be bestowed upon former Secretary of State Kellogg by Ambassador Claudel at ceremonies at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the French Embassy. The order recently was conferred upon Mr. Kellogg by the French Government as a result of his sponsorship of the Kellogg-Briand multilateral treaty renouncing war as an instrument for settlement of international disputes. The award, first suggested by former Premier Briand, was conferred in an order signed on Aug. 27, the first anniversary of the signing of the treaty of Paris, by President Doumergue of France.

BROADCAST CHAINS TO CARRY EXERCISES

Large Hook-Ups Will Take to Nation and World Ceremonies of the Day.

Two coast-to-coast radio networks and several short-wave transmitters are to be put into simultaneous operation tonight at 8:30 o'clock when President Hoover speaks at the Armistice Day celebration of the American Legion at Washington, D. C., the ceremony culminating radio's observance of the eleventh anniversary of the World War Armistice.

Local broadcasters in the chains will be WJZ and WABC. The President is expected to begin speaking at about 9 o'clock, following an introduction by Major O. L. Bodenhamer, the Legion national commander. The Legion meeting will be held at the Washington Auditorium, and Colonel Paul V. McNutt, past commander, will preside.

Arrangements have been made to intercept the short-wave transmissions at points in Canada and Europe, according to the broadcasting systems.

Because of the international scope of Mr. Hoover's talk it is expected that the short wave rebroadcasts carrying the address will be intercepted as widely as possible, both here and abroad.

The Armistice Day service for the men who served in the World War, to be held this morning at 11 o'clock in the Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, will be carried throughout the country by WABC's coast-to-coast chain.

A forty-five-minute Woodrow Wilson memorial service this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the cathedral in Washington will be broadcast by WEAF's nation-wide network. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be the principal speaker at both services. A musical program by the cathedral choir is to be a part of the morning broadcast.

The League of Remembrance's observation of Armistice Day, which will be broadcast over WJZ and a chain this morning at 10:45 o'clock, is to include an address by William C. Redfield, chairman, and the singing of "There Is No Death," by Steele Jamison, tenor. This will precede two minutes of silence, starting at 11 o'clock.

At 11:02 o'clock a radio adaptation of the noted war play, "Journey's End," is to be given before WJZ's microphone by the cast now playing at the Henry Miller Theatre. Short-wave transmitters linked with the chain will rebroadcast the play for the benefit of English listeners.

At 11 o'clock London time, or 6 A. M., New York time, the cast now giving the play in London is to enact it before the microphone of 2LO, London, which will also be linked with short-wave transmitters to carry the war drama as far as possible from the shores of Great Britain. Radio men said this will constitute the widest circulation, by means of broadcasting, of any dramatic presentation.

The Armistice Day celebration at the Eternal Light monument, Madison Square at Twenty-fifth Street, will be broadcast at 11 o'clock by WNYC. Addresses will be made by Mayor Walker, General Hugh A. Drum, Rev. F. P. Duffy, chaplain of the Rainbow Division; Rev. J. Wilson Sutton, Commander F. L. McFadden and others. The Municipal Band and a chorus of public school children will present various musical numbers.

A musical program befitting Armistice Day will be broadcast at 11 A. M. today over WLWL, under the auspices of the Paulist Fathers.

Dr. William Norman Guthrie will speak during an Armistice Day service broadcast at 12:30 P. M. by WMCA. At 9:30 P. M. WOR is to broadcast a dramatization of the events following the World War.

MANY IDLE IN COSTA RICA.

Banana Blight and New Tax Law Cause Cutting of Forces.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 10.—It was reported here today that many plantation and other workers in Costa Rica had been laid off recently because of the banana blight, and that it was probable no new plantings would be made there if the new law taxing and regulating banana production was not changed. New plantations in the Pacific littoral of Panama are producing more fruit already than the small ships in the Pacific Coast trade can handle, according to reports here.

It is understood plans are being considered to develop a tourist resort in the Highlands of Chiriqui, where Colonel Lindbergh spent a vacation during his good-will flight to Central and South America.

CONSTANT phoning, writing, and desk work in general make the elbows and lower forearm bear the brunt of friction and wear in a suit. The elbows particularly are about the first to show the wear.

Naturally we can't guarantee the Sackville won't wear out at the elbows. But we have given it some cruel friction and abrasion tests in the Macy Testing Laboratory.

The tabulated and technically worded results of these tests would be of little meaning to the average man. But in plain language—the fabrics of the Sackville have shown a remarkable capacity to take punishment.

CALLS OUR MOTIVES FOR PEACE SELFISH

Rev. Dr. Pierce, in Capital Armistice Day Sermon, Says "We Want to Save Our Skins."

TERMS ISOLATION A MYTH

He Insists We Must Be More Internationally Minded and Not Rely on Treaties Alone.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Denouncing as myths our "splendid isolation" and "our assumed superiority to the rest of mankind," the Rev. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, in a sermon delivered at the Armistice Sunday service held today under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches, asserted that America does not yet really want peace.

"We may say we do," said Dr. Pierce, "but what we really want is to be let alone. We do not wish to fire upon anybody or to have anybody fire upon us. We wish to be free to pursue money and pleasure. We are not ready for peace with righteousness, or we should do differently in industry, in commerce, in political government, in matters of law and order.

"Not yet does America really want the better way to avoid war. We may say we do, and point to the Kellogg multilateral treaty and to the approaching conferences on limitation of armaments. But purely selfish motives may influence us.

"We are eager to save our skins and our money. That our children may not be killed, and that our taxes may be less, we favor these treaties and conferences. Such motives, however excellent, are not sufficient.

"America must become less nationally and more internationally minded. Every one of the premises upon which Washington based his conclusion against foreign entanglements has been changed."

"No Peace Without Righteousness."

Taking as his theme, "If They Could Speak," Dr. Pierce preached on the text found in the words of Christ to His disciples:

"Think not that I came to send peace on the earth. I came not to send peace but a sword." He said that this meant there can be no peace without righteousness, and no righteousness without spiritual struggle. Speaking for all those who died in the last war, he insisted that the values gained from warfare should not be lost.

"War itself is a terrible thing," said Dr. Pierce. "It may be sweet to die for one's country, but it is not sweet to have one's comrades die.

"If the men who died in war could speak, they would summon America to arouse from her lethargy, her selfish nationalism, her lust and materialistic sins, and to realize that all mankind are children of God, that all nations are His, that our highest good is found in mutual gain."

The annual service, arranged by the council's committee on international justice and good-will, with the cooperation of the general committee on army and navy chaplains, was held in the First Congregational Church, of which Dr. Pierce, former pastor of President Coolidge, is minister.

Houghton to Be Chairman.

Announcement was made that Alanson B. Houghton of New York, former Ambassador to Germany and Great Britain, had accepted the chairmanship of the council's committee on international justice and good-will, succeeding George W. Wickersham on the expiration of the latter's four-year term as chairman.

A message from Mr. Houghton was read, expressing his sense of the definite responsibility resting on every citizen to join in the work for international peace, and pledging his own best service.

CITY TO PAY TRIBUTE TO WAR DEAD TODAY

All Activities to Cease at 11 A. M. on Anniversary of Signing of Armistice.

CELEBRATIONS TO BE HELD

A pause in activity throughout the city at 11 o'clock this morning will characterize the observance here today of the eleventh anniversary of Armistice Day. Throughout the day numerous organizations and groups will celebrate the anniversary with mass meetings, dinners and reunions.

Fifteen thousand persons are expected to be present at the official city ceremonies at the Eternal Light in Madison Square this morning at 11 o'clock to honor the memory of the nations' World War dead. Representatives of practically all veteran and patriotic organizations in the city will attend. Speakers are to include Mayor Walker, Brig. Gen. Hugh Drum, Father Francis P. Duffy, Rabbi Nathan Krass and Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook.

At 11 o'clock also a Boy Scout bugler will sound "taps" from the balcony of the Hotel Astor, calling the crowds in Times Square to silence, while trading on the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges in the financial district will be suspended for two minutes.

In all public schools there will be Armistice Day ceremonies. William J. O'Shea, Superintendent of Schools, has requested all principals to have a Boy Scout bugler sound "roll-call" and "taps" at some time during the day, preferably at 11 o'clock. At Bryant High School, in Long Island City, Dr. George J. Ryan, president of the Board of Education, will speak at exercises which will include the decorating of fourteen memorial trees with wreathes.

Beginning today, the American Red Cross will open its annual Roll-Call for membership, to continue until Thanksgiving Day.

Memorial services of the American Legion of Kings County will be held in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, at 11 o'clock. The names of the 2,700 Brooklyn men who lost their lives in the World War will be called from the honor roll.

Exercises to be held in Poe Park, the Bronx, this afternoon at 4 o'clock will be attended by pupils from 130 public and parochial schools in that borough.

The women's Peace Society plans two outdoor meetings, one at the Sub-Treasury Building, corner of Wall and Nassau Streets, at noon, and a second in Columbus Circle at 8 P. M.

President Frederick B. Robinson will deliver a brief Armistice Day address to the students of the College of the City of New York at 11 o'clock this morning.

Numerous dinners and functions will be held this evening to commemorate the day, foremost among them the annual Armistice Ball of the British World War Veterans of America at the Hotel Plaza, with Sir Esme and Lady Howard as patrons. The ceremony of massing the colors will take place at midnight.

The French Veterans of the World War will dine this evening at 8:30 o'clock at the Hotel Pennsylvania. The Society of the Third Division, Greater New York Post, will have a reunion at Janssen's Hofbrau House. Aviator's Post, 743, American Legion, will hold a dinner and reunion at the Hotel Biltmore.

The American Association of University Women will have an Armistice Day dinner this evening at 7 o'clock at the Women's University Club, 106 East Fifty-second Street. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor.

ROOSEVELT ASSAILS EMPHASIS ON ARMS

an interest in making our country unconquerable—a feeling that our chief aim is to see that our army and our navy are sufficient for our protection. That is but a part of our patriotic duty.

"Our country is, in a sense, continually at war. Against the ramparts of liberty, equality and justice, on which our Republic is founded, surge constantly the evil forces of greed, of materialism, of selfishness, headed by those who cynically deny that there is any prosperity or goodness that cannot be expressed in dollars and cents, or happiness except in bank balances.

"Continually they seek to sap to undermine, to destroy finally those high ideals without which our nation can no more survive than could those great nations of the past—those nations whose bodies died because their souls were dead.

"It is your duty as good soldiers of the faith not merely to keep alive the memory of those who gave their lives for their country's safety but to fight militantly, tirelessly, against the moral enemies of our Republic wherever and whenever they appear. Your flags have rallied around your country's banner. Make that no empty symbol. Move forward in your banner's path and underneath this, our country's symbol, consecrate yourselves to defend not only your nation's boundaries, but your nation's soul, lest freedom and justice, equality and liberty should perish from the earth."

Service for City Employes.

Memorial services for city employe veterans of the wars in which the United States participated were held at the shaft erected in their honor near the Mall in Central Park. Major Leonard J. Harman, chairman of Post 71 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, presided. Several wreaths were placed at the shaft. Speakers included Paul Wolman, senior vice commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Mrs. Charles Augustine Robinson, donor of the shaft.

In Queens more than 10,000 persons assembled for the Armistice Day services on the grounds of St. Teresa's Roman Catholic Church, Fiftieth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, Long Island City. An American flag and the papal colors were presented by James Pasta, former county commander of the American Legion, to the Rev. Father Patrick J. Manton, pastor of the church, on behalf of Atlas Post. Federal Judge Martin T. Manton, brother of Father Manton, delivered the address, in which he stressed the importance of religious tolerance.

A military procession of the 101st Cavalry Regiment to the Church of the Good Shepherd, Fourth Avenue and Seventy-fifth Street, Brooklyn, preceded the annual services conducted there by the Rev. Dr. Charles D. Trexler, pastor, and chaplain of the regiment. The troops were led by Colonel James R. Howlett from the armory at Bedford Avenue and Union Street.

Dr. Trexler in his sermon spoke of the evils of war and urged the necessity of continued efforts for world peace. The congregation stood in silence while the church bell was tolled eleven times in memory of those who lost their lives in the service.

At the Baptist Temple, Third and Flatbush Avenues, Brooklyn, representatives of veterans' and patriotic organizations took part in Armistice Day services. The Rev. Russell M. Brougher, the pastor, preached the sermon.

Armistice Day ceremonies were held under the joint auspices of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the Liberty Theatre, Stapleton, S. I. Brig. Gen. Otto B. Rosenbaum, stationed at Fort Wadsworth; Borough President John A. Lynch and S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) were among the speakers. Delegations from military and patriotic organizations were present. At the Rits Theatre in Port Richmond about 1,500 persons attended the Trinity Bible class services, where Sergeant Alvin C. York, noted hero of the World War, was a speaker.

HOSPITALS OBSERVE DAY.

Ceremonies Are Held by Veterans in Suffolk Institutions.

NORTHPORT, L. I., Nov. 10.—Observance of the eleventh anniversary of Armistice Day began in Suffolk County today with special services at the United States Veterans' Hospital here, where 1,000 patients are confined; at the State Memorial Hospital at Kings Park, where there are 600 patients of the World War; at Port Jefferson, with a united service in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and at the Huntington High School auditorium, where members of the American Legion from Northport, Centreport, Greenlawn, East Northport, Kings Park, Stony Brook, Port Jefferson and St. James assembled to do honor to those who died in France.

At the United States Veterans' Hospital many reminiscences of the last days of the war were told by the men confined to the institution. Many former buddies were brought together. The medical officer in charge, Dr. George F. Brewster, and his staff of officers also helped in showing the large number of visitors through the hospital. Many gifts were distributed and a musical program was given.

What is a reproduction piece?

Certain "authentic copies" of chairs by Sheraton, Phyfe and Chippendale now being shown, must make those famous designers turn in their graves. We find that most people prefer a good adaptation to a precise copy. Our showroom floor contains many examples of both. Mr. Downey will be happy to point out the differences and help you make a wise choice.

321 V. C.'S WILL LEAD ARMISTICE PARADE

PEACE NOTE TO BE MARKED

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—When the booming notes of Big Ben strike 11 o'clock tomorrow a deep silence will fall over London for two minutes in memory of the million British war dead. The Prince of Wales will place a wreath on the Cenotaph in Whitehall, while services of remembrance will be held in every British village and town.

Tomorrow wil be known in London as the "V. C.'s Armistice Day" because of the presence of 321 holders of the decoration. They will stand in a hollow square around the Cenotaph with Premier MacDonald, members of the Cabinet and picked detachments from the fighting services.

Later many of the Victoria Cross holders will sell Flanders poppies in the streets in aid of the Earl Haig fund for ex-service men.

The flash of bayonets and the color of uniforms will be much less in evidence at the Cenotaph this year than formerly. By order of the Labor Government the civil aspect of Armistice Day will predominate. As soon as the brief Whitehall ceremony is over, the V. C.'s will lead a long procession of those who lost sons, fathers and brothers in the war, past the Cenotaph.

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP).—For the first time King George will be absent tomorrow from the ceremonies at the Cenotaph. The Prince of Wales will officiate in his place for the observance of the eleventh anniversary.

CANTERBURY, England, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Archbishop of Canterbury has written the following prayer which he recommends as suitable to be had in mind during the two-minute Armistice Day silence:

"In remembrance of those who made the great sacrifice, keep us steadfast, keep us from falling back, and give us peace in our time, O Lord."

LEGION CHIEF APPEALS FOR LOYALTY IN PEACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 10 (AP).—Major O. L. Bodenhamer, National Commander of the American Legion, today issued an Armistice Day message to the people of America, as follows:

"Memories of the gallant service performed by the men of America on the battlefields of France come flooding back today with an ever-increasing vividness. We turn back the pages of the past and live again with those never-to-be-forgotten moments of victory which brought unrestrained joy and gladness to the world.

"The American Legion, composed of the men who helped make possible that great achievement of eleven years ago, is today engaged in the task of preserving and perpetuating in peace those same high ideals of service which inspired our men in 1917 and 1918 to stake their lives for their country.

"Armistice Day has a peculiar significance to the men of the Legion because it not only revives cherished memories but it serves to impress upon all veterans their duty of continued service to the nation. A day of joy though this may be, still it strikes hard the note of loyalty which characterized the service of our men in time of war and which should characterize their service in time of peace.

"Conceived out of the common interests of those who served, the spirit of the American Legion today is the spirit which spurred our men to noble deeds on the field of battle. The Legion is justifying its existence with a program of good citizenship, with untiring devotion to the care of our disabled comrades and dependent children of veterans, advancing the principles of Americanism, and giving unselfish service toward the betterment of our city, State and nation.

"Our celebration of this Armistice Day, however, will be to no avail if we do not take advantage of the splendid opportunity it affords to pledge anew our allegiance to flag and country, and to reflect upon the duties and obligations which we, as citizens, owe to the nation.

"The lives which were snuffed out in the blaze of the World War will not have been sacrificed in vain if we dedicate our best efforts to the uplift of the nation and to the preservation of those glorious principles of freedom and democracy for which our comrades died."

COALITION PARTY PLANNED FOR STATE

MOVED BY THOMAS VOTE

"A Genuine Political Awakening" Is Seen Which Will Result in a Strong Independent Party.

The executive committee of the Socialist party announced yesterday the calling of a conference with labor, liberal and progressive groups to be held in Albany on Feb. 23 and 23 for the purpose of bringing into the 1930 State campaign an independent coalition party embodying "something of the spirit and program of the British Labor party."

A resolution adopted at a meeting of the committee at 7 East Fifteenth Street yesterday gave the record vote polled by Norman Thomas, Socialist Mayoralty candidate in the recent city election, as the reason for the decision to attempt formation of a coalition party.

"We recognize in the magnificent vote polled by Norman Thomas," the resolution recited, "a genuine political awakening. We see in that vote the beginning of a new alignment that will result before long in the appearance in American political life of a party of producers, independent of the two old parties and devoted to the interests of the people—a party that will bring into American political life something of the spirit and program of the British Labor party."

The resolution was moved by G. August Gerber, who managed Mr. Thomas's Mayoralty campaign as well as his Presidential campaign of 1928. It declared that the Socialist party, in announcing its willingness to join a coalition movement, was merely restating its position set out in 1921 and carried into action when the party joined hands with the supporters of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette in the 1924 Presidential campaign.

"We are prepared to cooperate in such a coalition," the resolution continued, "on the basis of its acceptance of a program of social control. The first plank of such a platform must be absolute independence of the two old parties, whose insolent defiance of the opinions of the people in the character of its nominations in the New York election resulted in such a striking flocking of independent voters to the Socialist candidate."

Reports submitted at the meeting yesterday, the committee announced, indicated a substantial increase in the Socialist voting strength in every part of the State.

Two subcommittees were named yesterday. One will make a study of the election laws. The other will make a survey of political sentiment and conditions in the State, with a view to bringing the various liberal and labor groups into harmony with the party's program. Invitations to participate in the Albany coalition conference will soon be sent to the various groups who cooperation is desired, according to Fred L. Ariand, who presided over the meeting.

When the Gods Fall Down

When we talk to people who have made a study of the history of religions, we find that Christianity had its big impetus in a rather strange way.

There was quite a bit of travel during the first century A. D. all up and down the Mediterranean coast. A stonemason would get out of a job in Alexandria and would take a boat for Athens. An Athenian laborer, wanting to see more of the world, would cruise over to Rome or Syracuse and get a job there.

Apparently there were plenty of jobs to be had in seaport towns. There was no bother about money. But there was another bother that the average man could not get rid of.

And that was about his gods. He could not take his gods with him.

Each town had its local god stuck up in the market place to which a man gave sacrifice against misfortune. But these gods were sort of local policemen. Their jurisdiction did not extend beyond the bounds of their city. And the big god, Jupiter or Zeus, was really too far away to give heed to the trials of the laboring man.

So it was not by accident that Christianity, which did give heed to the humble, and which did go with the wayfarer on his long journey over the sea, became very important to that stonemason, tossing about in his cockleshell between distant ports. And it is further recorded that when he got a faith he could hold fast to he rather gave up wandering and settled down.

There is a very interesting parallel between that day and this if one cares to make it. And it does hold up nicely.

In the old order of capital and labor here in America, which began to pass out of existence some ten years ago, we had an enormous population of floating labor. Several million men were shunted back and forth across the country, from railroad camps to lumber camps, and from lumber camps to wheat fields, with no one interested in their welfare, and with hardly an employer caring a Continental where they came from or whither they were going.

They were entirely dependent upon the people who employed them, yet they could not depend in any respect upon those people.

In other words, their gods had fallen down.

Then came the new economic order of things. The order in which capital, or employment, came to look upon labor, not as a commodity to be squeezed dry and thrown away, but as a great consuming outlet, which, if treated humanly and respected fairly, could probably consume ten times more of American production than any other class of American consumer.

How much difference the world will never know.

But all over America employers began to realize that a man in a job was a potential purchaser of a lot of the things he helped to make. And a man out of a job was not a potential purchaser of anything.

So that, where twenty years ago one would find an Employer saying to his Foreman in times of stress, "Cut off every man you can"—one now finds the same Employer saying, "Don't cut off any more men than you actually have to," or, "Better keep them all working and go on part time."

Interesting, isn't it?

Well, take up your True Story Magazine and you can read it all there, in big type, between the lines.

First, there isn't enough of a floating labor population any more to call for a single hour's discussion on the part of an economist.

Their gods are standing up, so they are settling down.

And finally, you have labor, because of its sad experience in the past, being a little bit more cautious about its personal credit standing than perhaps any other group.

Even in the brief ten years in which True Story Magazine has been unconsciously recording the great economic change in American affairs, you find that change unconsciously taking place in the true stories themselves. You find even that personal pride in stability and equality is a thing so newly acquired as to be rather precious, and therefore to be guarded extra well.

And in all these great and sudden changes in American affairs, which sociologists look upon with an interest that is almost agape, this stabilization and equalization of labor is probably the most remarkable.

No wonder manufacturers look eagerly for their new markets to this great, wide-spread outlet which is handling its personal affairs so well and is coming into its own so gloriously as America's greatest consumer of all that America makes.

KINGS DEMOCRATS TO OPPOSE CROPSEY

SIX JUSTICES SLATED TO GO

Leaders Indicate Readiness to Fight All Republican Incumbents—McCooey Is Silent.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 10.—As the victory celebration here of the Democratic leaders of Brooklyn broke up today and most of the politicians and officeholders left for their respective homes the theory of non-partisan judiciary elections, as far as the Kings County Democrats are concerned, seemed to have been permanently laid at rest.

Before the gathering disbanded it appeared that the leaders had agreed that Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey, former District Attorney and Police Commissioner, should walk the plank next year. Being a Republican, it was indicated, he will receive no endorsement at Democratic hands when he comes up for re-election next Fall. On the contrary, the Democratic leaders showed a disposition to nominate the strongest Democrat available to oppose him should he choose to run again.

Although no official announcement of this decision was made, a suggestion along this line found hearty support as sentiment crystallized today. With election almost a full year off, county leader John H. McCooey refrained to comment or commit himself. Smiling at inquiries he contented himself with saying that Mr. Cropsey was a friend of his.

Other Justices Slated to Go.

From the circle of leaders familiar with his attitude, however, came unmistakable intimation not only of the determination to substitute a Democrat for Justice Cropsey, but eventually to shelve most of the other six Republicans still on the bench in the Second Judicial District, including Justice Harry E. Lewis, former District Attorney, and Justice Norman S. Dike.

The first to go is Justice Stephen Callaghan, whose appeal for non-partisan re-election this Fall made little headway against District Attorney Charles J. Dodd. The hostility of Democratic leaders to Justice Cropsey is intensified by the fact that he has never espoused the new partisan judiciary election. Democratic spokesmen insisted that he has even actively opposed it and has always supported straight party nominees for office of any kind.

They declared that in 1927 he worked against Republican endorsement of Justice William J. Kelly, Democrat and presiding justice of the appellate division, who was up for re-election.

Should Justice Cropsey stand for re-election, whether he chooses to raise the non partisan judiciary cry or not, however, he is bound to have others campaign for him on that issue, it is admitted.

Better known than Justice Callaghan, long a leader in Boy Scout work in Brooklyn and often mentioned as a possible nominee for Mayor and Governor by reason of his vigorous public service in the past, he would be bound to make a powerful fight.

Confident after the test of strength in last week's election Democrats here, however, discounted this threat and have no fear of the additional strength which supporters of the partisan theory may win if twice in succession the Democrats violate it.

It was pointed out in this connection that former Governor Smith, although professing his belief in the non partisan theory, told a Brooklyn audience in the last campaign that it should not go into effect until both parties throughout the State agreed to it.

Strong Candidate Hunted.

It will suit the plans of the Brooklyn leaders best if Justice Cropsey decides not to run again, but they indicated that they will prepare for any eventuality by grooming a candidate early for his post. This necessity may result in finding new candidates for the position of District Attorney which Mr. Dodd will vacate at the end of the year, since Mr. Dodd's successor, according to authoritative report, will be the party nominee next Fall for the Supreme Court. George E. Brower, member of the State Athletic Commission; Albert Conway, State Superintendent of Insurance, and Assistant District Attorney William Geoghan are the candidates most often mentioned, but it is also suspected that one or two county judges are alert to the opportunity.

Mr. McCooey, who will stay here on vacation a day or two longer, had a chat today with Borough President John A. Lynch of Richmond, who came to Atlantic City yesterday for a rest, and with Samuel Untermyer, who week-ends in a bungalow atop one of the hotels here. He congratulated Mr. Untermyer on the success of his son, Irwin, in the Supreme Court campaign in the First Judicial District, but said there was no political significance in either conversation.

Starting his twenty-first year as county leader, Mr. McCooey predicted that New York would become "more and more Democratic."

Zionist Women to Meet Thursday.

The fifteenth annual convention of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, will begin at Atlantic City on Thursday, with 300 delegates from all parts of the country in attendance, it was announced yesterday. It will be opened formally by Mrs. Robert Szold, acting president, who will give the annual report of the organization's activities.

Many prominent women will address the convention, the announcement said, and the presidents of several kindred institutions are expected to bring the greetings of their own organizations personally to the meeting.

The Republican State leaders expect Mr. Harvey to be a candidate for the nomination but they do not expect his candidacy to get very far.

The Republican plans for the State campaign, so far as the party has any present plans, are based upon the expectation of the renomination of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman by the Democrats. Even from the Republican viewpoint, these will not be easy candidates to defeat. The report in both Republican and Democratic circles is that State Controller Morris S. Tremaine, who will have served two terms by the end of the next year, probably will not be renominated, although it is, of course, too early to forecast this definitely.

Democrats Plan Expansion.

The Democrats believe the up-State organization of their party has been improved considerably under State Chairman M. William Bray of Utica, and their plan is to improve it still further so that there will be a working party organization in every county, something that the Democratic party has not had up-State for years. The formation of the Democratic Union, a meeting of which Governor Roosevelt and Lieut. Gov. Lehman attended here on Saturday, already has insured sufficient funds for organization work up to the beginning of the campaign next Fall and it is expected that enough more will be raised to provide a nucleus for a campaign fund.

During the last twenty years, beginning with 1910, a Democratic Governor has been elected seven times and a Republican Governor only three times, the Republican Governors having been Charles S. Whitman with two terms and Nathan L. Miller with one. This, the Republican leaders admit, is a poor showing in a State which has gone Democratic for President only once during this period and that in 1912 when the Republican party was split by the candidacy of the late Theodore Roosevelt on the Progressive ticket.

With the outlook rather less promising than it has been in some of the years in which they met defeat, the Republican State leaders will hold a conference soon to see what can be done to strengthen the party position. The suggestion of the displacement of Samuel S. Koenig as New York County Chairman, which was made immediately after last Tuesday's election has not met with much favor, because there seems to be no way to displace Mr. Koenig. It would be easier to take the Brooklyn leadership of the party from Jacob A. Livingston because that would require only the vote of a majority of the members of the Brooklyn Republican Executive Committee, but the State leaders are not confident that the situation would be improved by the ousting of Mr. Livingston. Reorganization of the party organization in the Bronx and Richmond would accomplish little in the way of more Republican votes and reorganization of the party machine in Queens regarded as a local matter to be settled by the supporters of Borough President Harvey and Mr. De Bragga.

Some of the Republican leaders are rather pessimistic over the outlook for party reorganization of any kind but expect that the stunning effect of Tammany's New York City victory will have passed by the time the Legislature convenes next January. The preliminary skirmishing for the gubernatorial campaign will take place in the Legislature and it is likely that the Republican leadership will await developments there before trying to bring about reorganization or making definite plans for next year's campaign.

FORUM ON STOCK CRASH.

American Synagogue Hears Discussion Led by M. S. Rukeyser.

Merryle S. Rukeyser, financial writer and lecturer, conducted a discussion on the subject, "Does the Recent Debacle Indicate the Need of Public Regulation of the Stock Exchange?" at the Forum service yesterday of the new American Synagogue, Seventieth Street near Broadway.

He contended that marginal trading should be limited to a class of professional speculators, that corporations should be induced to issue clear and frequent statements, that State endorsement of market machinery is a misleading and therefore a dangerous practice, and that lack of a strong short interest was a factor in the recent market slump.

BRENNER KIDNAPPERS AGAIN ASK RANSOM

TIENTSIN, China, Nov. 10 (AP).—The kidnappers of Aaron Brenner, New York furrier, tonight resumed their telephonic negotiations for the large ransom they demand. It was believed their calls were made from large offices in various parts of the foreign settlement where there are numerous telephones.

Police raids on the Russian quarter today were fruitless, and the gang, which was believed to have come recently from Harbin, has given no clue to their hiding place. Another registered letter was received from Mr. Brenner saying the bandits continued to threaten him with death.

HAILS LUTHER CATECHISM.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The 400th anniversary of Luther's writing of the small catechism was observed today in a special sermon which was delivered at the morning service of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church here by the Rev. Dr. F. H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America and a resident of New Rochelle. The Rev. Howard R. Gold, the pastor, introduced the speaker, whose subject was "popularized religion."

Luther accomplished much through his marvelous small catechism, through his hymns which live to the present day, through his translation of the Bible in the language of the people, through his stirring sermons and through the mass of his writings," Dr. Knubel said. "Prince and pauper in the sixteenth century could talk religion intelligently. This is the lesson we need to learn today. A calm analysis of the present-day facts reveals that religion is not popularized. Societies trying to propagate atheism which exists in our country are being organized."

CONTRAST

Since the dawn of history the great Sphinx has stared across the Egyptian plains, oblivious to time and change. Guardian of the tombs of dead monarchs, it remains the symbol of a static world, within whose narrow boundaries men slaved in loneliness and fear, ignorant of Nature's secrets.

WITHIN the past fifty years science has discovered many of Nature's secrets. A revolution has taken place in the whole structure of social and business life. Man is master of treasures and comforts beyond the dreams of ancient kings.

In this new and dynamic world with its rapid interchange of ideas, the telephone is playing a most important part. It is a symbol of progress, a living thing that lets man's voice sweep beyond the portals of day and night. With it he may speak to nearly 29,000,000 telephones in three continents — he is monarch of more than he surveys.

The Sphinx is a symbol of a dead past; the Telephone, an instrument of the living present that gives us mastery of Time and of Distance.

RACIAL TOLERANCE OF AMERICA PRAISED

RUMANIAN REGIME SCORED

Policy Has Not Changed With Government, It Is Said—Palestine Outrages Reviewed.

After referring to anti-Semitic outbreaks in various parts of Europe and the Near East, the executive committee of the American Jewish Committee in its yearly report yesterday at the twenty-third annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee said that very few instances of religious and racial intolerance in the United States during the last year were brought to its attention.

The committee declared it would be a grave error to assume that the change of government in Rumania had been accompanied by any considerable decrease in anti-Semitism. The report emphasized that the anti-Semitic party under the leadership of Cuza has changed neither its views nor its program.

Referring to Rumania, the report said:

"Reliable observers who have recently investigated the condition of the Jews of the country declare that anti-Semitism is widespread; that its sinister influence is keenly felt by Jews in all walks of life, and that here and there discrimination is reflected in the action of local government officials."

Wire From Rumanian Envoy Read.

Bennett N. Siegelstein, president of the United Rumanian Jews of America, who attended the meeting, read a telegram received earlier in the day from the Rumanian Minister at Washington in which the latter was quoted as declaring all those responsible for the recent attacks against Jews would be adequately punished and everything would be done to prevent a recurrence of these outrages. Mr. Siegelstein said that the Rumanian Minister declared he had received these assurances from his government.

In its reference to Russia the report said the same questions that had been agitating the Jewish population of that country for several years were again the centre of attention in 1929. "The most absorbing problem was the economic condition of the Jewish population; next came anti-Semitism, of which a great many instances were reported during the year, and third was the perilous state of the Jewish religion in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics."

Report on Palestine.

Regarding Palestine, the committee had the following to report:

"In Palestine the year began and ended with friction between the Jewish settlement and the administration on the one hand, and between the Jews and the Arabs on the other, caused by events in connection with the Western or so-called Wailing Wall, a vestige of the structure which enclosed the site of the ancient temple. The trouble began on the eve of Yom Kippur, Sept. 23, 1928, upon a complaint made to the Deputy District Commissioner at Jerusalem by the Mutawali of the Abu Waqf, in which the pavement and the whole area around the Western Wall is vested, to the effect that during the divine services held there by Jews a dividing screen had been affixed to the pavement adjoining the wall, and that other innovations had been made in the established practice.

"The Deputy District Commissioner decided that the screen would have to be removed before the services on the following day, and he gave instructions accordingly to the beadle in charge of the arrangements for the conduct of the services at the wall. On the following morning a police officer, finding that the screen had not been removed, and that members of the congregation present were unable to move it because of the holiness of the day, ordered some subordinates to remove the screen. The worshipers in general, unaware of the prior circumstances and only seeing the police in the act of removing the screen which had been used to separate the men and women, became excited and some of them endeavored to prevent by force the screen from being taken away.

"The Zionist executive in Palestine took exception to this action in a memorandum submitted to the Acting High Commissioner of Palestine for transmission to the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations on various grounds. The memorandum concludes with a statement to the effect that the Jewish people demand freedom to pray according to their rites without external interference, and that the mandatory power should take all necessary steps to insure the elimination of present obstacles to the further conduct of worship at this holy place.

Says False Rumors Were Spread.

"The incident at the Wall caused the circulation of various false rumors as to the intentions of the Jews of Palestine. Both the Zionist Executive and the Vaad Leumi, the representative body of Palestine Jewry, felt called upon to issue statements repudiating these rumors and appealing for the good-will of the Arab population. The question continued to agitate the British Parliament, especially when, subsequently, Arabs began to erect a structure on the Wall, with the permission of the local British authorities; this, as explained by the Colonial Office, was an addition to a structure which had already existed.

"But part of the Arab population had been inflamed by the false propaganda, in a section of their press, and on Oct. 20, 1928, Jewish worshipers at the Wall were attacked and one seriously injured; two Arabs were arrested and convicted of having participated in the attack and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. As the serious uprising which broke out in Palestine toward the end of August last, resulting in wanton murder and pillage, is now the subject of inquiry by a British commission, no attempt will here be made to discuss the causes which led to these sad events."

The committee went into detail regarding ways attempted to bring relief to the Jews of the Yemen in Southern Arabia, "who are subjected to persecution and degradation; assistance in preventing the expulsion of Russian refugees in Constantinople and efforts to bring about a change in the procedure of the League of Nations in handling the complaints of minorities in European countries of the infraction of the rights guaranteed to them by the international treaties."

Dr. Cyrus Adler of Philadelphia, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary, was unanimously elected president of the committee to succeed the late Louis Marshall. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago and Judge Irving Lehman of the State Court of Appeals were elected vice presidents. Colonel Isaac M. Ullman of New Haven was re-elected treasurer and Judge Horace Stern of Philadelphia was elected chairman of the executive committee.

James Marshall, son of Louis Marshall, was elected a member of the executive committee, to which the following were re-elected for another term of three years: Leo M. Brown of Mobile, Ala.; M. J. Kohler and Judge Irving Lehman of New York; Dr. Milton J. Rosenau and A. C. Ratshesky of Boston, and Isaac M. Ullman, New Haven.

Also in custody here are the woman's father, George W. Parks, a switchyard watchman, and Anthony Baker, with whom the woman had been living in a rooming house at 101 Warren Street, Newark. They are being held as material witnesses, although, according to Miss Parks's statement, neither had any knowledge of the tragic fate of the children. It was on Baker's advice that she surrendered to the Newark police this morning, she said.

He had brought a newspaper to their room, in which she read for the first time that the police had been looking for her since the finding of Dorothy's skeleton a week ago. It had been wrapped in a sheet. The laundry mark on the sheet established the child's identity.

Allen Rogers, an insurance agent of Woodbury, N. J., told the police that he had given the two youngest of his six children to Miss Parks to rear after the death of their mother, a cousin of Miss Parks.

Surrendered on Man's Advice.

When she read that the police were looking for her, Miss Parks said, she consulted Baker and he advised her to surrender to them. She went to Newark headquarters, where she at first told Captain John A. Brady, in charge of detectives at night, and Deputy Chief Frank E. Bray that she had turned the children over to an Atlantic City lawyer and knew nothing of their subsequent fates.

A few questions quickly shattered this story and she then declared that the children came to their deaths while in her care and under circumstances which made her fear to reveal their fates. She said that she had taken the children last May on the understanding that they were to be hers without any interference on the part of their father.

She was fond of them both, she asserted, but Dorothy's repeated misbehavior irked her. She tried to break the child of her bad habits, but her efforts were unsuccessful. On Aug. 7, in a house at 512 North Fifth Street, here, where she had taken up a residence under the name of Norcross, last the children's father trail her and reclaim them, Dorothy again misbehaved, she said:

Says She Struck Girl.

"I lost my patience with her and hit her with my hand," the woman told the detectives in Newark. "She fell down. I thought she was fooling and I left her on the floor while I went into another room. When I returned Dorothy was still on the floor. I lifted her up, put her to bed and rubbed her with alcohol. It was then I saw that Dorothy was dead."

Frightened, she hid the body in a closet until night and then buried it in the cellar, she said. It remained there for three weeks, while she explained to the neighbors that Dorothy was visiting her husband.

It was on a Friday in the latter part of August—she was unable to fix the date more closely—that Timothy met his death, she said. She was working about her flat when she heard him scream in the hall. Opening the door, she found he had fallen downstairs. She carried him in and worked over him, but in a few minutes he died, she said.

She took a bus to Absecon, N. J., carrying Timothy's body in a suitcase, and found a secluded spot not far from the State Police Headquarters, where she buried it under the leaves and underbrush. She had stripped the body of its clothing, she said, in order to reduce the chance of its being identified.

Says She Moved Body from Cellar.

After her return to Camden, she worried lest the body of Dorothy be discovered in the cellar. She induced a friend to drive her to National Park, N. J., where she hid it, wrapped in the sheet through which the child's identity was later traced. Soon afterward she heard from Baker, with whom she previously had lived in Brooklawn, and went to Newark to resume the relationship with him, she said.

In an interview here this afternoon she was firm in her contention that she "loved the children dearly" and that she had not intentionally harmed either of them. Before a group of detectives she took the 6-year-old daughter of one of them and re-enacted the placing of Dorothy's body in the suitcase. Throughout the day she showed no emotion, although she said, in reply to questions, that she was sorry for the children.

She will be questioned again tomorrow, when, the detectives said tonight, she will be taken to the scene of the tragedies and asked to explain various discrepancies in her stories.

Troopers Find Boy's Body.

ABSECON, N. J., Nov. 10.—The skeleton of Timothy Rogers was found here this morning by State troopers after they had been notified that Miss Gladys May Parks had confessed hiding the body of the child behind a graveyard here. It had lain for two months in some scrub oaks not more than ten feet from a sidewalk.

Efforts to corroborate the woman's statement that the child had broken its arm in a fall which caused its death were futile. The arm bones were not found by the troopers. The skull bore a bad fracture extending from back of one ear clear across the base, and a slight fracture extending upward from a small indenture, caused, the police believe, by a blow from a heavy instrument.

BULGAR BANDITS ROB TRAIN

SOFIA, Nov. 10.—The notorious band of brigands headed by Dotscho Uzunow, while still being hunted by the police for the murder of three judges on an open road a fortnight ago, yesterday held up the Boitschinowol-Berkowitza train and robbed more than one hundred passengers.

Two heavily armed robbers sprang on to the locomotive and overpowered the engine crew, while two others searched the passengers at the point of their pistols. Some members of a Bulgarian Fascist organization who tried to resist were roughly handled.

Forty minutes after they boarded the train the bandits fled into a neighboring wood. Police pursued and engaged them in fire, but as the band by this time has reached the Yugoslavian frontier it probably will escape.

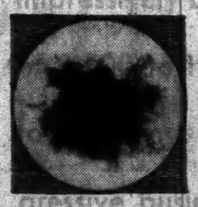
Paré's Fracture Reducer

One of an illustrative series that portrays the advance of medical thought from early speculations to the scientific achievements of modern medicine.

The great Metchnikoff startled the scientific world when he announced the discovery of the modern fountain of youth



Photomicrograph of intestinal Acidophilus bacilli. Every cubic centimeter (about 15 drops) of Walker-Gordon Acidophilus Milk contains a minimum of 250,000,000 of these health-giving organisms.

ELIE METCHINKOFF, prince of bacteriologists, was also a man of wide and acute observation. A great detective was spoiled to give the world a great scientific investigator.

Metchnikoff, himself a Slav, had noted the extraodinary vigor, health and long life of certain Slavic peasants. These people consumed great quantites of fermented milk products. Metchnikoff attributed their well-being to their diet.

This conclusion was based on a profound study of the intestinal flora (the microscopic plant organisms that grow in vast numbers in the intestinal tract). It is well known that (1) the intestinal flora of normal infants is composed almost wholly of favorable milk-organisms (2) that the intestinal tract of adults is largely composed of unfavorable, putrefactive bacteria—the "germs of decay."

For Metchnikoff, a putrefactive intestinal flora was the villain in the piece. He attributed all sorts of ills, particularly digestive disorders, to their malignant action. His prescription for a higher level of health was to replace putreactive bacteria with the wholesome milk organisms. This is exactly the purpose of drinking Walker-Gordon Acidophilus Milk. Bacillus Acidophilus is the one milk organism known, that can maintain itself in the intestinal tract.

Walker-Gordon Acidophilus Milk is simply a preparation of fresh Walker-Gordon milk scientifically cultured with a hardy strain of Acidophilus bacilli. Normally, it will change the intestinal flora, replacing putrefactive bacteria with the wholesome Acidophilus.

Borden's milkman brings you Walker-Gordon Acidophilus milk fresh every morning. Call Walker 7300 (Main office) or your local Borden's branch.

How to take Acidophilus Milk

The more you drink, up to a quart a day, the better for you. A quart a day for a period of thirty days is advisable. If you drink less, extend the period correspondingly. Be governed by results in your own case...

Some people like the taste of Acidophilus. Others prefer it flavored. Here are three drinks that everybody likes. Add half a cup of loganberry juice, grape juice or sweetened orange juice to a pint of Acidophilus. Shake up. Chill in refrigerator. Delicious!

PLANE HITS VESSEL; THREE FLIERS HURT

PLUNGES INTO THE SEA

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 10 (AP).—Three Coast Guardsmen were injured and their amphibian plane wrecked today when the craft lost altitude in a take-off, struck the forestay of the outward-bound fishing schooner Jackie B., and plunged into the harbor. The fliers were rescued by the schooner's crew and a seaman who was passing in a dory.

Those injured were Lieutenant Leonard M. Melka, pilot; William Kenley, machinist, and Arthur J. Descoteaux, radio electrician, all attached to Coast Guard Base 7 here. They were starting out on patrol duty, Coast Guard officials said. The plane flew into a downward air current, which caused the loss of altitude.

Lieutenant Melka's nose was crushed and his right arm fractured. Kenley suffered an arm fracture and Descoteaux a fracture of the right hand and cuts on the head. They were taken to Addison Gilbert Hospital, suffering from shock and immersion.

After striking the forestay, the plane passed through the schooner's rigging. Its right wing torn off and left hanging from the rigging, the amphibian plunged on for about 100 feet before it struck the water and turned over.

Fishermen from the Jackie B., under command of Captain John Barrett, launched a dory and rescued Kenley and Descoteaux. Herman Mathisen, a member of the crew of a coal barge anchored in the outer harbor, was passing in a dory. He extricated Lieutenant Melka.

The plane was salvaged by Coast Guardsmen from Base 7. The schooner returned to port, where inspection revealed that her two masts had been cracked.

HELD IN ACTOR'S DEATH.

William Boyle of 4,707 Forty-seventh Street, Woodside, Queens, was held without bail by Magistrate Goodman in Jefferson Market Court yesterday for arraignment tomorrow in Homicide Court in connection with the death on Saturday in Bellevue Hospital of N. J. Nelson Jr. of Chicago, an actor. Boyle, a waiter in an alleged speakeasy in West Twenty-ninth Street near Broadway, is accused of striking Nelson in a brawl over a topcoat. Nelson was found later with a fractured skull and laceration of the brain, of which he died.

Thelma Moore, described as a traveling saleswoman, who lived at the Hotel Lincoln, the New York address of Nelson, was held as a material witness, as was also Frank Boyle, brother of the waiter. Both were said to have witnessed the altercation. Miss Moore's home is also in Chicago. Boyle told the police that Nelson struck him, and that in the fight that followed Nelson's head crashed against a wall.

3 KILLED, 12 HURT IN MEXICAN RIOT

the highest authorities of the government of the United States. I can offer the Mexican people full assurances of the absolute neutrality of the American Government, whose only desire is that Mexico shall have free elections, and that the candidate obtaining the most votes shall be declared elected."

An accompanying statement says: "We consider it convenient to declare that, in view of the above telegram, it is absolutely false to say that the government of the United States or Ambassador Morrow wishes to mix in any degree in our elections, as some impossionist elements here have insinuated."

Señor Ortiz Rubio was quoted in today's newspapers as saying that he would be most cordial to the United States always within the bounds of mutual respect, if elected. He also said he did not expect any disorders to take place, and remarked that Mexico's army is conscious of its duties and would restrain any rebellious movements.

In foreign circles here today's happenings are looked upon as a great step in the wrong direction, and it is feared that next Sunday's voting may yet produce violence and bloodshed, despite the efforts of the government to prevent such a repetition of previous campaign and election disorders.

ACCUSES WALKER ON LAND PURCHASES

W. H. Allen, in Letter to the Governor Asking Action, Makes Ten Charges.

ALLEGES EXCESSIVE PRICES

Assessments Increased 1,600 Per Cent Aided Speculators, He Asserts —Sees Tax Bureau Evils.

William H. Allen, director of the Institute for Public Service, sent a letter to Governor Roosevelt yesterday containing ten charges against Mayor Walker. Although said by Mr. Allen to be new, the charges were of the same general nature as those made by him last July when he asked the Governor to remove the Mayor.

"Governor Roosevelt, seeking re-election, may accept more responsibility for looking into specific citizen complaints than Governor Roosevelt four months before election," Mr. Allen said.

The ten charges made by Mr. Allen follow:

1. Mayor Walker has abetted Controller Charles W. Berry in park purchase irregularities in paying $33,000 an acre for swamp land across the street from land assessed at $350 an acre and itself assessed at $6,000 the year before Alley Pond Park was proposed and in paying $5,400 an acre for lands assessed from $350 to an average of $1,150 when President Connolly suggested their purchase and assessed at $2,000 by the Controller.
2. Mayor Walker leads the Board of Estimate in considering proposals by his Board of Education to pay $1,850 a lot for land assessed at $33 a lot, which during four years he has allowed his Tax Department to assess at $33 a lot, although it joins land condemned by the city at $1,466 a lot.
3. While complaining because the purchasing of land by condemnation has gouged the public 400 to 600 per cent of fair prices, Mayor Walker has continued to use condemnation proceedings for the great majority of prospective purchases without taking steps to correct condemnation evils that have originated in his Law Department's choice of experts and its collection and presentation of evidence.
4. Mayor Walker permitted his Tax Department to help land speculators reap huge profits from the sale of park lands by increasing assessments without justification as much as 1,600 per cent as a blind to give seeming value to speculative lands held for sale to the city at private sale.
5. Mayor Walker has allowed his Law Department to misconduct the city's defense in certiorari suits for the reduction of taxes.
6. Mayor Walker has led to taxing the public to increase an admittedly and demonstrably illegal and unnecessary surplus in the city's sinking fund.
7. Mayor Walker has permitted his Tax Department to continue into 1930 gross inequalities in assessment, even after such inequalities have been called to his attention repeatedly.
8. He has let his Tax Department not only ignore its own published unit land values when assessing, but distort those units for favored taxpayers.
9. Mayor Walker has let his Tax Department assess corporation realty inequitably as between corporation and corporation, and also as between corporation and other business or private homes.
10. Mayor Walker has permitted his Water Department to pay too high rates for street lighting, make contracts that necessarily penalize the public and otherwise fail to protect the public.

MORE CLINICS ASKED FOR CHRONIC ILLS

Need for Convalescent Homes Also Stressed in Second Part of Jewish Communal Report.

SCHOOL RESEARCH FAVORED

Greater hospital facilities for the convalescent and the chronically sick, establishment of a central council for the development of a unified recreational program for the Jewish community and, in the field of education, the concentration of communal expenditures for research, standardization and the development of sound educational practices are the principal recommendations in the second set of conclusions on a city-wide social and communal study made by the executive committee of the Jewish Communal Survey of Greater New York, published yesterday.

The sections of the study released yesterday are part of the committee's findings in the various fields of social work and community organization after an exhaustive study of three years.

The entire report of the executive committee will be submitted by Dr. Lee K. Frankel, chairman, tomorrow evening at the Jewish Social Centre, 131 West Eighty-sixth Street, for the approval of a citizens' committee headed by Judge Otto A. Rosalsky.

The report is based on a study undertaken three years ago at the request of the Citizens' Committee through the Bureau of Jewish Social Research and represents an inventory of social conditions in the five boroughs, together with recommendations for the reorganization of Jewish communal work. The study was under the general direction of Samuel L. Goldstein, director of the Bureau of Jewish Social Research.

Convalescent Homes Urged.

The conclusions published yesterday are:

1. There has been a great increase in the number of beds in Jewish hospitals, but much more should be done for the convalescent and the chronically sick. In this connection it is stated that apparently the Jewish community will have provided, by 1930, enough beds in its own hospitals for the Jewish sick and that the chief problems, therefore, to be solved in this branch of social work are the districting of hospital services to keep pace with the shifts in the Jewish population and the enlargement and coordination of facilities for convalescents and the chronically sick.

2. There is need of a central organization or council to build up a community program to meet the recreational needs of the Jewish community by coordination of the various agencies in the field. At the present time there is available for help a national organization, the Jewish Welfare Board, and a local organization formed by it, the Metropolitan League, to which a number of synagogues, centres, all of the Y. M. H. A.'s and some of the settlements already belong. A strong central organization for New York City is necessary.

3. The last ten-year period has seen a marked increase in Jewish congregational schools and a decrease in the communal Talmud Torahs. Elementary Jewish education is necessarily to be financed principally by tuition fees paid by parents. Jewish communal funds should be expended rather for research, standardization and the establishment of sound educational practices.

There should be called into being a committee on Jewish education. It should consist of representatives of the federations, of the Bureau of Jewish Education, of the Jewish Educational Association and of the three important training schools maintained by the Jewish Theological Seminary, the Hebrew Union College and the Yeshivah. This committee should not aim at centralized control or the administration of the problems, nor should it even imply a federation of the Jewish educational schools and enterprises. Its aim should be rather supervision, aid and expansion of the work already done.

Committee Members Listed.

The set of conclusions made public yesterday was proposed by sixty workers divided into three subcommittees.

$687,647 IS EARNED BY YALE STUDENTS

BUREAU FILLED 6,368 JOBS

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—Yale undergraduates received financial aid and have reported earnings to the University Bureau of Appointments for last year amounting to more than $1,000,000. The total, announced tonight by Albert B. Crawford, director of the Department of Personnel Study and the Bureau of Appointments, was $1,173,267.

The sum of $687,647 was earned during the year by students in positions which were recorded through the bureau. Financial aid extended by the university during the college year, through scholarships and loans, amounted to $485,620.

Three-fourths of the total amount earned and received as financial aid, or $878,452, represents assistance which was rendered the students directly by the university in the form either of financial aid or of employment secured through the Bureau of Appointments.

Mr. Crawford announced that students who are working their way at present make up more than one-third of the university's total enrolment.

Of the $687,647 earned by the students, which marks an increase of nearly $100,000 over last year's figures, $418,920 was earned while the university was in session. The rest, $268,718, was earned during the Summer vacation. A total of 1,246 individuals, or more than 80 per cent of all term-time applicants, secured employment through the bureau during the academic year, and 456 were placed in Summer vacation work.

Employment Bureau Grows.

Earnings from employment obtained directly through the Bureau of Appointments exceeded all previous records, reaching a total of nearly $400,000, of which $284,000 was earned by part-time work during the college year. This latter represents the filling of 6,368 different jobs by 1,246 individuals.

A large part of the year's increase was attributed today to further development of the student agencies, which altogether provided 249 individuals with opportunities to earn $50,000.

Mr. Crawford in his report called attention to an innovation in the practice of wives of graduate or professional students in securing employment. He said:

"An interesting recent development has been the increasing amount of employment obtained by the wives of graduate or professional students.

"Since most of these workers are not themselves attending classes they can frequently accept employment which students, because of schedule conflicts, cannot undertake. The bureau is thus able indirectly to assist in solving the often pressing problems confronting married graduate students without at the same time depriving self-supporting students themselves of such work. During the past year fifty-seven women thus earned $50,000."

Earnings from work during the college year which were reported to the bureau as secured independently also showed an increase, totaling more than $150,000. Though much of this employment is derived from work in connection with various university offices, all such positions not directly referred to students by the bureau are separately classified as "independently secured."

Some of the occupations which the students pursued were enumerated as follows in the report:

Accountant, advertising agent, announcer, artist's model, blood transfusion donor, carpenter, chauffeur, entertainer, housekeeper, pallbearer, gardener, guide, stereopticon operator, teacher, tutor, translator and supernumerary.

"The use of Copper, Brass and Bronze in building one's home means a smaller rate of depreciation and therefore a better investment"

F. L. LIPMAN

IN building a home, the only worthwhile values are lasting values. Saving a few dollars on construction costs by using inferior materials is poor economy. Permanent materials are always the best investment. That is why such bankers as Mr. Lipman advise you to build with rust-proof Copper, Brass and Bronze.

Brass or Copper pipe, Copper flashings, gutters and downspouts and solid Brass or Bronze hardware and lighting fixtures do not depreciate in value or service. They cannot rust. They give permanent cost-free service.

Although these enduring metals cost a trifle more in the beginning, they invariably prove an economy in the long run. And their use adds appreciably to the value of any building.

The Building Service Department of the COPPER & BRASS RESEARCH ASSOCIATION, 25 Broadway, New York, will be glad to advise you without charge about the uses and proper application of these metals.

ELECTRIC UTILITY SERVICE
No Dollar You Spend Buys More Value

AN ELECTRIFIED GARMENT TRADE

New York is the style centre for America. Each year buyers from all over this country come to the metropolis to select their merchandise.

Besides being a style centre, New York makes more than 59% of all the clothing produced in the United States. The manufacturing of women's clothing is the most important industry in the city.

Electric cloth-laying and cutting machines, electric sewing machines which stitch, make seams, insert sleeves, make button holes and sew on buttons, electric machines which embroider and bind and pleat, and modern electric illumination enable the factories to maintain their tremendous output.

Tedious, slow hand work is eliminated. Electrified factories represent a great advance over the "sweatshops" of a generation ago.

The garment centers of this city take their electricity from our companies, for an unfailing supply is essential. Any break in service would stop the work of thousands of people and cause serious loss to the manufacturers.

1,500 ATTEND BALL FOR BROOKLYN CHARITY

Give $75,000 to Aid Jewish Federation—President Asks More Funds to Extend Work.

Nearly 1,500 attended the fifth annual charity dinner and ball of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities last night at the Hotel Astor. Each paid $50 for the privilege of attending and the total of $75,000 realized was added to the federation's community chest for the aid of the ill and needy in Brooklyn.

Nathan D. Shapiro, president of the federation, made the principal address and pointed to the federation's record of achievement in the past year and urged the expansion of its activities.

"Under the roof of the Brooklyn Federation with its twenty-five agencies engaged in medical care, child hygiene and family welfare work," he said, "every poor person can find adequate shelter under the supervision of people who have made social service their life work. The care of the poor and needy is today as much of a profession and requires as much training and study as does the care of the sick by the medical profession.

He reviewed the history of the Brooklyn Federation which was first organized by Nathan S. Jonas twenty-one years ago with nine affiliated organizations. Since 1910 these nine have grown to twenty-five, he said, and the original 3,767 members had in the same period increased to nearly 12,000. More than $7,000,000 has been distributed in that time with the annual collections growing from $90,000 in 1910 to $900,000 in 1929. Service and aid has been extended to more than 50,000 sick and 61,000 needy families, he said, in appealing for funds to extend the work.

"To this end a membership drive is in progress, he went on, and an extensive mail campaign as well as a house-to-house canvass is being planned. "Federations throughout the country," Mr. Shapiro said, "by the merging of charity agencies, have helped to eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort in many directions and have established order where chaos previously prevailed in matters of charity. Federations or community chests make for more efficient, more extensive and more economical service and we call upon every Jew in Brooklyn to come to our support."

Among his novels, besides "The Green Bay Tree," are "Possession," "Early Autumn," "A Good Woman" and "The Strange Case of Miss Annie Spragg."

Mr. Geddes is the author of "The Earth Between," which the Provincetown Playhouse presented last season. E. Cummings.

AMERICAN ROYALTIES PAID TO FRAU STRAUSS

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Nov. 10.—The controversy between Frau Johann Strauss, widow of the famous Viennese composer, and the Shuberts of New York over the Shubert production of "Die Fledermaus" took another turn today. Dr. Blau, head of the music publishing firm of Joseph Weinberger, who represents Frau Strauss, said to your correspondent:

"I have just been cabled by my New York agent that J. J. Shubert in a statement published in THE NEW YORK TIMES asserts he has been informed that Frau Strauss had probably never received any royalties from recent American performances of 'Fledermaus.' The truth is that Mr. Shubert's agent, Kadossa, talked with me and was informed by me that royalties had been paid from the United States on 'Fledermaus' performances in recent years. I cannot understand how Mr. Shubert could have obtained exactly the opposite impression."

In proof of his statement, Dr. Blau showed your correspondent his books indicating that on Feb. 20 last Witmann, his New York agent at 1,650 Broadway, had sent him $500 for American performances of "Fledermaus."

"This is not the first time that American theatre managers have sought to perform European musical pieces without paying royalties," said Dr. Blau.

CATHOLIC ACTORS' GUILD AGAINST SUNDAY SHOWS

Approve Officers' Decision at First Open Meeting of Season —Equity to Be Informed.

The Catholic Actors' Guild of America, at its first open meeting of the season, held last night at Erlanger's Theatre, approved the decision of its officers that the guild is against Sunday night performances in the legitimate theatre.

The guild's points of view, which was reached by Donald Brian, president; Edward J. Kelly, executive secretary; the Rev. William J. Donahue, chaplain, and the Rev. Martin E. Fahy, treasurer, will be forwarded to the Actors' Equity Association, which is now seeking opinions on the subject from the theatrical profession. Mr. Brian's announcement was received with applause at the meeting last night.

Following speeches by James M. Kieran, president of Hunter College; Grant Mitchell and the Rev. Father Fahy, the first act of "Ladies of the Jury," Mrs. Fiske's current starring vehicle, was presented as a special entertainment feature. Other performers were Gerald Griffin, in a song program, and Allyn Gillen and Hugh O'Connell in "Silence," a sketch by John Westley.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

The Masqueraders.

A promising idea is turned into an incredible one in "Shanghai Lady," a talking picture now at the Colony Theatre. It is based on a play called "Drifting," which was written by John Colton and the late Daisy H. Andrews and presented here in 1923, with Alice Brady in the leading role. The story has been somewhat changed for the screen, but the pivotal situation remains. To do it justice, however, it would need a greater versatility than is displayed by Mary Nolan in her acting to fulfill the demands of the part created by Miss Brady.

"Shanghai Lady" is the first audible film to be directed by John S. Robertson, an earnest, but a rather unimaginative director. The trouble with this present work is obviously not all at his door, but it seems surprising that he did not insist upon alterations in the script so that the narrative would have been a trifle less ludicrous.

So far as Miss Nolan's interpretation is concerned, she ought to have been more subdued to carry out the scheme of things. Her part is that of Cassie Cook, a gay young woman who meets with disfavor because of a fight in a disreputable place in Shanghai.

The man in the film is "Badlands" McKinney, acted by James Murray, who first appears with a stubby growth on his jaws and chin, having performed the feat of escaping from a Chinese prison. Through the amazing good offices of an Oriental girl, McKinney finds himself the possessor of a well-filled wallet, and he decides to go to Pekin. Cassie is at the railroad station, apparently intending to make the journey on her looks and her winning smile. Her angel turns out to be McKinney, who only has to hear her suggest something she wants, to go forth to get it.

Cassie is none too careful in her speech. Her slang and poses would not be welcome in the average drawing-room. She is, however, blond and attractive and the dense Mr. McKinney believes Cassie when she tells him that she is a "lady." It is such a relief for McKinney to meet a lady! He then poses as Mr. Jarvis and, as he conducts himself with restraint, he is much more believable Mr. Jarvis than Cassie is a Miss Preston.

In the course of their adventures they find it necessary to leave Pekin in a hurry because of insurrectionists. Mr. Jarvis and Miss Preston travel over the country by ox-cart. They camp in a spot near a gurgling brook (the gurgle being very pronounced), and Mr. Jarvis says that he will go up the stream to fetch some water. Why he couldn't get it where he was is not quite clear; but he goes, and soon one sees McKinney, alias Jarvis, bending over the calm water in which he sees his physiognomy reflected. Like Narcissus, he takes a good look at himself; but unlike Narcissus, he is thinking of his past. Modestly (one surmises) he feels that he is not fit to associate with Miss Preston. She, meanwhile, is experiencing similar attacks of conscience.

Later, when "Badlands" is held up at the point of a pistol and told that he must surrender himself, he pleads to have half an hour in a private dining room with Miss Preston. He orders tea, and while the menial bears in a tray with tea and so forth, this almond-eyed one thinks that he might as well offer the guests a bottle of whisky. Mr. Jarvis is visibly annoyed as he emphasizes that he ordered "tea." Quite obviously "Badlands" feels that the mere sight of a whisky bottle might offend Miss Preston's finer sensibilities.

All this is sketched in a bludgeon-like fashion, leaving one wondering why "Badlands" is so blind that he can't tell that Cassie is no shining social light. Mr. Robertson, so far as this writer can remember, gives no change of clothes to either of his characters, but he insists that Cassie shall always have her phonograph with her.

It is true that it is a melodrama, but even in such ruddy affairs there should be a certain amount of reason. In the end, as one presumes so soon as they meet, Cassie becomes Mrs. "Badlands" McKinney, after both are quite clear regarding each other's past. Mr. McKinney, however, keeps the specific nature of his wrongdoing a secret, or Mr. Robertson does.

Russian Symbolism.

Imaginatively conceived and cleverly photographed though the scenes undoubtedly are in "Arsenal," a Soviet symbolic argument against war which is now holding forth at the Film Guild Cinema, a little of this sort of thing goes a long way. Before it is half over, it becomes more than slightly wearisome, except possibly to those who have spent part of their lives in Russia. Yesterday afternoon the little theatre was filled with Bolshevist sympathizers, who applauded loudly references to a "worker" and also sequences satirizing the Ukrainian bourgeois.

This picture, a silent one, of course, is presumed to deal in a more or less vague way with the struggle in the Ukraine between the Bolsheviki and Petlura's forces, but it has no real drama as it makes no pretense of telling a story. It is a sketch pencilled by the director and there are patches which only those concerned in the making of this production could explain.

So far as the dead are concerned, little is left to the imagination. The director revels in calling attention to a lifeless soldier with a grin on his countenance and on several occasions he swings his camera on the physiognomy of a supposedly dead soldier, calling special attention to the man's glazed eyes. These glimpses of victims of war strike one as being far too real to show on a screen in a place where one hopes to find entertainment.

In an early episode there is an old woman who is forced to stagger over the ground, sowing the soil with seeds. She drops exhausted and then the director, who is Alexander Dovzhenko, turns to a scene of a man in uniform, evidently intended to resemble the late Czar, who is in the throes of writing a letter announcing that he has killed a crow.

These are some excellent examples of camera angles, but at the same time Mr. Dovzhenko tries too often to make his scenes on a slant for effect, possibly to show the "cock-eyed" state of the world in that quarter.

M. Dovzhenko, himself an Ukrainian, pokes fun at the bourgeois of his own locality and in one episode depicts the cowardice of the bourgeois and the courage of a worker, by portraying the former afraid to pull the trigger of a pistol on a proletarian and then showing the proletarian snatching the weapon from the bourgeois and killing him. This part of the offering is shrewdly done, for the bourgeois is made to appear so dazed that he does not know that the pistol has been taken from him, and with an empty hand he makes a motion of pulling a trigger with his forefinger.

In the last passage the Man, who goes through the horrors and deprivations of war, is to be shot as a deserter. The soldiers fire without effect and then the Man, a symbol of bolshevism, bares his chest and declares that "there is something there that bullets cannot kill."

It is a film that defies criticism in many respects, for if one writes that the actions of most of the participants are woefully exaggerated, the director would naturally argue that it is symbolism. At the same time, although one is impelled to be in thorough sympathy with its argument against war, one cannot but help feeling that one-fourth of the footage of this production would be ample for one sitting.

At the Newsreel Theatre this week there is a talking sequence of Senator Brookhart of Iowa exposing "the Wall Street lobby in Washington." He describes the dinner at which Otto Kahn and "a Mr. Loomis" of J. P. Morgan & Co. sat at either side of him and talked about "certain matters."

Another interesting scene is that of Mrs. Henry Ford reading a paper on "The Women's National Farm and Garden Plans." The seldom photographed wife of the auto manufacturer records satisfactorily. She adds charmingly a few impromptu remarks at the conclusion of the prepared talk.

Adolph Lewisohn, 80 years of age, sings a German folk song in rather uncertain voice, and philosophizes on life, advising against worry and suggesting a good time. "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien discusses his ring history from 1895 to 1913 and describes the time when Ketchel knocked him "flat on the canvas."

Mrs. Ward Leigh, who "just loves the sun" so much that she has built a glass retreat at Nyack, takes a sun bath dressed in an Egyptian costume. She reclines on a great bear skin, in the Harrison Fisher manner, and says "I worship the rays of the sun."

In another scene Mme. Sandwina trains her son for the ring. This Amazon shows her boy how to spar and punch a bag in the best boxing tradition.

A FILM OF A FIGHTER.

"Night Parade" Has Hugh Trevor for Hero—He Gets Little Support.

"Night Parade" is another of those fight pictures with moments of spontaneity that hardly make up for the dull dialogue. Screen pugilists, when honestly portrayed, are scarcely interesting except during moments when they are steeped in melodrama. But, even at these times in this film, the situations are just audible repetitions of scores of other silent films and the attention is liable to lag.

Hugh Trevor in the rôle of Bobby Martin, the young middleweight champion, does well in his part, but suffers from lack of support. His trainer-father, for instance, delivers his lines so laboriously as to be negligible in effect. Moreover, his dialogue sequences reek with bromidic sentiment, and his actions are heavy, as are those of Robert Ellis, who impersonates Zelli, an archvillain if there ever was one.

The story, naïve as a boxer's outlook, concerns a young man who has lived an exemplary life until just before the big fight, when he is "framed." After being berated by his father, he casts aside the woman who compromised him, and wins the fight.

Aileen Pringle takes the rôle of the siren. She seems anxious during part of the play to impress one with the fact that she is not really the hard-boiled type she is portraying.

There are other odd characters: the sports writer, strictly impartial, who looks after the "champ" like a nursemaid, and the double-crossing sparring partners, who entertain the crooks in the hero's camp.

"HINDLE WAKES" IN FILM.

British Silent Movie, "Fanny Hawthorn," Is Skillfully Done.

FANNY HAWTHORN, with Estelle Brody, John Stuart, Mavis Ault, Hilda Bayntun Wright, Herman McKinnel and others; directed by Maurice Elvey and Victor Saville from an adaptation of the play "Hindle Wakes"; "Tyrolean Scenes," a comedy; UFA short; color film and "Veterans of the Movies." At the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse.

A sincere drama of English urban life, which is skillfully directed, is the British silent production called "Fanny Hawthorn," which is at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse.

In this simple tale of a cotton mill worker, who, while on a holiday, has an affair with her employer's son and then refuses his offer of matrimony, Estelle Brody as Fanny gives a pleasing performance. Cast as the little, self-respecting mill hand who is a victim of Allen Jeffcote, the heir, because he has falsely told her he loves her, Miss Brody is the principal character in the film. Her mother, impersonated by Mavis Ault, is well cast in a thoroughly baleful rôle.

There are scenes in the cotton mill and glimpses of workers going to and from work. These are excellently done by the directors, who have evidently discovered that a modern technique in direction is helpful. Maurice Elvey and Victor Saville, who supervised the production, use flashes of the hands of the players to advantage in indicating moods. They also include the ancient and honorable "shots" aboard roller-coasters and amusement devices at a seaside resort, as well as views of scenery suggesting Rockwell Kent landscapes.

The subtitles are mostly in Lancashire dialect, and lend a flavor of actuality to the story. The English producers still have a great deal to learn about lighting.

'HELDENLEBEN" REPEATED.

Arturo Toscanini repeated his performance of Strauss's "Heldenleben" with the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall before a sold-out house that prolonged the concert with its personal acclaim of the distinguished conductor. He was repeatedly called out to bow, and presently shook hands with the orchestra's first violin, Scipione Guidi, by way of acknowledgment.

Haydn's symphony in G, preceded by Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture, opened the matinee, the classic numbers being likewise repeated from recent performances before other groups of subscribers. Mr. Toscanini next Thursday is to introduce "The Basque Venus," by a former New Yorker, H. H. Wetzler, while on Wednesday, Nov. 20, instead of the usual Thursday date, he will present Kodaly's "Pasimus Hungaricus" with singers from the Schola Cantorum.

TO LEAVE THEATRE GUILD.

Philip Leigh, Actor in "Karl and Anna," to End 3 Years' Service.

Philip Leigh, who is appearing in the Theatre Guild's production, "Karl and Anna," will end his association with that organization on Saturday night, when the play finishes its run. Mr. Leigh first became associated with the Guild eight years ago in "He Who Gets Slapped," and in 1927 signed a three years' contract, which is being canceled by mutual agreement with Theresa Helburn, the Guild's executive director. Among the Guild plays in which he has been seen are "Strange Interlude," "Ned McCobb's Daughter" and "Marco Millions."

'LUNACY TRIO' STIRS HILARITY AT PALACE

JIMMY SAVO IS AMUSING

Three acts go by at vaudeville's old mother nest this week before the new Palace bill comes really to life. Then, beginning with Jimmy Savo, followed by Helen Kane and the galvanic firm of Clayton, Jackson and Durante, is such an adroit anthology of good and varied entertainment as you are seldom apt to see even on those distinguished boards. For here are features from, respectively, such estimable divertissements of the past as "Almanac," "Good Boy" and "Show Girl."

The Messrs. Clayton, Jackson and Durante are here, much as you perhaps saw them in the employ of Mr. Ziegfeld in Sixth Avenue's upper reaches not so many weeks ago. Together and separately, with their orchestra in the background and Master Durante largely to the fore, they enact their plainly insane antics which, if you know them, comprise the craziest repertoire anywhere available in this illwick. Mr. Durante shouts his famous Broadway epic, Lou Clayton dances with an easy dexterity, and Eddie Jackson sings and struts. But it is their principal and collective gift that just when you think they have reached the climax of lunacy, there is still left one piece of even greater madness. Thus, in their present engagement, Mr. Durante's wild feat of hat and cane tossing is followed by a salute to the importance of, for instance, wood, a festive number concluded by the assembling on the stage of every miscellaneous article in sight or out of it. The Palace has never served as a more fitting asylum except, possibly, when Clayton, Jackson and Durante have been there before.

In a quiet style that is the complete antithesis of his colleagues on the bill, Jimmy Savo comes back to familiar surroundings in the pantomimic act that featured Murray Anderson's late show, and made Mr. Savo celebrated even before that. In his silent, almost Chaplin-like business anent the lighting of a cigar, and in his long-drawn-out wailing of a sentimental ballad, yesterday's audience found its first cause for honest cheers that still echoed when Helen Kane came on for her round of boop-boop-a-doop utterances, of which the second week started on Saturday. Miss Kane is still the insinuating queen of the baby-talk singers, as she has been since that distant day when "That's My Weakness Now" started up a legion of mild-voiced imitators. An always generous performer, she continued yesterday to conquer her audience with four boop-boop-a-doops and a serious song.

Grace Smith and her four anonymous buddies, a negro act, devote their time intensively to dancing with considerable abandon, although Miss Smith stops somewhere on the way to sing a song about keeping out of the South if you don't like milk and honey and other amenities of life in Dixie. There are personality and vigor, too, in the character songs of Rita Burgess Gould, who manages to cry a little at one of her own impersonations, but promptly begs your pardon.

The first three acts on the bill, none of which is particularly impressive, include Kremolina, with the Darras Sisters, in some restless dancing and tumbling; Nitza Vernille and Jack Holland, who play at being sailors and cowboys, and Dick Nash and Midgie Fately in some recognizably old comedy.

May Wirth, equestrienne, and other members of the Wirth family are the headliners at Loew's State this week.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Three premieres are scheduled for tonight. They are "Cross Roads," Martin Flavin's third play of the season, at the Morosco Theatre; "Thunder in the Air," an English play, at the Forty-ninth Street, and "Heads Up," a musical comedy, at the Alvin.

E. H. Sothern will appear in a program of classic recitations, reminiscences and anecdotes this afternoon at the Lyceum Theatre, it is said, of the Actors' Fund. His former manager, Daniel Frohman, is sponsoring his engagement.

Derek Glynne, who last appeared in "Soldiers and Women," has been engaged for "Michael and Mary," the A. A. Milne play which Charles Hopkins is producing.

"The Middle Watch," which closed at the Times Square Theatre on Saturday night, will go immediately to Boston.

"The Silver Swan," an operetta, will open at the Martin Beck Theatre on Wednesday night of next week, instead of Monday, as first announced.

"Oh, Yeah," a comedy of amateur prizefighters, by Thomas G. Gillen, may be produced this season by Mr. Gillen.

"Sisters of the Chorus," the play by Martin Mooney and Thomson Burtis which was tried out during the Summer, will now be produced by Robert V. Newman and Arnold Johnson after "The Sap from Syracuse." The latter play, the work of Jack O'Donnell and John Wray, is in rehearsal.

"Top Speed," the Bolton-Kalmar-Ruby musical show, will open tonight in Philadelphia. "Fifty Million Frenchmen" will be seen in Boston.

Anne Sutherland will return to her original rôle in "Houseparty" now at the Waldorf Theatre tonight. On Wednesday Donald Dilaway will replace Edward Woods in the play.

The opening of Strindberg's "The Pelican," scheduled for tonight at the Mansfield Street Playhouse, 123 Macdougal Street, has been postponed to Wednesday night.

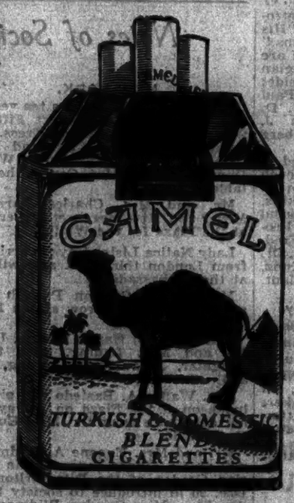
Camels are for knowing smokers!



It's just too bad if any smoker because of misinformation denies himself or herself the pleasure of CAMELS.

New smokers are not always in a position to have a real preference in cigarettes. But when they acquaint themselves with Camels they develop that sense of discrimination that leads to real smoking pleasure. Camels are made so carefully and of so good a blend of choicest cigarette tobaccos that even those with inexperienced smoking taste quickly recognize their superiority. They are for those who appreciate the taste of choice tobaccos, the fragrance of a perfect blend and the soothing mellowness of a really satisfying cigarette.

HENRY HADLEY GIVES A NOVEL PROGRAM

The Manhattan Symphony Orchestra, in the fifth concert since its formation, presented a program of unusual international flavor last evening at Mecca Auditorium. Germany was represented by Abert's arrangement of Bach's Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Finland by Sibelius's "Swan of Tuonela," America and France by Gershwin's "An American in Paris," and Russia by Kalinnikoff's first symphony in G minor.

The earnestness and vigor of Henry Hadley, who conducted all the works performed except "An American in Paris," found an especially favorable opportunity for display in the majestic orchestration of Bach's fourth prelude from the well-tempered clavier and the great organ fugue. The noble choral inserted between them, is so composed that it can be repeated with striking effect in the fugue. Last night the incisive attack of the horns as they followed the conductor's baton was an effective climax. The arranger shows that he himself was a string player by his idiomatic handling of that section, for like Koussevitzky, he, too, was a double bass player and later a conductor.

In the Sibelius composition, one most difficult as to balance of tone because of the mystic and delicate coloring, the new organization achieved commendable results for the short time it has been together. The solo English horn with its somber theme to suggest the swan that swims majestically on the river in Tuonella, the Finnish Kingdom of Death, sounded with the realism the composer must have had in mind. And no less realistic were the bass clarinet and viola portions.

Mr. Gershwin, who evidences his versatility by writing piano concertos, musical comedy hits and orchestral rhapsodies, and who plays and conducts his own music, appeared as guest conductor in his "An American in Paris." Though the work is well known, its effect upon the audience seemed as fresh and novel as if it were being heard at a premiere. The piquant rhythms, the dramatic entrances of solo violin and trumpet, the bizarre strokes in the percussion section, all intrigued the auditors once more.

About every possible instrument in the family of automobile horn, drum, wood and metal xylophone, and of course, saxophone, transported the hearer on a magic carpet to the Place Pigalle, Boulevard Strasbourg, and other more or less familiar sections of Paris. The composer-conductor was recalled many times and prevailed upon the orchestra players to rise and share the honors with him.

The evening closed with the graceful and brilliant symphonic work of the invalid and introspective Ballantikoff, which received a commendable reading.

OVATION AT FAREWELL.

London String Quartet Greeted With Cries of "Come Again!"

Local patrons of the London String Quartet's consecutive survey of chamber music "from Haydn to Hindemith" gave the players an upstanding ovation at the close of their five daily programs yesterday afternoon in the Town Hall. The audience filled nearly all seats of both ground floor and gallery, and the applause at the finish was mingled with cries of "More!" and "Come again!" from all parts of the house.

Hindemith had his innings after some dozen composers for the series, German classic and romantic, the moderns of Russia and France and now the "futurist" of them all. It was his F-minor quartet, Op. 10, No. 1, whose "Sehr lebhaft," "Thema mit variationen" and hour-long "Finale" offered indeed a muscular-toned workout for vigorous and devoted players. Their performance, incidentally, showed it to be enjoyable music, enticing in its ever-veiled themes, its rhythmic repetitions and never-pausing "peroration."

For Debussy's G-minor Op. 10, and Ravel's quartet in F the players also displayed an enthusiasm of personal interest such as England's latter-day musicians have shown in contemporary music on the Continent. It would be profitable musically if yesterday's demand for return should lead them to present modern British music in the same light. This quartet, however, is outward bound through the Western Hemisphere in a tour of the two Americas.

Recital by Grace Fogarty.

Grace Edmond Fogarty sang last evening at the former Princess Theatre, now the Assembly, assisted by Alfonso Romero, tenor, and by Lucille Blabe at the piano. With naturally agreeable and fluent style, the singer, known to the dramatic stage as Mrs. Frank Fogarty, presented in appropriate costumes the grouped songs of old England, ancient China, pre-Christian Ireland and two Biblical texts, Concone's "Judith" and Mary Turner Salter's "Cry of Rachel." The tenor added to his Mexican and Spanish lyrics the flower song from "Carmen."

Recital at Sherry's Tomorrow.

Mrs. Charles M. Seacombe will present a recital tomorrow morning at Sherry's. The artists will be Elsie Ferguson, Ernest Truex, Ernest Milton, Roy Cropper, Eleanore Ninon and Leo Martin and the Biarritz Quartet.

MUSIC NOTES.

"La Boheme" will open the fourth week of the Metropolitan Opera one week from tonight with Miura, Alda and Ottavio Scotti, and with Mr. Bellezza at the baton.

Alexander Glazunov has cabled to Sol Hurok, manager of his tour, that he will arrive Thursday night or Friday morning by the Rochambeau. Next Monday he will be the guest at a reception given by Reinhold Werrenrath.

The Copland-Sessions Concerts of Contemporary Music have issued a "last call" for works in manuscript or newly printed for consideration by the sponsors of these concerts at their office, Room 1001 Steinway Building.

The Art Alliance of America has an invitation program of "Impressions" tomorrow at 65 East Fifty-sixth Street. Taking part are Marceline d'Alroy, Laura Williams and Maurice Beasly.

Nino Ruisi, Ivan Steschenko and others have arranged the first annual banquet of the American Opera Artists, Inc., to be held Wednesday evening of this week at the Hotel McAlpin.

1,000 FAIL TO HEAR ROBESON

Carnegie Hall Crowded—Baritone's Audience Demands Many Encores.

Paul Robeson's second recital of American negro music attracted more than a capacity audience at Carnegie Hall last evening, at least a thousand persons being turned away.

The actor-baritone was in good voice and again impressed his hearers with the artistic integrity and the absence of sophisticated artifice in all he sang. H. T. Burleigh's "Deep River" in the program's first group had to be repeated. There were many new arrangements of old favorites by Lawrence Brown, who assisted at the piano in a score of the best known "spirituals." Besides two settings by Edward Boatner, the earlier pieces included Avery Robinson's version of "Water Boy," and an original air, "Exhortation," by Will Marion Cook. The crowded house made constant demand for encores.

NEW QUARTET IN RECITAL.

Stradivarius Group Gives Brahms and Beethoven.

The Stradivarius Quartet, successive in part to the artistic personnel of the Pisanellys, and soon to be heard in a series of concerts uptown, made its first local appearance last evening at the weekly musicale of the Educational Alliance on East Broadway. Gerald Warburg, 'cellist of the new group, and Leo Levy, assisting pianist on this occasion, both were greeted as friends of the alliance, of which they are directors.

The veteran Alfred Pochon and Nicolas Moldavan, with Wolfe Wolfinsohn, first violin, completed the ensemble in Beethoven's quartet Op. 18 No. 4 and Brahms's quintet.

Two short interludes were Moussorgsky's "Old Castle" and Hasse's "Minuet," both arranged for quartet by Mr. Pochon.

Gordon Craig Defers Visit.

The visit to this country of Gordon Craig for a lecture tour has been deferred until January. Mr. Craig, according to his American manager, Emilie Sarter, will now arrive for a birthday celebration on Jan. 16, planned by the League of Political Education, under whose auspices, during the same week, he will make his first platform appearance.

ADMIRERS IN LONDON MOB YEHUDI MENUHIN

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Yehudi Menuhin, 12-year-old violinist, was almost mobbed by enthusiastic admirers at Albert Hall today when he gave his first full-length recital in London before 6,000 persons.

Hundreds rushed to the stage clapping and shouting for more at the end of a two-hour program. After encores were given many auditors clambered onto the platform and pressed so close that the child could scarcely draw his bow.

GEORGE KNISELY SINGS.

George Knisely, baritone, was assisted by the Barbizon String Quartet in his first recital here yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Barbizon. To a series of lyrics by Richard Strauss, the singer's program added works of Griffes, Cecil Burleigh, Ward Stephens and La Forge. Mr. Knisely once sang in the glee club of Wooster College in Ohio and, on coming to New York to study voice, worked in a department store and in Summers on a farm to pay for lessons. He has more recently been a soloist at the Park Avenue Baptist Church and appeared in the "Grand Street Follies" and with Mary Lewis in the talking films.

Gladys Swarthout in Opera Concert.

Gladys Swarthout, one of this season's newcomers at the Metropolitan, was applauded by a large audience at last night's "opera concert" in the popular "Habanera" and "Seguidilla" from "Carmen." Among other airs and ensembles, Dreda Aves headed a quartet from "Traviata" and the Misses Lerch and Divine, Messrs. Jagel, Windheim, Basiola and Pasero finished with the "Lucia" sextet. Wilfred Pelletier led orchestral numbers from "Sicilian Vespers," Offenbach's "Orpheus," Mascagni's "Radcliff," and a favorite intermezzo from Wolf-Ferrari's "Jewels of the Madonna."

WAR AND PEACE.

Of recurring Armistice Day it may truthfully be said that "tenderly the haughty day" brings to all minds remembrance and gratitude. The lapse of time could never lessen the tribute due those who laid down their lives for their country, or those ready to do so. But there is still something more tangible than sentiment to offer to the survivors. In many cases today has vivid reminders for us of LINCOLN'S words: "To care for him who shall "have borne the battle, and for his "widow and his orphan." Our veterans of the war make no parade of what they did in it. The Americans who won the Congressional Medal of Honor are as averse to talking of their exploits as were the Englishmen who won the Victoria Cross, when they were welcomed by the Prince of WALES in London on Saturday. More excitable and sentimental French and German soldiers have written expansively of the terrible things suffered in the trenches and on the march under fire. Most of our men will not even talk of such matters. They took them as a dire necessity that had to be gone through without unmanly whimpering. But the sacrifice and the heroism were there just the same. A grateful nation does not forget.

The chief way in which we may pay our debt to these men, the best legacy to be left to the generation pressing on after them, is in seeing to it that no such war be allowed again to fill the earth with blood and tears. A book published today by EMIL LUDWIG is entitled "July '14." In it, along with a great deal of emotional and even sensationalized history of that fateful month, is printed a record of every available statement or document or diplomatic communication of those critical weeks. From the reading of them one draws the inevitable conclusion, which was drawn later by no less a person than Sir EDWARD GREY, that the war might have been prevented. Grave faults were committed by responsible statesmen and military men. But the main lack was an international organization which, with good-will and honesty on the part of all the governments concerned, might have avoided the catastrophe.

Fortunately, during the eleven years since the Armistice the world has taken long and promising steps toward providing these great preventives of war. Today the thoughts and desires of mankind are fixed more strongly than for years past upon the means of achieving and cherishing a just and lasting peace. The best way of celebrating Armistice Day this year is highly to resolve to support the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of England in their united hope and purpose to make war on a large scale hereafter impossible.

SOLVING BY IGNORING.

The most striking passage in RAMSAY MACDONALD'S speech at the Lord Mayor's banquet in London on Saturday night was the one in which he gave the positive assurance that the question of "the freedom of the seas" would not be taken up at all at the coming naval conference. This is an extraordinary change of attitude for him. After he became Prime Minister, and before he sailed for America, he more than once dwelt upon the supreme importance of altering the historic British position about blockade, the rights of neutrals, and contraband in time of war. All these and other matters coming under the general description of the freedom of the seas have been sources of friction and misunderstanding which Mr. MACDONALD felt it imperative to remove. But it has been noted that since his first conversation with Ambassador DAWES he has not once alluded to this subject. In none of his addresses in the United States did he do so. Now he frankly announces that what he not long ago considered vital to a naval settlement is not to be discussed at all for the time being. The inference is irresistible that he has come to this decision in accordance with views pressed upon him by the Washington Administration. By so much it is a success for American diplomacy.

What are the reasons which could have led President HOOVER and Prime Minister MACDONALD to drop, at least temporarily, debate of this thorny subject? No country has stood up more firmly (although not consistently) for the freedom of the seas than the United States. Why should it now be agreed not to mention it? The answer is implied in what Mr. MACDONALD has just said. The freedom of the seas has no "actuality," as the French say, in times of peace. Only in war does it become applicable and debatable. But the point that Mr. MACDONALD makes is that with a solemn and binding universal treaty to renounce war as an instrument of national policy, and with the movement to reduce naval armament all round to its lowest possible terms, the danger of a great war has been averted. If there is to be no such war, why waste time and confuse international counsels by discussing and perhaps quarreling over what it shall be lawful to do in time of war? Thus the idea evidently is to get rid of the dispute about the freedom of the seas by ignoring it. The MacDonald algebra would lay it down that there simply is no equation to solve if the unknown x, freedom of the seas, is just left out of it.

A LOOK AHEAD.

The election is over and Mayor WALKER is assured of another four years in office. Even his critics give him credit not only for engaging personal qualities, but for exceptional ability; even his friends have not found the record of the past four years all that they might desire. "He could be a great Mayor if he would," The Sun said the day after election. At the same time The Sun called to the Mayor's attention eighteen "things that ought to be done, "or well started, in his next four "years." At least twelve of them were public improvements.

While these are all worthy enterprises, many of them of the first importance, the list might be criticized for putting too much emphasis on the outward and visible sign, where what is equally needed is an inward, if not spiritual, grace. Chicago of Big BILL THOMPSON'S day saw a great expansion of public works. When a Mayor has $500,000,000 to spend, it is comparatively easy and agreeable to appropriate $20,000,000 or $30,000,000 for a badly needed new bridge or tunnel or elevated highway, to be embellished with a nice plaque:

> My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:
> Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!

It is not so easy—it takes courage and hard work—for an administration like Mayor WALKER'S to find a solution of the vexing problems that confront it. Here are some of them:

1. City Planning.—New York needs most of all an official planning commission to advise the Board of Estimate with regard to zoning, limitation of building bulks, layout of streets and highways and the means of securing a better distribution of population. This was the central recommendation of the Mayor's own Committee on Plan and Survey. Mayor WALKER himself went to Albany last Winter to support the planning board bill, but the Legislature failed to act on it.

2. Transit Relief.—New subways are not enough. Real relief will not be afforded until all subways and elevated lines, new and old, have been brought under unified control, for operation "at the present or lowest possible fare," future lines to be laid out as integral parts of this coordinated system and financed in such a way as not to overburden the taxpayer or interfere with other necessary municipal enterprises.

3. Traffic Relief.—Here is the place for great public improvements like the Triborough Bridge, the Thirty-eighth Street Tunnel, and the West Side Motor Highway. No. 1 is essential to No. 3. In addition the city has at its disposal the Day & Zimmermann report, the studies of the Regional Plan Committee and the recommendations of the Citizens' Traffic Committee.

4. Sewage Disposal, Garbage Disposal, Street Cleaning.—Legislation approved last week brings these under centralized control. Much will depend on the calibre of the men appointed to the new Sanitary Commission.

5. Water Supply.—It will not be safe for the city to delay much longer the $275,000,000 project for impounding the flood waters of the Delaware. At present its hands are tied by litigation.

6. Improved Housing.—The new dwellings law hardly touched the larger problem of affording adequate housing at low rentals for the small wage earner. Nor was the Mayor's Chrystie Street project launched under any too favorable auspices.

7. Departmental Reorganization.—Three years ago the Mayor arranged to have the Board of Estimate designate himself, Controller BERRY and President MCKEE of the Board of Aldermen a committee of three to investigate the municipal departments with a view to consolidation. This committee appears to have been sunk without a trace. Later, the Plan and Survey body recommended "a specially consti-"tuted official body with adequate "funds and staff to work out the "difficult legal, administrative and "governmental problems involved."

8. Economy.—The city has grown in the past ten years, but not at a pace sufficient to justify an increase in the budget from $273,689,485 to $562,078,223. The time to retrench is not next October, but now—by adopting the fiscal reforms suggested some months ago by Lieut. Gov. LEHMAN and his associates, by drawing up an orderly capital outlay program, by dusting off Controller BERRY'S pension plan, by taking steps to effect departmental reorganization and reclassification, by working out a far-sighted policy for financing new subways.

No one really knows better than the Mayor how swollen are the city's present-day expenditures. "I fully "agree with those who claim that "the cost of the administration of "public business in this city is too "great," he remarked to a visitor some months ago. Here is an unusual opportunity for the Mayor.

DECLINED WITHOUT THANKS.

Senator SMOOT made on Saturday what might appear to be a most handsome offer to the coalition now in control of the Senate. Admitting the fact that they had the votes to override him and the Senate Finance Committee whenever they chose, he proposed that the Senate adjourn until Nov. 20, that in the interval the Democrats and the Insurgent Republicans should write a whole new tariff bill after their own hearts, and that then it could be passed, so far as he and the regular Republicans were concerned, without debate. Nothing could seem fairer. But the offer was declined, suspicious Senators of the coalition walking around it as if they were invited to walk into a trap. Senator BORAH almost made his own the words of the skeptical man exposed to female blandishments.

> On me she smiled,
> But unbeguiled,
> I saw the snare.

If Senator SMOOT was entirely sincere, his perceptions were a little dulled, as heaven knows they might well be after these weeks of trial and humiliation for him. It is a mistake to suppose that the rebellious coalition wants to write a bill of its own. Its chief desire is to destroy the bill of the Senate Finance Committee. If the leaders of the coalition were locked up in a committee room, and told not to come out until they had produced a measure satisfactory to all their supporters, they would never come out. If the door was burst open, they would doubtless be found lying about wounded after bloody rows with each other. And then for Senator SMOOT to imagine that a promise to get on without debate would be tempting to them! Their pride is that they can speak from morn till dewy eve and "resoloot till the cows come home." Senator SMOOT will have to try again, though it is hard to see how he can make a bid high enough to win acceptance from his triumphant and gloating opponents in the Senate.

SIMPLE, INEXPENSIVE JUSTICE.

At the dinner of the Columbia Law School graduates Governor ROOSEVELT spoke not as a lawyer but as an "optimist" and counsel for the layman. It was right that he should represent the general interests of the great body of citizens. In one respect, at least, we should hate to think and are not convinced that he represents its opinions. Is there "a great and growing impression" that the old patter is true about "one law for the rich and another for the poor"? That has little support in fact save in exceptional cases, mostly in the difficult field of conspiracy. As a rule, murderers are not "malefactors of great wealth." In whose behalf is the whole machinery of delay and evasion so frequently and successfully employed?

The Governor longs for the simplification of law, judicial procedure and justice. No less an authority than Judge POUND of the Court of Appeals has lately told us that the criminal law of New York is reasonably clear. Short forms of indictment are the rule. Immaterial error is not regarded. New trials are seldom granted. Yet gang robberies, absolutely careless of human life, "are seemingly on the increase." The parts of the law, "fairly cer-"tain and simple at present, are not "the parts which command most "respect." Is it because they hold that the law favors the rich that our afflicted criminal classes share in "the growing contempt" of it?

If there are "conflicting statutes," they should be repealed. But how can law be otherwise than complicated and uncertain? In the courts it is the application of general principles to particular cases. If that application could be foretold, there would be no need of counsel. There is just complaint of "unreasonable technicalities," though an increasing tendency among Judges to disregard them; but the formal processes of the court, the great mass of legal rules, are, as has been said, "noth-"ing more than wise business ex-"pedients and do not affect substan-"tive legal rights." The courts cannot upset either principles or rules for the benefit of a single defendant. Moreover, it is the people who make, through their representatives, the rules and the laws which the Judges are compelled to follow.

Sometimes it seems as if some critics of the existing system expected courts to turn out an instant, ready-made procedure, calculated for the latitude of each case. The courts and the bar, if the judge is energetic enough to repress the pernicious activity and volubility of too many of its members, can do much to speed justice. There may be, there often should be, swift decisions on particular points; but the clamor for a swift decision shouldn't make us forget that a just decision in any fairly complex suit requires deliberation and time. With all sympathy for Governor ROOSEVELT'S generous optimism, we repeat the inevitable limitations laid down by Judge POUND:

> That the law may be made more cheap, expeditious, certain and clear is not a hopeless idea, but it cannot be made cheap in the sense that gasoline is cheap, expeditious in the sense that service at the quick-lunch counter is expeditious, certain in the sense that death is certain or clear in the sense that the multiplication table is clear.

THE TARDIEU CABINET.

In the French Chamber as at present constituted either Left or Right with M. BRIAND makes a majority. The margin of approximately 75 votes by which the Tardieu Cabinet secured its first two votes of confidence last week represents just about the strength which BRIAND can swing to any Ministerial combination. He will remain the pivotal figure in French Parliamentary life and government until the Young plan has come into force and the war is "liquidated." Until that time it is of minor importance which side of the Chamber builds a government. Had the Radical-Socialists been able to surmount their own dissensions there would now be a Left Cabinet functioning, with M. BRIAND as Foreign Minister.

M. TARDIEU'S presence at the head of the Cabinet with an ardent Rightist in the post of Minister of War cannot affect the broad lines of French foreign policy as shaped by the march of events—plus M. BRIAND. In the evacuation of the Rhineland there may be a brief delay. M. TARDIEU was careful to state that the generally discussed date of June 30, 1930, was conditional on the rate of progress the application of the Young plan will have made. But there is some reason for believing that even this caution was uttered for tactical reasons at a moment when Right spirits are running a bit high. When the Hugenberg anti-reparations law has been disposed of by plebiscite in Germany—and M. BRIAND has had assurances from Berlin that the thing will be over with before the end of the year—there will be a softer mood at Paris.

Even the present state of mind cannot be called unfriendly. It is significant that M. BRIAND, in the act of seeking support from a Right majority in the Chamber, should not have hesitated to pronounce a eulogy on three German statesmen—STRESEMANN, RATHENAU and ERZBERGER. Until the definite inauguration of the Young plan has come about, the difference between Left and Right Government can be a difference only of detail—a little more or less iron in the words addressed to Germany, an emphasis of friendship or reserve, a slight speeding up or delay in the execution of plans. But a vital departure from the peace policies of the last four years is inconceivable.

HIGH-AND-LOW TARIFFISTS.

Senator EDGE of New Jersey is a kindly man and, President HOOVER obviously believes, a diplomatic man. But the Senator will be pardoned an expression of indignation against the Southern Democratic Senators who vote stoutly for high tariffs on home products and for low tariffs on the output of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. His letter to the Southern Tariff Association, discussing this foible, and highly resolving to put an end to it if he can, has provoked the ire of the patriots under discussion. But even such wrath as Senator CARAWAY'S, when the witness ARNOLD suggested that the Arkansas had voted for a duty on rice, cannot alter the public realization that Mr. EDGE has touched his Southern colleagues in a vulnerable spot. Every day, in every way, they are proving that General HANCOCK was right.

Yet the conditions prevailing in the Senate make it doubtful that Senator EDGE can ever force Senators who are "protectionists in "any vote directly affecting their "own section" to be other than "anti-protectionists for other parts "of the country." The Southern Democrats have found that they can get what they want by making arrangements with the Western Progressives, who are interested chiefly in agricultural tariffs. From that coalition comes the majority. In other days a few Southern Senators would regularly vote with the Republican regulars on certain manufacturing schedules, and oddly enough their sections would receive recognition when it came to protection of vital raw materials. But that was when the Republicans really controlled the Senate. Now the balance has shifted. In these other days it was always a risk for Southern Democrats outside Louisiana to vote for protective schedules on wool or steel, even when it had to be done. Today, when the price for local protection is merely a vote to increase the agricultural schedules, Senators from the agricultural South are in clover. Everything they do about the tariff is good politics, particularly when they denounce in thunderous tones the "unconstitutionality" of the flexible provision taking tariff-making out of the hands of Congress and thus causing the Founding Fathers to turn over in their graves.

They may be temporarily embarrassed by what Senator EDGE says. They may even be angered, as Mr. CARAWAY was, when the witness spoke of that vote on rice. But they are sitting pretty, and they intend to stay "thataway."

PARENTS AND SCHOOLS.

Father and mother used to visit the schoolhouse only on the rare occasions when a special program was given. They heard songs and recitations, but saw nothing of the regular work that was the pride or despair of the small student. It was exciting to have parents see the surroundings in which daily routine was carried on, but it was not so stimulating as a visit to classes would have been. For several years the public schools of New York have celebrated National Education Week by inviting the two million parents to watch their children at work. This week is another such occasion.

It is appropriate that this week should also see the beginning of work for the study groups of the Child Study Association of America. Registrations, begun last week, indicate a wider interest than ever in co-operation between parents and educators. At first mothers came into the study groups in greater numbers, but now many fathers have joined. Some of the classes are formed for the study of parent-education subjects, others have been organized on the basis of interest in children of the same age. Leaders of the movement are convinced that the objective point of view acquired in these classes brings about a better adjusted family life. Beginning with an appeal to the natural affection of parents for their children, the association goes on to demonstrate how it may be made a force for bringing out the best qualities in all members of the family. It is a force which can damage as well as benefit if it is not directed wisely. Much emphasis is laid on the modern ideal of the child's independence.

One excellent way of giving parents an impartial view of their children is to let them observe them in the leveling light of the schoolroom. At home it is so easy to sue Johnny and Mary as much more or perhaps much less capable than they really are. Surrounded by their fellows they appear fairly equal. It is to be hoped that all the parents who have joined study groups will avail themselves of the urgent invitation of children and teachers to observe the boys and girls at work.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Shrinkage in British Trade Unions.

While the British Labor party is enjoying unprecedented prosperity the trade unions which constitute the bone and sinew of the British labor movement, have been showing a steady decline in membership. In the peak year 1920, according to The Ministry of Labour Gazette, there were in Great Britain and Northern Ireland 1,367 unions, with a membership of 8,339,000. In 1928 the number of organizations was 1,123, with a membership of 4,794,000.

This decline has been progressive and sustained and therefore cannot be attributed to the temper and policies of the trade unions at any given time. The loss in membership during the two years of militant temper preceding the general strike of 1926 was about the same as during the two years of disillusion after the strike. The rise of trade union membership immediately after the war and its decline since 1920 has been a world-wide phenomenon.

Critics of the unaggressive policies of the American Federation of Labor emphasize recent losses in membership, and contrast it with militant British labor. But whereas the American Federation of Labor membership today is about 75 per cent of the four million-odd of 1920, the British trade unions have only about 55 per cent of 1920.

Dirigibles for Commerce.

Rear Admiral MOFFETT, who drove a golden rivet in the first ring of the new dirigible at Akron last Thursday, has always had faith in that type of aircraft. He had a great deal to do with the inclusion of the rigid airships of 6,000,000 cubic feet capacity in the five-year naval aviation program adopted by Congress. The cost is not to exceed $8,000,000. It is well to build one at a time in view of the fact that the British ships R-100 and R-101 are experiments.

As every dirigible has been an improvement upon its predecessors, there is warrant for believing that the new American airship will have greater lifting power, speed and range than the British dirigibles. It is designed to have three times the radius of the Los Angeles and will have eight engines to the other's five.

While Admiral MOFFETT has declared that the United States cannot afford to neglect a type of aircraft "which makes it possible to maintain constant surveillance far beyond airplane range" and has used other arguments to maintain the military importance of the dirigible, he has had more to say about the commercial value of the lighter-than-air ships. They furnish, according to him, "the quickest, cleanest, most comfortable long-distance method of transportation known to man." Night and fog "are not difficulties for an airship." He rates them as much higher for safety than airplanes.

Proper Housing for Girls.

Not all enterprises for the aid of the needy have met with a response from those intended to benefit by it, like that of the working girls who have been helped by Miss CORNELIA E. MARSHALL and the Association to Promote Proper Housing for Girls. At the annual conference to be held next week representatives of the various girls' clubs in the city will tell what they think about their needs, their present accommodations and about "living one's own life."

The long waiting lists are sufficient indication that the friends of girls already settled in the clubs would like the same sort of homes. When Miss MARSHALL and her assistants established the first bureau to find desirable quarters for girls on small salaries the demand was so far in excess of the supply that plans were made at once for clubs. Even now, with two clubs and the organized boarding houses, accommodations are still insufficient.

The most satisfactory answer to the housing problem for working girls is the self-supporting, self-governing club. The two now operating are a source of great satisfaction to the association. At present it is able to make loans for the establishment of other residence clubs for which many girls supporting themselves on small wages are eagerly waiting.

Thunder on the Right.

An awesome sanhedrim of medical thinkers is marshaled by Science Service of Washington in protest against longer skirts and corsets. It is not so much the present styles which these hygienists and publicists fear as the trend. They think it may go steadily back to wasp waists and dust-catching hems. Dr. HARRIS, president of the American Medical Association, finds the present "an unfortunate and unhealthful change." His successor-to-be, Dr. MORGAN, thinks the growing change "regrettable in the extreme," even though "less suggestive to the masculine mind." The Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service does not believe that tight corsets are coming back, but he sees danger signs. "It is probable that the change in styles should be looked on with disfavor" is as far as Coroner BUNDESON of Cook County, Ill., will go. Dr. ALICE HAMILTON of Harvard Medical School thinks the effect of change "can only be very deplorable," but Dr. ELDRIDGE of Johns Hopkins thinks the change will be resisted.

Women who want to continue to wear less-than-knee-length skirts and to refuse any form of girdling will perceive from this that the doctors of the land will support them heartily. Will that endorsement, however, be enough if sufficient other women follow the contrivers? Though the reflection be deemed cynical, we doubt it.

Senatorial Requirement.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If Senatorial smelling is to be acceptable henceforth as evidence in prohibition cases, then would it not seem just and advisable that eligibility to the high office of United States Senator should include the passage of an olfactory test? Such grading of smelling capacity, that is, by the constituted authorities as would guarantee safety to the unsuspecting.

Even railroad managers hesitate to jeopardize the lives of those who trust them for safe travel by postponing examination of the engineer until after the wreck to see if he is color-blind. N. DESCHAMPS.

ARMISTICE DAY.

He lifts to me an eager, childish face—
"Then it's a holiday this afternoon?"
For I have said we shall be going soon
Across the fields into our woodsy place.
November fields that crunch with frosted things!
There he will laugh at squirrels' caperings,
And say, "Here, pleweed bloomed; here, goldenrod!"
Then, "Daddy, why is this a holiday?"
(He knows the names of field flowers every one,
Yet naught of war, he, an ex-soldier's son!)
"That fields may teach us peace, son," I shall say.
And add a prayer that he may never know
What fields had taught to me brief years ago!

THE GOVERNOR AND LAW.

Responsibility of Incompetent Judges and Those Who Appoint Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In his widely quoted speech at the Columbia Law School dinner last night Governor Roosevelt made some ill-considered remarks about the alleged inequality of rich and poor before the law and severely criticized the administration of justice in our courts. He proposed as remedies the appointment of another commission and more legislation.

Isn't the Governor off on the wrong scent? The real difficulty is not so much with the rules of law and procedure as with the men who apply them. What we need is not more legislation but less politics in the selection of judges.

The business of being a judge is a highly skilled profession. It is no job for novices or bunglers. It is beset with opportunities for mistake and mischief. It needs exceptional qualifications of temperament, experience and knowledge of the law. Only men who have demonstrated that they possess these qualifications should be selected for judicial office. I venture the assertion that if we chose our judges from the leaders of the bar, as they do in England, the talk about the imperfections of legal procedure would soon die to a whisper.

Unfortunately, among us eminence at the bar is seldom rewarded by judicial office. With occasional exceptions lawyers are selected for the bench on account of party services or other political considerations.

A striking instance occurred in this city only a few days ago. The resignation of Judge Maneuse had created a vacancy on the bench of our highest criminal court. The Governor promptly appointed a man eligible from the political and racial viewpoint but practically unknown to the members of his profession.

No slur is intended upon the appointee, who will have ample opportunity to demonstrate the wisdom of the selection, as he has been nominated and elected for the full term by the party in power in this city. The point is that the appointment was not based primarily on considerations of legal experience and demonstrated fitness for the office.

When a political leader rails at the defects in the administration of the law he should not be surprised if some bystander points the finger and exclaims "Thou art the man!"

FRANCE AND REFUGEES.

Political Exiles Are Tolerated If They Obey the Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is unfortunate for France that Italians taking exception to the present regime in Rome chose Paris as their headquarters. But if something or somebody must be blamed for this condition it is not the French Government or the Paris Prefect of Police but European topography which places Paris so near the Italian border, and also the natural proximity of Italian political exiles for choosing as a place of refuge a country near their own and whose language they generally speak.

The traditional policy of France has been one of complete tolerance toward political refugees. As long as these refugees do not violate France's laws, they are not disturbed. According to French law political opinions, however subversive theoretically, do not constitute a crime. This is true not only of foreigners in conflict with their government, but also of French citizens who do not agree with the existing parliamentary system. Although France is a thoroughly democratic country she tolerates even Communists and monarchists who dream of but one thing—the destruction of the Constitution. There are Communist Deputies in the Chamber, where they enjoy all the privileges accorded government supporters.

It is only when these political dissidents, be they French or aliens, attempt material damage against persons or property, or create disorders, that the police interfere and the penal code comes into play. This liberal policy is at the very bottom of the Constitution of France, being clearly expressed in the "Droits de l'homme et du citoyen," which are the true fundamentals of republican France. Should there be any change to it, political liberty would be but a farce.

Nor can the fact that Prince Humbert's aggressor was the holder of an identity card delivered to him by the Paris Prefect of Police be used against France. Such cards are issued to all aliens residing in France for more than two months. American visitors do not escape the rule. There is no guarantee attached to it. It is only a means by which the French police can trace criminal offenders, anarchists who aim to destroy property and agents provocateurs from foreign lands. No passport—as one will easily understand—is required from political exiles.

France's right to welcome political exiles is imprescriptible. She cannot take sides in issues that concern only foreign governments, and should there be a sudden change in Italian politics she would have toward Fascists fleeing oppression the same liberal attitude as she observes now toward Italians of opposite political convictions. The Trade-Mark Section.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in THE TIMES with a great deal of interest the Merchants' Association's exposure of the claims of the American Federation of Labor which led to the passage by the Senate of the trade-mark and patent section of the tariff bill.

It now becomes fully apparent that this section was passed on incorrect premises, and that instead of benefiting labor, the enactment of the section would tend to reduce industry and thereby decrease the amount of labor in the United States.

CUSTOMS METHODS TO BE PARLEY THEME

Pan-American Conference Next Week Will Try to Standardize Practices.

TO END TRADE HINDRANCES

Twenty-one Countries Will Send Commerce Experts to the Meeting in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Means of removing hindrances to foreign commerce, thus permitting the further development of inter-American trade, will be sought by delegates from twenty-one nations to the Pan-American commission on customs and port formalities, which will convene here at the Pan American Union Building Nov. 18. Experts in these two branches of commerce will be delegates to the conference.

At the opening plenary session, two general committees, one on customs procedure and the other on port formalities, will be named to consider the agenda of the conference, and to report their recommendations to the full sessions for adoption.

Simplification of the formalities and as far as possible, standardization of the principles and rules of customs procedure and elimination of unnecessary port formalities are to be sought by the conference as a means of developing maritime communications and the normal growth of commerce between the nations of the Americas.

Consideration of these subjects by a conference of the nations was recommended recently in resolutions of the governing board of the Pan American Union by the fifth and sixth International Conferences of American States and by the third Pan-American Commercial Conference.

Methods Cause Confusion.

While there is general similarity in principle and purpose among the twenty-one American republics regarding collection of customs duties and charges, there is a variety of methods by which these charges are made, leading frequently to confusion, misunderstandings and delays in the conduct of international business, a statement by the union, announcing the conference, said.

It is not the purpose of the conference, it was pointed out, to interfere in any way with the general tariff policies of the different countries, or their rights to establish the amount of import duties and charges on different commodities, but rather to consider the methods by which these charges are made and to find, if possible, better methods which will permit international trade to flow more smoothly.

Simplification of the variety of units upon which customs duties are levied is one of the important proposals which will be considered.

Customs duties are now levied in the American republics in various ways, some on the basis of gross weight, others by gross weight less tare, net weight, by the piece, unit of length, surface or volume, or by value, depending on the nature of the goods, the method of preparation for shipment or sale, or the particular stipulations of the tariff schedule of the individual country.

Not to Affect Tariff Policy.

Uniformity in these methods, it is hoped, should be attained without affecting the tariff income or the broad tariff policy of any one country. The conference is also to seek provisions for the consolidation of customs charges in those countries where this principle has not been put into effect.

The sponsors of the conference hope the merging of all customs duties, surcharges and taxes, with their varying bases and amounts, into a single rate will reduce some of the burdens of administration and facilitate commerce.

Another proposal seeks the establishment in each country of a central authority empowered to fix uniform classifications for assessment of duties at all ports. The need for this is said to be acute. Another proposal will seek the establishment of a central authority in each country, preferably a customs court, authorized to hear and rule upon appeals from decisions from customs officers.

The conference will endeavor to bring about the enlargement of port facilities and greater port terminal facilities, to prevent clogging of commerce at ports and to keep pace with increased efficiency in transportation and communication facilities. This study will also include an investigation into methods of financing, constructing and managing these facilities.

A large number of proposals concerned with the detailed operation of port facilities, as well as the administration of customs, also will be considered.

HITS GRANT-LEE PROPOSAL.

Lieut. Col. Grant Says Arlington Span Should Honor All Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, grandson of the Union General, frowns upon the suggestion of Senator Overman of North Carolina, that statues of Generals Grant and Robert E. Lee be placed facing each other at the north and south ends, respectively, of the new Arlington Memorial Bridge over the Potomac River.

Colonel Grant in his capacity as executive officer of the bridge commission said the impersonal character of the span as originally designed was in keeping with the growing feeling that "this country's war was so largely at the expense of the unknown soldier and his family, that it should be dedicated to all who served in time of war and peace rather than to memorializing individuals on either side in the Civil War."

SMITH'S BOOK FOR BLIND.

Ex-Governor to Pay for Printing "Up to Now" in Braille.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith has underwritten the cost of printing his autobiography, "Up to Now," in Braille, for the use of blind readers. It was announced yesterday by the American Foundation for the Blind. The foundation is seeking to increase the available supply of literature for the blind, and Mr. Smith's gift will provide twenty copies of the book, which, in Braille, will require four volumes of 180 pages each.

The announcement says that Mr. Smith has requested that the fly leaf of the books be inscribed as follows: "Presented to the blind people of America through the generosity of the author, in memory of his mother, Catherine Mulvehill Smith."

REDUCING HAZARD IN ORDNANCE DUMPS

ADDITIONAL LAND BOUGHT

Civilian Activities Will Be Kept at a Distance—New Magazines Under Construction.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Projects undertaken for the improvement in army ammunition storage facilities are expected to practically eliminate the probability of injury to persons or damage to property outside the ammunition depots in the event of fire or explosion, Major Gen. C. C. Williams, Chief of Ordnance, said today in his annual report to the Secretary of War for the fiscal year ended June 30.

General Williams said that the acts of May 29, 1928, and March 4, 1929, carried $1,914,161 and $1,050,403, respectively, for improvement of army ammunition storage facilities, in accordance with recommendations of the joint army and navy board appointed to study this subject.

Under these acts, General Williams said, 180.2 acres have been acquired at the Fig Point Ordnance Depot in Virginia for a protective area to prevent encroachment on civilian activities, which would be subject to possible hazards originating at an ammunition depot.

At the Ogden Ordnance Depot in Utah options have been obtained on 200 acres of land, and condemnation proceedings have been instituted with a view to acquiring 280 acres more.

Land has been acquired at the Benicia arsenal in California for the erection of magazines and to provide a protective area through the exchange of a right-of-way through the arsenal grounds to the Southern Pacific Railroad in return for the land required.

"Sixteen additional magazines for storage of high explosives and bombs are under construction at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland; twenty-four at the Savanna Ordnance Depot, Illinois, and four at the Benicia Arsenal.

"The acts," said General Williams, also provide for the removal from the Raritan Arsenal, New Jersey, and the Curtis Bay Ordnance Depot, Maryland, of all separate loading high explosive shell, as well as bombs, and bulk high explosives.

"A very extensive program of restorage within the depots is now under way, having as its object the elimination of danger. About one-third of the contemplated restorage has been completed.

"Ammunition storage facilities are also in contemplation for the Panama, Hawaiian and Philippine departments and at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. Construction at Panama is well under way.

"These acts also provide for the replacement of wooden bomb crates with metal crates, so as to reduce the amount of combustible material in magazines."

MARY GARDEN MOURNS WOMEN THE CHARMERS

They Simply Do Not Exist, She Says at Chicago, and Blames Short Skirts.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—Women, in the opinion of Mary Garden, are not the charmers they used to be, and short skirts are one reason. Talking to newspapermen on her return from Europe to rejoin the Chicago Civic Opera, the singer declared that short skirts may be the smartest thing modernists have discovered, but "they've robbed woman of her most fascinating attribute—mystery."

"The great charmers of yesteryear are no more, Miss Garden asserted, adding that "women who have a penchant for wanting their cake and eating it are getting dumber as they grow smarter."

"Women enjoy this freedom," she concluded, "and I wouldn't be anything but a modern woman myself, but the modest woman has ceased to be what every woman craves to be to man—his eternal charmer."

Nora Dinkey, Young Singer, Heard.

Nora Dinkov, a young mezzo-soprano of this city, appeared at Steinway Hall last evening, exhibiting a fresh and still developing voice in what she announced as an "artist pupil's recital," reserving for the future her professional début. She was assisted by Joseph Adler at the piano in modern French and German lyrics, a classical group including Schubert's "Death and the Maiden" and Schumann's "Soldier's Bride," and some final light English texts to melodies of Dichmont, Leoni and MacFadyen. The young singer received many flowers.

Chaim Kotylansky in Folk Songs.

Chaim Kotylansky returned to the stage of the Forty-eighth Street Theatre last evening in a recital of Yiddish and Russian folksongs as well as works of known authorship in the manner of the old traditional airs. Florence Stern, violinist, assisted in solos from Sarasate, Lalo, Achron and Kreisler, while Aaron Freeman accompanied the artists at the piano. Mr. Kotylansky's audience applauded his deftly dramatized character songs, including Jasinowsky's "Dreaming Child," Prozerowsky's "Gypsy Romance," a Soviet Chastushka entitled "New Russia" and Gelbart's "The Tailor."

PASTORS AID RED CROSS.

Many Devote Sermons to Opening of Annual Roll-Call.

The Rev. John B. Kelly, at the Corpus Christi Roman Catholic Church, 535 West 121st Street, in his sermon said:

"The title 'Red Cross' is instantly suggestive to all men of national idealism in action where the need is greatest. * * * There is nothing which demonstrates more vividly the unity of spirit existing in this country than periods of suffering precipitated by such catastrophes as pestilence, flood or famine in nature's realm. * * * The first to organize relief measures and apply scientific principles of rescue of the stricken in these national emergencies is the American Red Cross Society.

"The reign of Him whose seal and symbol is a red cross is mentioned in all the council halls that are making or recording the history of the most powers in civilization today. * * * The red cross of Christ is the world's accepted symbol of the greatest love—the love that lays down life for a friend—the love that proves itself in the supreme deed of sacrifice.

"The universal respect of this generation for the Red Cross Society is a testament of man's faith in Christ, the Divine Physician, who cured all human ills."

ASKS MORE HOSPITAL BEDS.

An increase of 900 beds for tuberculosis patients over the present facilities in the city is urged in a letter written by William Hobson, executive director of the Welfare Council, to Mayor Walker. The letter was made public by the council yesterday. A resolution to this effect, the letter states, has been passed by the council.

According to statistics quoted by Mr. Hobson, there are 1,070 fewer beds available than there were deaths from the disease in 1925. If as the generally accepted figure that one bed per annual death is the proper figure for a community. Other statistics show that the total number of beds has decreased 1,100 in the past decade. Despite this falling off in facilities, there have been three previous years in which there were fewer deaths than there were in 1926, 1928, 1928 and 1927.

2,500 PAY TRIBUTE TO LOUIS MARSHALL

SENSE OF JUSTICE LAUDED

Dr. Adler and Judge Lehman Deliver Eulogies—3 Temple Emanu-El Rabbis Take Part in Service.

Simple but impressive memorial services for Louis Marshall, lawyer and Jewish leader, who died in Zurich, Switzerland, on Sept. 11, were held yesterday afternoon at Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street. The services were under the auspices of Congregation Emanu-El, the Jewish Theological Seminary of America and the American Jewish Committee, of which Mr. Marshall was president.

More than 2,500 attended the services. Many were delegates and representatives of more than seventy-five organizations prominent in legal, civic, religious and philanthropic work.

All the members of the American Jewish Committee who attended the twenty-third annual meeting of the organization earlier in the day at the Hotel Astor attended in a body. Other associations and organizations were represented by one or more at the services.

Two Deliver Eulogies.

Dr. Cyrus Adler, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary, who was elected yesterday president of the American Jewish Committee to succeed Mr. Marshall, and Judge Irving Lehman of the State Court of Appeals delivered eulogies.

Three rabbis of the temple, the Rev. Dr. Nathan Krass, the Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman and the Rev. Dr. H. G. Enelow, recited the Kaddish and recited texts from the Psalms. The Rev. Dr. Louis Finkelstein, instructor in the Talmud and lecturer in theology at the seminary, read selections from Keter Malkut by Solomon Ibn Gabirol, the medieval Judaeo-Spanish poet. Mr. Marshall was an admirer of Gabirol's works.

Dr. Adler in paying tribute to Mr. Marshall said:

"Today, moved by an impulse which has persisted from generation to generation, we gather together in this solemn place to speak of our friend. We do not meet in an abandonment of grief for him that is gone. Mayhap his spirit, undaunted and unflagging, as it seemed to us, craved rest in the Divine Presence. Perchance Elad Moses, who had guided the people, found much of sin unruly group and ordered assemblage, for we may be certified that he should live to enter the promised land he was preparing for his people.

"Louis Marshall was born in an interior city in this Empire State. As a boy he showed forth the promise of intellectual power which his later years realized. The Jewish community of Syracuse was small, and it may well be that this was an advantage to the youth, for it lacked the distraction of a huge city and made him an individual and not one of a mass.

"It was to his mother that he constantly harked back as his greatest Jewish influence in those days. She dead, by the very words I had with him at his bedside in Zurich his mother and her sayings were upon his lips."

His Work for Minorities.

Continuing, Dr. Adler said:

"His innate sense of justice and a consideration for the hardships of his coreligionists united to cause him to devote the greater part of his last twenty years to the defense of the rights of the Jewish people, though this also extended to other minorities that in his opinion had suffered wrongs. One cannot recount a tithe of these deeds. They are written in the records of the American Jewish Committee, an institution which he helped to found, to which he was greatly devoted, and to which he served as president for the last seventeen years. In season and out of season he concerned himself with the obligations which that committee undertook. He heard complaints and received many in writing from various parts of the world. When there was time he consulted his colleagues as to the policy in a given case. When there was none he acted in the emergency and submitted his actions to his colleagues afterward. They never failed to approve them. His counsel was important and weighty in a public capacity on behalf of this committee was in a matter of international concern.

"No one who witnessed it will ever forget his noble bearing when he appeared before the Congressional Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House and Senate of the United States in 1911 in behalf of the abrogation of the treaty of commerce with Russia, under which that country claimed the right to discriminate against Jews and others in the matter of the passport. For hours he who had not been known to have trained himself in international law, quoted chapter and verse from treaty upon treaty and met fully every question that was put to him by the experts of both Houses of Congress, so that his name was spoken with praise in the Senate Chamber.

"Whenever the Jewish name and honor were attacked he defended them in those innumerable, delightful and convincing letters which we all read with wonder and amazement.

"An omnivorous reader, a good linguist, a man with a vast memory, with a fine sense of humor, a lover of nature, a lover of poetry and a writer of poetry, a man of deep affections and loyalties, with great consideration for his friends and their health and their well-being, of much greater consideration for them than for himself—tender and sweet and beautiful to little children. These are but a few of the traits of character which will have to be delineated in the real portrait. Maybe later on the pen will be found which will give to the present and to posterity the adequate portrayal of our friendship. It was a privilege to have whose life will serve as an inspiration to myriads of people. Here and today we have accorded ourselves the sad privilege of speaking his name, of recalling his simple, courageous and powerful personality, and of proclaiming what is known to all men that his memory is a blessing to the whole House of Israel."

Fought Injustice, Says Lehman.

Judge Lehman in his address said of Mr. Marshall:

"As his love of country, his love of God, his love for his people, Israel, inspired his work, his legal training, combined with his broad sympathy, governed its scope and direction. As a lawyer he fought in the courts battles of all forms of injustice and discrimination. Though injustice to a Jew may have touched him more personally, though it may more often have appealed to him for help, it was against injustice, his hatred of wrong, which animated his actions. His tongue and his pen were ready in the defense of Jew or Gentile alike, of white man or negro, when he was called to champion their cause.

"He strived the abrogation of the treaty with Russia, not on the ground of wrong done to Jews but on the ground of infraction of the rights of Americans. He urged the insertion in the peace treaties of clauses protecting the rights of minorities, not solely because in many countries Jewish rights were disregarded, but also because the human rights of all minorities needed protection against invasion by governments which otherwise might act solely at the will of a Nationalist majority.

"His ability as a lawyer enabled him to understand the political problems of many lands. His broad sympathy led him to answer the call of distress, wherever that sounded. He was the leader of the Jewish people here and abroad, because in that leadership he saw his greatest opportunity for service. He was a leader in the fight against prejudice and discrimination. He was a leader in providing great relief funds. He was a leader in Jewish education, both in religious schools and rabbinical seminaries. He was a leader in the work of Congregation Emanu-El, of which he was a member, uniting all groups of Jewry to bring to realization the ancient prophecy that 'the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.'

"Truly we are bereft of a great leader—no longer can we look to his tireless energy, his wisdom, his courage, for direction and guidance. For the work of the hand and brain we must look to the hands and brains of living man. Not so the work of the spirit, for the spirit of the departed lives on even in this world so long as its memory influences the actions of men. Louis Marshall's spirit of devotion to his country and to the Jewish people, of sympathy for the distressed, of passionate love of justice, may still inspire our work here. For those of us who worked with him, that spirit will remain alive as long as we remember him. This memorial meeting has served its purpose only if reverent memories bring with them consecration to work in the same spirit."

LOBBY REPORT DUE ON BURGESS TODAY

HE FOUGHT BOARD'S EXPERT

Summary of Grundy's Stand Likely to Be Next—Hearings Will Be Resumed Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—A report on the activities of William Burgess, a former member of the Tariff Commission, during his stay in Washington while the tariff bill was being framed will be submitted to the Senate by its lobby investigating committee.

The document will be the second report the committee has compiled since it began its hearings several weeks ago.

The first dealt with the employment by Senator Bingham, Republican, of Connecticut, of Charles L. Eyanson of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association. It precipitated a storm of debate and led to the condemnation of Senator Bingham by the Senate for placing Eyanson on the Senate payroll as a clerk while he was drawing a salary of $10,000 a year from his association.

In the Burgess report it was considered likely that the committee would follow the same procedure as it did in that on Bingham. That report simply gave a summary of the testimony before the committee and made no recommendations.

Senator Caraway, chairman of the committee, said he intended to read the Burgess report to the Senate the first thing tomorrow and that other reports would follow as quickly as they could be prepared. The next one is likely to deal with the activities of Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association.

Mr. Burgess, who lives at Morrisville, Pa., and now is employed by the United States Pottery Association, testified before the committee that he protested to Chairman Marvin of the Tariff Commission against the action of Frederick L. Keen, chief of the commission's ceramics division, in giving information to Congressmen during hearings on the pending tariff bill before House and Senate committees.

Mr. Koch was charged with showing partiality in favor of importers of pottery and with being friendly with the manager of a Japanese importing firm. Mr. Burgess denied that he sought to have Mr. Koch dismissed.

Mr. Burgess has spent most of his time in Washington recently in connection with tariff legislation, giving particular attention to the earthenware and glassware schedule in the tariff bill.

The lobby committee will resume hearings on Tuesday, and expects to question J. C. Holton, Mississippi's Commissioner of Agriculture, in regard to $500 he is said to have received from the Southern Tariff Association to bring himself and other Mississippians to Washington last June to attend a meeting of Southern Commissioners of Agriculture.

FINDS VAST UPHEAVALS CHANGING LIFE OF ASIA

Dr. A. J. Brown Tells Brick Presbyterian Church of New Psychology in the East.

"The impact of stupendous revolutionary forces operating upon people previously untouched by the gigantic currents of this day are responsible for the tumult in Asia," declared the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions and guest preacher, yesterday morning at the Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street.

"Five revolutions are impinging at one time upon the swarming masses of Asia, any one of which is in itself sufficient to upset a civilization. What social, industrial, religious, political and industrial upheavals, which the Western World me over a period of 600 years, are being let loose on China, Japan and India in the space of one generation. The chaos of a mighty world is rounding into form. The birthplace of mankind is awakening to the tempo of modern life."

Dr. Brown pictured the transformation brought about in the Near and Far East by the workings of American machinery and described the complete interdependence of communities which at one time had nothing in common.

"There is a new psychology abroad and a new spirit. No longer are the natives of Asia regarded as 'poor heathens,' and treated with a mixture of condescension and pity. The work of scientists like Bose, of poets like Tagore, of intellectuals like Gandhi, are waking Westerners to a new realization of the promise and the power of Eastern life."

Dr. Brown concluded with a plea that the missionary work now being done in Asia receive the support its importance warrants. Declaring that only in the dissemination of the missionary point of view that all nations are one with God was there any hope of stilling the seething chaos in the Orient, he asked for a generous understanding of its problems and promise.

PLANES HUNT 'LOST' WOMEN

CROTON-ON-HUDSON, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Three young women who teach in the schools here inadvertently caused 150 persons and four airplanes to participate in a twenty-four hour search for them while they were hitch-hiking to Albany, whence they returned this evening. All three live at the Faculty Club, and when they had not reported in last night from what had been planned as a short afternoon hike the search was begun.

The women are Clara Fallen, 28 years old, of Old Forge, N. Y., a teacher in the elementary school; Thelma Ellis, 27, of Harmon, N. Y., a high school teacher, and Alice Jones, 29, of Philadelphia, a high school teacher. They left the club at 1 P. M. yesterday, returned soon afterward for pocket money, and then left again. As darkness fell that night, the police of Croton, Cortland, Newcastle and Yorktown joined forces with volunteers to comb the thick woods around Cornell Hast, toward which the women had been walking.

As the hunt progressed today, Miss Jones's brother, C. A. Jones, a salesman for the Barrett Airways of Armonk, had three of that company's ships fly over the area. They were joined by R. F. Kilbourne of Scarsdale in his own plane.

The women explained that they had spent last night with Mrs. Anna Carter of 618 Madison Avenue, Albany, Miss Fallen's aunt.

H. C. CLARK TO REPORT ON MONKEY DISEASES

Doctor Leaves Panama to Attend Society of Tropical Medicine in Miami.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone, Nov. 10.—Dr. Herbert C. Clark, director of the Gorgas Memorial Laboratory, sailed today for New York, whence he will go to Miami to attend a meeting of the American Society of Tropical Medicine before which he will read a paper on a study begun on malaria in wild monkeys of Panama, the first research of that kind undertaken in this hemisphere.

The only record of the study of malaria in monkeys in tropical America is one case of a Brazilian monkey taken to Hamburg and one spider monkey from Yucatan.

Last July Dr. Clark and Doctors Schultz and Weiscott of Johns Hopkins spent a month in the uninhabited jungles of Panama with a party of hunters and procured 113 monkeys of four different species. The paper to be presented by Dr. Clark is based on the preliminary study of material obtained by this expedition, which is only the beginning of a complete survey by the Gorgas laboratory of monkey malaria and its relation to human beings and the problem of controlling the disease in the tropics. Malaria is not the only disease to be studied in this survey, as skin parasites and those found in the intestinal tracts are to be included later, particularly in relation to amoebic dysentery, from which monkeys are known to suffer in captivity. The question of whether they contract the disease from human beings or are subject to it in the wild state is one that may be determined by this research.

EX-CATHOLIC EXPLAINS WHY HE BECAME RABBI

Aime Palliere, the Frenchman who began life as a candidate for the Roman Catholic priesthood and ended by embracing Judaism, explained the reasons for his spiritual conversion at Carnegie Hall yesterday. It was his first public appearance in this country. He is here to make a country-wide lecture tour under the auspices of the Institute of Religion, headed by Dr. Stephen S. Wise. He preached yesterday as the guest of the Free Synagogue.

Despite a specially installed amplifying system, the audience of nearly 2,000 persons who crowded the hall found it difficult to hear Dr. Palliere, who was lecturing in English for the first time. He began the sermon and concluded it, but Dr. Wise read its chief portions from manuscript "to make sure," as he said, "that Dr. Palliere's message does not go unheard and unheeded."

Dr. Palliere, since he joined the Jewish faith, has become a leader in Judaism in France. He is an assistant rabbi in the Liberal Synagogue and has identified himself actively with the cause of Jewish education in his country and elsewhere in the world. Yesterday at the Free Synagogue he said that he had found his way to Judaism "when he saw it not as a religion, not as a kind of theology, nor as dogmas or beliefs, but as a living people holding from God Himself the right to life."

This right to life, Dr. Palliere held, is denied to the Jewish people by the church and it is upon this "fundamental and historical error" that the former Catholic bases his departure from the fold, he said yesterday.

"It is this error," he said, "which irrevocably separates Judaism from Christianity, for the right to life is denied when it is recommended of Jews that for the sake of 'salvation' they accept Latin and Greek theology and metaphysics and to mingle with the nations.

"I want it clearly understood," he declared, "that mine is not a conversion in the special sense of changing from one religion to another. My entire life is based upon the premise that religious truth is man's most precious possession and that personal salvation is his most pressing problem. I believe that Judaism holds both these for me."

MAIL PILOT IN SLEET PLUNGED 4,000 FEET

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP).—Jack Webster, 36-year-old veteran of the air mail service, is resting in the State Hospital here today after having beaten the "jinx" that lurks in the path of pilots traversing the "graveyard of aviators," the Alleghany Mountains.

The same mountains and their treacherous elements that sent Pilot Ames and others to their deaths brought Webster's ship down from the air early Saturday morning as he flew from New York to Cleveland in a sleet storm, but Webster survived, although injured.

The wreckage of his plane was discovered on the top of Rattlesnake Mountain, 2,500 feet above sea level, and an intensive search was started by volunteers and officials of the National Air Transport, operators of the route. Twenty-one hours after the crash Webster was found reclining along a highway leading to Phillipsburg.

A broken left arm and severe bruises on the head, chest and other parts of the body were suffered by the pilot, who had wandered about in confusion before being picked up.

Webster said he was rendered unconscious as his craft struck the ground, and remained so, until daybreak, at which time he set off down the mountain, through a densely wooded territory.

At the hospital today, Webster expressed the thought that he was extremely fortunate, and that it would seem his rightful place was in a "pine box."

He said that he ran into snow and sleet west of Bellefonte and that his ship grew heavy with ice clinging to the wings. He went above the clouds, reaching an altitude of 4,000 feet and then started to fall. He said he could not check the loss of altitude or control the plane. Then he crashed.

Webster's home is at Plainfield, N. J. His wife arrived in Phillipsburg this afternoon, having traveled from Hadley Field, N. J., in the westbound afternoon mail plane over the route on which her husband has seen nine years' service.

NINE DAYS OF GOLDEN SALES

Thursday, November 14 to Saturday, November 23

New York's First Great Merchant

A. T. STEWART, founded 1823

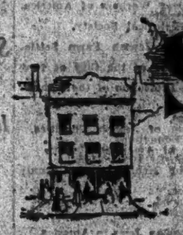
The Old Apple Woman

Mr. Stewart never upset the applecart but when he moved uptown he had the little old woman, who for years had sold her rosy cheeked apples from a cart in front of his downtown store, brought bodily, cart, apples and all to a place of honor in front of the new store . . . he believed in taking his luck with him . . .



A. T. Stewart's First Store Occupied Half of This Building

A. T. Stewart's Marble Store—The Talk of the Town

In 1848 Mr. Stewart built his fine marble store at Broadway and Chambers Street. It was in the heart of the business district and New York's elite came shopping there.

The Six-Story Iron Building At Ninth and Broadway

In 1862 Mr. A. T. Stewart leased a part of the old Randall Farm and erected this magnificent palace for his fast increasing business . . . it was "way uptown" but the town grew up to it and here it is today still beautiful and still in the very heart of New York life . . . as part of Wanamaker's of today.

The Lady of The Laces

Just before Mr. Stewart moved uptown he met a beautiful lady who laughingly promised him great good fortune if he would allow her to be his first customer in his new store . . . so on that morning he greeted her and she purchased Irish linens and laces, a pretty tribute to her host . . .

Shopping at Stewart's

To shop at Stewart's was a mark of distinction, in fact Mr. Stewart's list of customers read like a social register . . . rustling silks, shawls of lace and cashmere, all the fine things that those days of elegance demanded were to be found in this palatial establishment.

STEWART WEEK at Wanamaker's—a nine-day-wonder of sales that invade every corner of this great store . . . celebrated annually in honor of a young Irishman, late of Trinity College, Dublin, who stepped off the boat at the Battery on a day in 1820. His eyes no doubt saw visions but it is certain that he little guessed the "golden guineas" of his patrimony, safely tucked into his pockets, were to be the nucleus of a great mercantile business that would win for him the title of "New York's First Great Merchant"—and that would live for more than a century with the coming of John Wanamaker to New York in 1896.

Honoring the joint achievement of these two pioneer merchants as now presented in Wanamaker's New York, these Golden Sales show the result in values offered, of months of careful planning and untiring effort. New, fresh and perfect merchandise that is in demand at the moment is offered at greatly lowered prices. Men, women and children may be completely outfitted from heel to crown . . . . homes may be refreshed and refurnished or completely furnished at savings which those who know values dare not disregard . . .

In short—it is a gala, golden season of tremendous importance when we welcome from far and near our old friends and our new ones . . . enjoying with them the fascinating presentations of Stewart Week at Wanamaker's, proud of the superior quality of the merchandise and delighted that it is offered at prices which are certainly lower than they have been for six months and often lower than they have ever been before . . . . even at Wanamaker's.

OBJECT TO DR. COFFIN AT EPISCOPAL ALTAR

CANON LAW IS CITED

DR. RELAND INVITED HIM

Dissension has broken out in the Protestant Episcopal Church between the Anglo-Catholics, known as the "high" churchmen, and the Evangelicals, known as the "low" churchmen, because a Presbyterian minister is scheduled to be the celebrant next Friday evening of the holy communion at the altar of a Protestant Episcopal church.

The occasion will be the closing session of the New York Conference of the Christian Unity League, which will open Wednesday afternoon and continue through Thursday and Friday. The house of worship is St. George's Episcopal Church, Stuyvesant Square and East Sixteenth Street, where all the sessions of the conference will be held. The minister is the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of Union Theological Seminary, who is a Presbyterian.

Both the Anglo-Catholics and the Liberals, it was said, expect Bishop William T. Manning to make a statement. The Bishop declared last night: "I have not a word to say yet."

Dr. Coffin when reached late last night on his arrival from out of town said:

"I have been invited to officiate at the holy communion next Friday evening by the Christian Unity League through its head, Dr. Atwater. I was also informed by Dr. Reiland that it was his wish and the wish of his vestry that I should conduct this service.

"I had no idea that there was any objection, inasmuch as the invitation came from the Christian Unity League, to which I understand that St. George's has been host for the conference."

There is no personal criticism of Dr. Coffin in the attitude of those who object to his presence at the altar. The Anglo-Catholics merely contend that for him to officiate would break a canon of the Church.

This canon says that no man not Episcopally ordained can officiate at a sacrament of the Episcopal Church in an edifice consecrated as an Episcopal house of worship.

The Anglo-Catholics have been hoping that the officers of the Christian Unity League would substitute an Episcopal pastor for the Nonconformist clergyman, in which event the holy communion could be held in St. George's and all the delegates, no matter of what Christian faith, could partake. The Anglo-Catholics have also suggested that this closing service could be moved to a neighboring, denominational church, in which event Dr. Coffin could be the celebrant without breaking the canon law.

Dr. Stetson Backs Objectors.

The Rev. Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Church, when asked for his opinion, last night said: "I have no objection to ministers of different denominations meeting together to discuss Christian unity, but I think it is going rather far for a Protestant minister to be asked to celebrate the holy communion at one of our altars, because I do not believe a Protestant minister wishes to be considered an Anglican priest."

The Evangelicals have taken the ground that—inasmuch as Bishop Manning lent the Cathedral of St. John the Divine one Sunday evening last December to the Russian Orthodox Church for one of its services, the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, the rector, and the vestry of St. George's have a right to lend St. George's to the Christian Unity League for its sessions, including the celebration of the holy communion.

The Anglo-Catholics have pointed out, however, that the Russian Orthodox Church is a communion in fellowship with the Episcopal Church inasmuch as it, too, has a historic episcopate and its priests are Episcopally ordained. The altars of the Episcopal Church are closed to ministers of the Presbyterian, Congregationalist Baptist, Lutheran and Congregational Churches and all other denominations that do not require the "laying on of hands" of Bishops in order to set a candidate apart for holy orders.

Canon 19 of the Episcopal Church permits "any Christian man" to speak from Episcopal pulpits, but when a non-Episcopal clergyman does so it is as a layman. Outside ministers are also allowed in the same way to read the scripture lesson in an Episcopal edifice.

When non-Episcopal clergymen take part in processions in the cathedral they walk by themselves and are seated separately in the sanctuary.

Dr. Fosdick Was Barred.

The fact that the service in question is scheduled for St. George's Church has recalled that last Spring Bishop Manning forbade the Right Rev. Herbert Shipman, his suffragan Bishop, to participate in performing the marriage ceremony for the daughter of the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, the rector, because the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Riverside Baptist Church, was scheduled to assist Bishop Shipman. Dr. Fosdick was an old personal friend of the bridegroom. When Dr. Fosdick learned, at almost the last moment, that Bishop Shipman could not participate if he did he withdrew and Bishop Shipman performed the ceremony.

In a long letter printed in The Churchman Weekly of Oct. 19 and signed a "Vestryman" (the writer, who is said to be a very prominent lawyer in the vestry of St. George's, argues that an Episcopal Church has a right to lend its church building "for sacred purposes." He begins by recalling that a letter Dr. Reiland sent shortly after his daughter's wedding to George Zabriskie, Chancellor of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, has not yet been answered. The letter asked Mr. Zabriskie to give an interpretation of the word "officiate" as used in the canon. The letter continues:

Dr. Reiland directed the attention of Mr. Zabriskie to the service held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in December where clergy of the Russian Orthodox Church officiated, and requested an interpretation of the word officiate. There is another question involved of considerable importance, that a rector has the right to permit the use of his church building by ministers of another faith, not to take part in our own church services but to conduct there a service according to their own rite?

"There is nothing in the canons forbidding this, and the action of the Bishop in permitting the Russian service in the cathedral may well be regarded as a precedent. Possibly another precedent may be found in the use of the crypt of the Canterbury Cathedral by the French Protestants who came to England after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

"Dr. White's work on 'the constitution and canons says: 'The framers of the canon had in mind the people who compose the congregation, rather than the church building itself.'

"My opinion is that Canon 22 has no application and that the parish authorities have an undoubted right to lend their church building for sacred purposes."

The Rev. Guy E. Shipler, editor of The Churchman, who is a leader of the Evangelicals, said: "This conference is not being held under the auspices of the Episcopal Church. It is held under the auspices of the Christian Unity League. Dr. Reiland is simply offering a bit of normal Christian hospitality to the Christian Unity League."

11 SAVED FROM BOAT, HITTING NEWPORT REEF

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 10.—Eleven persons were taken off the wrecked auxiliary sloop Evelyn of Providence two minutes before she sank off Brenton's Reef Lightship at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. The rescued included a 75-year-old woman, who now is in critical condition at the Newport Hospital, suffering from exposure and immersion.

The party, including members of two families and friends, were saved by Coast Guardsmen of the Price's Neck life-saving station, who saw the Evelyn hit a reef near the lightship.

The bottom of the forty-foot sloop was torn away by the ledge, and the craft started to sink. Some of the occupants were thrown into the water, but the others clambered over the sides, to which all held for half an hour.

Two minutes after the guardsmen had arrived and had taken all to safety the boat slipped beneath the waves.

The party started from Oakland Beach in the early morning for a pleasure sail. They went down the bay and out into the ocean. They struck the ledge on their return.

'BORROWING ANNE' KILLED.

Woman Who Obtained $81,000 Without Collateral Is Auto Victim.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—"Borrowing Anne" Sharpley has borrowed her last dollar. The portly, shortish Englishwoman, whose operations cost Chicagoans $81,000 and kept her a front page figure back in 1916, today was buried in Rosehill Cemetery. She had been killed by a motor truck Thursday evening. Her identity was not established for two days.

In 1916 she ran a chicken farm at Melrose Park. Then one day she filed a petition in bankruptcy, revealing herself as a personality which had moved friends to lend her scores of thousands of dollars without collateral.

At the bankruptcy hearing she asserted that she had paid all her money to a blackmailer, a "William Kent," who, she said, at one time was a Colonel in the British Army. He had, she said, knowledge of her early life.

Investigation of her story did not reveal any such individual. It did, however, disclose that in 1906 the New York police had arrested a Mrs. Anna Sharpley, who subsequently served eighteen months in a Pennsylvania prison for postal money order forgeries.

RICE NOT MISSING; AT HIS HOTEL HERE

His Counsel Declares Convicted Man Is Protected From Arrest by Court Order.

Rice Himself Phones to Federal Attorney That He Is in His Rooms at the Chatham.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Asserting that George Graham Rice recently convicted in New York of using the mails to defraud is not "missing" but is at his apartment in the Chatham Hotel, New York, and that there has been no time when his whereabouts has not been known to United States Attorney Tuttle, former Senator James A. Reed, counsel for Rice, tonight characterized as "an outrage" the statements of Mr. Tuttle and the reported nation wide hunt for Rice instituted by the authorities.

"Never in all my years at the bar have I known or heard of such a proceeding, in the face of facts known to him, on the part of any United States Attorney," said Mr. Reed.

He gave out a copy of the following telegram he said was sent at 1 o'clock today to Mr. Tuttle:

"Statements in newspapers intimating that Rice is a fugitive are untrue. Rice is in his apartment at the Chatham Hotel, and has been instructed if he leaves temporarily to keep us advised as to his whereabouts. We, however, insist that Justice Stone's order protects him from arrest until the justice has ruled on an application for stay of mandate."

Order Sent Friday Night.

Justice Stone's order, which is for a hearing tomorrow on an application for a writ of certiorari, was telegraphed to Mr. Tuttle Friday night, and was in his hands by or before 1 o'clock on Saturday, Mr. Reed insisted.

"It was telephoned in my presence," Mr. Reed said, "following my interview with the justice at his house on Friday night. I telephoned myself Saturday morning to Mr. Tuttle, who said he had not received the message, and inquiries were at once made by both the justice and myself, which resulted in a report that the message had been delivered Saturday morning and receipt was acknowledged by Mr. Tuttle's office before 1 o'clock.

"The hearing on our application is set for 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Justice Stone's chambers. Mr. Reed added. I shall appear for Mr. Rice, and I assume Mr. Tuttle or one of his assistants will present the argument in opposition. The day and hour was fixed with due reference to his convenience."

Held Him Not Subject to Arrest.

There has been no time, according to Mr. Reed, Daniel F. Cohalan and David P. Siegel, former Assistant District Attorney of New York, who is here with them as associate counsel, that Rice has been subject to arrest or has been a "fugitive."

The decision of the Circuit Court handed down Nov. 4 was stayed, according to M. Cohalan, by the order issued on his application that day, which was returnable at 10:30 A. M. Friday. By that time Mr. Reed had served notice of his intention to appeal to Justice Stone, leaving at once for Washington for that purpose, and Mr. Reed tonight asserted that a warrant for his client's arrest must have been issued after receipt by the Federal Attorney of the telegram from Justice Stone. Such action, and the statements of Mr. Tuttle, they insist, alike are to the unjust prejudice and injury of their client.

Leslie J. Tompkins, who arrived today, said that had he known in time of the telegram sent by Justice Stone Friday night, he would not have surrendered yesterday Walter K. Yoreton, who was convicted with Rice and received a sentence of nine months.

Rice Reveals Presence Here.

George Graham Rice, for whom—according to statements from the office of the United States Attorney—a widespread search as a fugitive from justice has been carried on for several days past, revealed his whereabouts last night at the Hotel Chatham.

Rice's presence at the hotel became known through telephone calls he made to The New York Times and other newspapers in which he positively protested against published reports that he was a fugitive and said that he had been at the hotel throughout the period in which it was said he was being hunted.

But even after Rice had made himself known, no movements looking toward his arrest could be discerned last night. United States Attorney Tuttle was reported to be at his home in Orange, but his assistant, David Peck, denied the existence of any technicalities protecting Rice from arrest.

When asked if the authorities would go to the hotel to make an arrest, the prosecutor said that they would probably wait until morning. "There are no marshals available right now for the work," he added last night in explanation.

Deputy Chief Inspector Edward J. Mulrooney said that the local police were aiding in the search for Rice, but he characterized as "absurd" the statement that Rice was at the Hotel Chatham.

Mr. Peck, when asked if the nation-wide search for Rice had included the placing of a guard at the Hotel Chatham over the week-end, said he did not "know that it had." A marshal went to the hotel on Friday, however, after a bench warrant had been issued for the man's arrest following the confirmation of his conviction in the Circuit Court of Appeals, the prosecutor said.

At the hotel, according to Peck, the marshal learned that Rice had been away since Thursday. When asked of this, the hotel managements said the hotel "had no record" of when Mr. Rice was in or out. Rice admitted yesterday, however, that he had been out when the official called on Friday.

Rice was at the Hotel Biltmore with former United States Senator Reed, his attorney, at the time, and no authorities have returned to the hotel to see him since, he said.

Rice was convicted and sentenced in connection with the sale of stock in the Idaho Copper Corporation and the publication of The Wall Street Iconoclast. Walter K. Yoreton, mining engineer, convicted with him, was sentenced to nine months in prison and has given $5,000 bail. He entered the Federal detention prison Saturday.

Moderation League Finds Dry Law Failing To Cut Intemperance or Alcohol Death Rate

Average figures of deaths from alcoholism since prohibition in the fifteen States which did not have dry laws before the national act became effective show a rate as high as that prevailing during the last decade before national prohibition, according to figures prepared by the Moderation League and forwarded to the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement yesterday. The figures used are those of the United States Census Bureau. The States included are California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin. Alcohol deaths in the first two named are considerably lower now than in pre-prohibition days, while in Maryland, New York and Pennsylvania they are considerably higher.

The statistics are used to support the argument that coercive methods in prohibition have failed, and consequently moderation of the law is advisable. Austen G. Fox, chairman of the league, outlines these arguments in a letter to George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission, accompanying the statistics.

"It is fair to assume," Mr. Fox writes, "that public sentiment in these States, which contain nearly one-half of the population of the country, is less favorable to prohibition than in the States which had adopted prohibition of their own accord. In these States the death rate is generally as high as it was in the saloon days. National prohibition has failed to reduce intemperance in these States. Once again we see that Abraham Lincoln was right. 'No law,' he said, 'is stronger than is the public sentiment where it is to be enforced.'

"The conditions in these States prove also the truth of the warning of Calvin Coolidge, when he said to the American Bar Association in 1922: 'In a republic, the law reflects, rather than creates, the standard of conduct. . . . To dragoon the body when the need is to convince the soul will end only in revolt. In these States dragooning has been unsuccessful. The revolt against national prohibition is at hand.'"

FORMER JUDGE HELD FOR KILLING WOMAN

VICTIM SLAIN IN STREET

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 10.—Former Judge John W. Brady, aged 59, one of the leading lawyers of Texas, was arrested soon after midnight last night and placed in jail, charged with the murder of Miss Leilia Highsmith, aged 28.

Brady, who is married, was formerly Assistant Attorney General, and later served one term as Associate Justice of the State Court of Civil Appeals.

Miss Highsmith had just returned from an automobile ride with Frank Graham Jr., a young man of Austin. As she alighted from the car in front of her rooming house, Brady is said to have attacked her with a knife, stabbing her three times. One of the strokes penetrated her heart and the other two wounds were in her body close to the heart.

Graham remained in the car, but witnessed the killing, he declared. The woman's screams aroused several persons in the boarding house where she lived, and they rushed to the scene just as she fell to the sidewalk.

F. R. McNaughton, one of the man who came to the woman's aid, disarmed Brady, and in the scuffle the latter was cut on the hand. Brady offered no further resistance, and awaited the arrival of the police. He declined to make any statement, although he is said to have remarked, when placed in jail, that he did not remember what had occurred. He employed counsel this morning, and his examining trial is set for tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

Miss Highsmith had been employed for several years as stenographer to the Supreme Court Commission of Appeals, and held that position during Judge Brady's term as a member of the Court of Appeals. It was there, it was said, that Brady met her and began paying her attentions, which, according to her friends, she resented and sought to avoid.

Residents of the boarding house where Miss Highsmith lived stated that Brady came there earlier in the evening. He had been drinking and sought to enter her room. He entered the wrong room and was ejected by the man who occupied it.

Brady has taken a prominent part in Democratic politics for several years. He made a special effort to carry the State for Governor Smith in last year. He is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Texas.

LAND INQUIRY OPENS TODAY.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—When Supreme Court Justice Tompkins convenes the extraordinary term ordered by Governor Roosevelt tomorrow, it is expected that it will take only a few hours to select the special panel of twenty-three grand jurors who will inquire into the land purchase by the Westchester County Board of Supervisors.

The special prosecutors, Henry A. Wise and Sydney A. Syme, who were appointed to assist Deputy Attorney General Thomas Penney Jr. in conducting the inquiry, will examine the members of the panel on whether they have had any relations with the Supervisors or are related to any Supervisor. Their political affiliations will not be inquired into, because Westchester went Republican by more than 30,000 on election day.

The grand jury will look into the purchase of the Hall of Records site for $948,000, and a $49,500 land purchase by the town of New Castle in which Samuel Untermyer, special investigator for Governor Roosevelt, reported as "suspicious" the conduct of Supervisor Howard R. Washburn.

NIGHT CLUB GUEST SLAIN BY GUNMAN

ASSAILANT MAKES ESCAPE

Proprietor, With Whom Dispute Had Started, Held as Material Witness, With Victim's Party.

Grant Patterson, 25 years old, of 304 Valleybrook Road, Lyndhurst, N. J., tried to save his friend and fellow-townsman, William Buckley, from a gunman's bullets in the Club Piccadilly in Newark at 4 A. M. yesterday and paid for it with his life. He died in St. Michael's Hospital an hour after the shooting, with four wounds in his right side. The gunman got away.

Buckley, Patterson, former Police Sergeant John Mullins and Buckley's brothers, Frank and James, all of Lyndhurst, were at a table in the night club. About 4 o'clock William Buckley went to one of the lower floors in the building and became involved in an argument with George Pallito, the night club proprietor, the police said, and when he returned to the party one of his eyes was discolored.

Buckley told his friends that he had been assaulted by Pallito, according to the police, and demanded that they return with him to the lower floor. They all left the table and followed him.

Pallito was encountered near one of the washrooms, but as the young men approached he backed up. Behind him the washroom doors were suddenly thrown open and the gunman appeared, aiming his weapon at William Buckley.

"Hold on; you wouldn't shoot any of us, would you?" Patterson pleaded, covering his friend.

The gunman fired five times and Patterson dropped, four of the shots lodging in his body. The fifth went wild. As the party scattered the gunman ran out.

Patterson was unconscious when his friends picked him up and carried him out to a cab. The band in the night club kept on playing and forty couples continued to move around the dance floor.

Soon after Patterson's friends had left for the hospital a policeman came into the night club to investigate the shooting. The patrons insisted they had heard no shots and the policeman left.

A half hour later, however, word of Patterson's death at the hospital brought more police to the night club. They bundled the patrons, the members of the band and the waiters into patrol wagons and took them to headquarters.

After hours of questioning the police released all the patrons, the waiters and the musicians but held Pallito and Patterson's friends as material witnesses. They all insisted they did not know the man who did the shooting.

BACKS TRANSIT UNIFICATION

Group of Elevated Stockholders to Ask Legislative Hearing.

The Manhattan Stockholders' Protective Committee, representing a minority group of shareholders in the elevated railroad lines under lease to the Interborough, announced yesterday that it would ask for a formal hearing before the joint legislative committee which is investigating the public utility laws of the State.

The committee, according to Nathan L. Amster, its chairman, will seek to be heard when the legislative group takes up the recently submitted recommendations of the Transit Commission on unification of rapid transit lines in this city.

Mr. Amster said the group was strongly in favor of the proposed unification of all lines and would back any reasonable plan of fixing values of property to be taken over. "Unfair opposition to the plan," he said, had injured investment values and hampered the sound development of the city's transportation system.

St. Louis Woman Saves $60,000 Necklace as Gang Takes $58,000 in Gems From Auto Party.

ILLINOIS BANDIT IS SHOT

Police Interrupt Raid on Home and Capture Two Men, but Two Others Escape With $50,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 10.—Jewelry valued at $58,000 and $1,000 in currency were obtained by four bandits early today from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson of St. Louis and Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Byers of Pittsburgh, who came here to attend the steeplechase races.

Mrs. Johnson saved a $60,000 diamond necklace by opening the clasp and allowing it to drop into her clothing, where it was overlooked by the hold-up men.

Mrs. Byers's lost jewelry, not insured, is valued at $43,000. Mrs. Johnson's loss in gems was set at $15,000.

The visiting couple were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Saturday night at a party at the Bellefspur Hunt Club, St. Louis County, in celebration of the victory of Johnson's horse Ebonite in the club steeplechase race Saturday afternoon.

Crowded to Side of Road.

Shortly after 3 A. M. the four were returning home in Mr. Johnson's car with Wiley Thompson, chauffeur, at the wheel.

On the Denny road a large sedan without license plates drew up beside the Johnson car, crowding it to the side of the road.

Believing the men to be officers, Thompson slackened his speed. As he did so, the robber car swung across the path of his machine.

Holding a handkerchief across his face with one hand and with the other grasping a pistol, one of the bandits then opened the door of the Johnson car, commanding the occupants to "stick 'em up."

He was closely followed by two companions, both armed and with handkerchiefs over their faces.

Two of the bandits crowded into the tonneau of the machine, while the third climbed into a seat next to the chauffeur and forced him to drive into a cross-road.

Mr. Johnson and Mr. Byers were forced to step from the car in the heavy rain and, walk about twenty feet from the machine with their backs to the car, while the women were searched.

Defies Pistol.

Defying a menacing pistol, Mr. Johnson turned and demanded that the women be not harmed.

"Keep your mouth shut and nobody will get hurt," the bandit answered.

During the hold-up Mrs. Johnson managed to unclasp her diamond necklace and it fell beneath her dress. Apparently the robbers knew she possessed it, for one remarked: "Where's that diamond necklace?"

After robbing the women, the trio commanded the two men to turn over their money and valuables. Mr. Johnson complied in currency and a platinum ring set with sapphires and a diamond valued at $200. From Mr. Byers $300 in money and a platinum cigarette case valued at $100 was taken.

Robbery at Dancing Party.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Police were watching in Chicago tonight for two of the four masked bandits who late Saturday night, in one of the most spectacular hold-ups on record, invaded the palatial mansion of Henry H. Harris, in Champaign, Ill., during a dancing party and robbed the host and sixty men and women guests of $50,000 in money and jewelry.

C. W. Karchman, one of the bandits, who was shot as police, summoned by telephone, arrived and opened fire on the invaders, confessed that the bandits all agreed before the hold-up they would meet in Chicago if they became separated, the Champaign authorities said.

Mr. Harris is the president of the General Alloys Company of Boston, Mass.

The bandits gained entrance to the Harris home by walking up to the front door, where they were confronted by a colored doorman. One of the bandits laughed. "We're just playing a joke," he said, but pressed a revolver into the colored man's side at the same time and they pushed their way in.

One hundred guests and friends from all over the country, who had attended the Illinois-Army football game in the afternoon, had been invited to the dancing party. The hold-up men invaded the home just as the festivities were getting started and only about sixty of the guests had arrived.

Among the latter were a number of Chicagoans. These included James Gale Alexander, vice president of Central Trust Company and Mrs. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Parsons and Edward Dougherty, assistant chief engineer of Mr. Harris's company. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John V. Clinnin of Glencoe arrived just after the holdup had been staged and the wounded bandit and Harold Smith of Charleston, Ill., a second bandit, had been captured by police.

Dr. David Kinley, president of the University of Illinois, and his daughter, Janet, were among the guests held up.

Mrs. T. L. Saunders Missed Pearls on Return From Boston Nov. 7.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Elizabeth S. Saunders of 120 East Sixty-first Street, New York City, lost a pearl necklace valued at $25,000 on a visit to Boston on Nov. 7, it was learned today.

Mrs. Saunders, who is the wife of Dr. Truman Saunders of New York, came here on the Knickerbocker Limited of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad wearing the jewels. She had them on just before reaching the Back Bay railroad station, and reports she lost them on the train or in a taxicab on her way to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, where she first missed the necklace.

The loss, which is covered by insurance, was reported to police, and a reward of $2,500 has been offered by the insurance company. A representative of the company is now in Boston conducting an investigation.

There are ninety graduated pearls in the string, on which is a platinum clasp set with diamonds.

Will Rogers Says Just Wait Till the Jackasses Hear of It

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 10.—It sure did kick up some excitement in the Senate when Senator Moses called the other Senators "sons of wild jackasses." Well, if you think it made the Senators hot, you wait till you see what happens when the jackasses hear how they have been slandered.

This Moses, like the one in the original east, is a kind of a amateur prophet, and every once in a while he climbs to the top of some speaker's table, strikes the stone head of a toastmaster and brings forth a wisecrack. Next week I can see the Senate passing a resolution to have his form again enveloped in some distant bullrushes.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

LEAPS TO DEATH IN QUEENS BLAZE

THIRD IS CRITICALLY HURT

He Plunges to Roof of Shed as Flames Sweep Long Island City Boarding House.

One man leaped to death, a second died of shock and a third is in St. John's Hospital in a serious condition as the result of a fire in a boarding house at 10-46 Fifty-first Avenue, Long Island City, which was discovered about 5 o'clock Sunday morning. The house is a three-story brick dwelling, owned and occupied by Mrs. Catharine Clavin.

The dead men were Michael Kane, 47 years old, unmarried, an employe of the Queens Highway Bureau, and formerly a prize fighter and promoter, and John Patten, 60, retired and unmarried.

George Claire, 30, also an employe of the Queens Highway Bureau was badly burned.

The cause of the fire, which started on the first floor of the Clavin house, was still undetermined last evening.

In the house when the fire broke out were Mrs. Clavin, her daughter, Miss Catharine Clavin, 25, a teacher in St. Mary's parochial school in Long Island City; her son, Harry Clavin, 23, and a niece, Cathleen Clavin, 5, besides Kane and Claire. Patten, who died of shock, lived in an adjoining house.

The Clavins all occupied rooms on the second floor, while the boarders were on the third floor. Miss Clavin was the first to be awakened by the flames. She aroused her brother and went into the hallway and shouted to the boarders. Then barefooted, she ran to a fire box and turned in an alarm.

Harry Clavin aroused his mother and niece and got them to the street. Police reserves arrived with the firemen. The house in which the fire occurred is one of a row of buildings and the police at once ordered the families in the houses adjoining to leave.

Kane and Claire, aroused by the shouts of Miss Clavin, started to run down to the lower floor of the house. They were both burned trying vainly to penetrate a wall of flames which barred their egress. They retreated to the top floor, opened a rear window and jumped. Kane leaped first, landing on the ground in the adjoining yard. He was picked up unconscious and rushed to St. John's Hospital, where he died a short time later. Claire landed on the roof of a shed in an adjoining yard. He was assisted by the police into an ambulance and hurried to the hospital, where he was reported to be suffering from a fractured spine and severe burns.

After the fire was brought under control, Mrs. Julia Vliga, who conducted a rooming house at 10-48 Fifty-first Avenue, one of the adjoining buildings, went through her house to find out whether it had been damaged. She found Patten dead in his bed. A St. John's Hospital ambulance surgeon said Patten had died from a heart attack caused by shock.

The Clavin house was practically destroyed. The loss was placed at $10,000.

Attends Chapel in Tombs and Accepts Prison Fare.

Frank H. Warder, former State Superintendent of Banking, who was sentenced to from five to ten years imprisonment on Friday for bribery in the City Trust Company case, was reported at the Tombs yesterday to have regained his spirits. Warder is confined there pending the outcome of his counsel's efforts to obtain a review of his case under a certificate of reasonable doubt.

According to Warden Barr at the Tombs, Warder attended chapel at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. In addition to accepting the regular prison fare, the warden said, Warder had frequently ordered sandwiches and coffee from the prison commissary at his own expense.

FORUM ON STOCK CRASH.

Merryle S. Rukeyser, financial writer and lecturer, conducted a discussion on the subject, "Does the Recent Debacle Indicate the Need of Public Regulation of the Stock Exchange?" at the Forum service yesterday of the new American Synagogue, Seventieth Street near Broadway.

He contended that marginal trading should be limited to a class of professional operators that corporations should be induced to issue clear and frequent statements, that State endorsement of market machinery is a misleading and there fore a dangerous practice, and that lack of a strong short interest was a factor in the recent market slump.

Chamber to Hear of Library Work.

WALL STREET TOILS OVER THE WEEK-END

Stock Exchange Is Satisfied With Brokers' Progress in Catching Up With Work.

MARKET STABILITY SEEN

Wall Street was busy yesterday digging itself out of the morass of detailed work which has accumulated over three weeks of hectic stock market trading.

The Street is usually deserted and peaceful on a Sunday, but yesterday, as on the three preceding Sundays, it fairly hummed with activity. Restaurants were open and did a thriving business, bus-boys carrying atop shoulders huge trays of food dashed to office buildings. Sight-seeing buses and private automobiles carried thousands of the idly curious up and down the district's narrow canyons, but in the lighted offices men and women toiled at their tasks, office machines of all sorts droned away, and but for the holiday clothes of the visitors and the darkened banking institutions the casual visitors could hardly have told it from an ordinary week-day.

Exchange Satisfied With Work.

But on the authority of officials of the New York Stock Exchange satisfactory progress has been made on the accumulated work, due to the abbreviated trading on ordinary days and the suspension of trading on Saturday. Most of this well equipped brokerage offices are "out of the woods," so far as accumulated work is concerned. It is not all done, by any means. There still remain piles of it because of the vast number of detailed transactions such transfer of a stock certificate involves. But it is now in such shape, Exchange officials believe, that with their augmented staffs, it can be kept well in hand and will not again swamp the physical machinery.

Trading will resume this morning at 10 o'clock, after a holiday that lasted since last Friday at 1 o'clock. The trading period from Monday until Friday each week will be from 10 to 3 o'clock daily, and on next Saturday as on last, there will be complete cessation of dealings. These expedients, entirely temporary in their nature, have been adopted to give the Street the opportunity of staying as nearly abreast as possible of the tremendous volume of business that has developed. There is good opportunity, too, if Friday's normal market may be considered a criterion, that the heavy volume will slacken of its own accord, now that the pressure of forced liquidation is apparently completed.

Parking Rule Rescinded.

The parked cars in the financial district and all of the highways leading thereby gave good evidence yesterday that Wall Street was still about its task. In this period of emergency, the police have rescinded their rule that no cars may be parked in the financial district on Sundays. They filled every available space yesterday, even overflowing to the wide-open spaces of West Street in the populous areas of lower Wall, Broad, Exchange Place, Beaver and William, they were parked two deep in many places.

Some extraordinary precautions to protect the financial district and its workers evidently were in force. Three or four uniformed men strolled on each block, idly swinging their clubs. Plain-clothes men, traveling in pairs, parade through the district, keenly eying the thousands of passersby. Work proceeded noisily on the half dozen new buildings under process of construction.

Trading will be watched with a great deal of interest in the security markets of the country this morning. The belief has been widely expressed by bankers, brokers and market judges in general that a state of equilibrium finally has been reached by stocks, that forced liquidation is over and that the market should once more be in a position to respond to the development of natural economic forces.

Favorable factors expected to have influence on trading during this week are:

The fact that, on earnings, many stocks are bargains.

The development of further investment trust buying.

SEES BENEFITS IN CRASH.

Bankers Association Says Business Should Be Stimulated.

Ultimate results of the recent gram in the stock market should be highly beneficial to the country, according to the monthly business review of The American Bankers Association Journal. The review says, in part:

"The runaway bull market of the past several years seems to have ended. The day of easy profits without labor has passed. Trading on margin has not proved the royal road to wealth.

"Numerous constructive elements now enter the business picture. A genuine bond market promises to return. Building construction should revive, as funds are again available for purchasing real estate and mortgages. Commercial enterprises should be stimulated with the burden of high interest rates removed. Foreign loans can again be sold to provide credits with which to build up our export trade. Men and women will for some time to come pay more attention to business and less to stock tickers.

"While the immediate effect of the stock crash may be to curtail purchasing power, somewhat for merchandise outside the range of necessities, a broad analysis will show that the ultimate result should be highly beneficial."

EJECTED STRIKERS WIN CHURCH TRIAL

"MISTAKE" IS ADMITTED

First of the 119 Textile Workers Will Face Court Tomorrow on the Charge of Rioting.

MARION, N. C., Nov. 10.—The "show-down" in the controversy which resulted in summary action against union textile workers and sympathizers belonging to the East Marion Missionary Baptist Church was postponed a week today when church officers agreed to have an open meeting of the congregation next Sunday, at which one or more of those who were served with dismissal letters will be formally placed on trial.

It was frankly admitted by church officers who are non-union workers in the mill of the Marion Manufacturing Company that the ousting of Dan V. Elliott, teacher of a Sunday School class and deacon of the church, was contrary to the rules of the church, and that a mistake was made which would be rectified. Upon Mrs. Elliott's insistence today, action was postponed a week.

The dozen or fifteen letters of dismissal sent out by A. R. Flack, chief clerk, were issued, according to Flack and the other officers, so that the members could transfer to another Baptist church, "dismissal" being used in the sense of transfer. It was asserted that this was done so as to save the members from citation for trial and public humiliation.

The first trial on the docket for Tuesday is a resumption of the proceeding against Alfred Hoffman, organizer for the United Textile Workers, and five others, charged with rioting and inciting to rebellion against the State of North Carolina.

They were placed on trial in September in connection with a disturbance which occurred when strikers were dispossessed, but during the trial J. Hugh Hall, one of the defendants, escaped, but returned later. A mistrial had been declared in the meantime. Hall is a "mystery man," and is not being defended by counsel for the textile union. According to Hoffman, he is not a union member and it has been reported that he would turn State's evidence.

The other defendants are Will Russell, W. L. Hogan, Del Lawle and Wes Fowler. After the trial of Hoffman and the five others, the remaining 113 will be placed on trial in groups of from four to fifty-four.

Deputies' Trial Holds Interest.

The trial that is being awaited with the keenest interest is that of Sheriff Oscar F. Adkins's eight deputies, who have been held by the Superior Court for homicide in connection with the killing of six strikers at the gate of the Marion Manufacturing Company on Oct. 2. The Sheriff has been exonerated of complicity in the shooting and will act as bailiff in Judge Cowper's court on Tuesday.

Another group to be placed on trial are seventeen men charged with rioting on the picket line and assaulting R. W. Baldwin, president of the Marion Manufacturing Company, and his superintendent, Adam Hunt.

A fourth trial will be that of a group charged with inciting to rebellion against the State, similar to the charge against Hoffman and his five associates. The fifth and final trial involves four men charged with dynamiting a machine in a shed belonging to the Marion Manufacturing Company.

The North Wilkesboro company of the National Guard, which has been patrolling East Marion, has been ordered withdrawn tomorrow by Governor Gardner.

Lawrence Lippincott of Riverton, N. J., and Dr. Frank R. Watson of Haverford College, both of the Society of Friends, were due to arrive in Marion, N. C., yesterday, to take charge of the relief work to be administered by the society there.

Food, clothing, medicine and nursing service is to be supplied to the mill workers who are suffering as a result of the industrial dispute. An appeal for funds had been issued by the society and by the Federal Council of Churches, which will cooperate in the collection of money.

GASTONIA COUNSEL AT ODDS.

Defense Breach Over Expenses Delays Appeal of Convictions.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Nov. 10 (AP).—Open breaks between the International Labor Defense and attorneys it retained to defend the seven textile leaders and strikers during the trial for the slaying of O. F. Aderholt, Gastonia Chief of Police, have delayed the defendants' appeals to the State Supreme Court from convictions of second degree murder.

Work on the appeals at present is at a standstill. J. Frank Flowers, who was chief of defense counsel, said no attorneys had been retained to complete the legal details necessary. He began the work, he said, but has ceased it pending definite word from the International Labor Defense that it wishes him to proceed.

Tom P. Jimison, W. H. Abernethy and Dr. John Randolph Neal, defense attorneys, are holding up $15,000 which came into possession of the defense during the trial, pending a settlement of debts they incurred in behalf of the defense. Suit for the sum was filed here yesterday in the name of the American Fund for Public Service, Inc., by Flowers, who alleges the three attorneys are holding it unlawfully.

Activities of the International Labor Defense during the trial were denounced in a statement issued by Jimison. He charged the organization's activities hindered the defense, and declared if they continued he would seek a court restraining order.

SEAL GREETED IN BOSTON.

Crowd Welcomes the Released Labor Leader.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Bearing placards, lettered in red with the words "Fight the Mill Owners," "International Labor Defense Welcomes Fred Beal," "Fight for the Release of Gastonia Workers," several hundred members of the Boston branch of the International Labor Defense set up cries of joy when Fred Beal of Lawrence stepped from a train at the South Station this afternoon.

He was released on $5,000 bail on charges of conspiracy to murder in connection with the Gastonia mill strike, and has returned home to address a series of mass meetings in an effort to fight the "bosses" of North Carolina.

BOYS SHOT DEAD IN PLAY.

Two Baltimore Lads Victims of Pistols in Companions' Hands.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 10 (AP).—Two boys were shot to death by playmates here today, John Pollack, 13, and John Kellner, 15, being the victims of pistols in the hands of companions.

Young Kellner was shot by Sterling Bortner, 16, at whose home they were playing. Sterling told the police he had gone to his room to put on a clean blouse, and finding a pistol in a drawer, pointed it at Kellner and pulled the trigger. The bullet struck John in the heart and he was dead when admitted to a hospital.

Pollack, with his two brothers, Graham, 15, and Robert, 11, were playing with Joseph McLain, 13, at the latter's home. He obtained his father's pistol and while showing it to his friends pointed it at John and it was discharged. The Pollack lad died almost instantly. Joseph was held by police pending an inquest.

BERLIN, Nov. 10 (AP).—The condition of Frau Subkoff, formerly Princess Victoria of Prussia and Schaumburg-Lippe and sister of the former Kaiser, was very grave tonight.

O. F. Schuette Cites Hoover in Asking a Voice for Communities on Wave-Length Allocation.

LOCAL SETTLEMENT URGED

Plan Would Leave Assignments to Stations to Joint Decision of the Commission and Localities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A proposal to give local communities a greater share in determining the actual allocation of broadcasting wave lengths was made to the Federal Radio Commission in a letter from Oswald F. Schuette, executive secretary of the Radio Protective Association, who called the commission's attention to the recommendations made to the Fourth National Radio Conference by President Hoover when presiding over that conference as Secretary of Commerce.

Under this plan the Federal Government's part in radio regulation would consist chiefly in the allotment of the wave lengths to zones. States and communities, controlling the power of the stations and policing the channels to prevent interference, but leaving actual allotment of wave lengths to stations to the joint decision of the Federal Radio Commission and the local communities themselves.

"The ideal situation," said Mr. Hoover in his opening address to that conference, "would be a traffic regulation by the Federal Government to the extent of an allotment of wave lengths and control of power and the policing of interference, leaving to each community a large voice in determining who are to occupy the wave lengths assigned to that community.

"It is true, of course, that radio is not circumscribed by State lines and still less by city boundaries; but it is possible, nevertheless, to establish zones which will at least roughly approximate the service areas of stations and to a very considerable extent to entrust to them the settlement of their local problems."

This is the second so-called "Hoover doctrine" which the Radio Protective Association has called to the attention of Congress and the Federal Radio Commission.

The first was Mr. Hoover's testimony, given when he was Secretary of Commerce, before the House Merchant Committee, when he said:

"The question of monopoly in radio communication must be squarely met. It is not conceivable that the American people will allow this newborn system of communication to fall exclusively into the power of any individual group or combination. It cannot be thought that any single person or group shall ever have the right to determine what communication may be made to the American people. We cannot allow any single person or group to place themselves in a position where they can censor the material which shall be broadcast to the public."

Since he became President Mr. Hoover has given no indication of his present attitude on these problems, but he may clarify his position in his coming annual message to Congress.

PITT IS EASTERN LEADER

NOTRE DAME STILL WINNING

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

In a Saturday filled to the brim with football wreckage and might-have-beens, the season of 1929 practically abandons any pretense of running true to form and from now to the close of things almost any occurrence can take place without creating more surprise than that of the past week.

When the smoke lifted there remained in the East really only one team firmly fixed above its competition, the University of Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh's smashing and clean-cut victory over Washington and Jefferson was a remarkable accomplishment and keeps the Panthers at the head of the procession, at least for reliability.

In the East, in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast one or two games, at least, of each section resulted in surprising fashion. And all along the line there were in the checkup, some of these games might have been changed by a twist of the luck.

In the East probably Yale's tie with Maryland was the most surprising. Here, in the minds of ordinary football followers, Yale figured to come through with something to spare. Yet, on second guessing, it seems obvious that a team which had been through two such games as the Army and Dartmouth encounters on successive week-ends might have been expected to have a let-down. At the same time, the brilliant, fighting come-back of the Maryland team remains a real achievement in this weird season of play.

Much Interest Is Added.

At Princeton the fashion in which the Tigers came back from the hole they were in after Chicago's surprising triumph over them adds a deal of interest to this week's venerable affair at New Haven. The Yale-Maryland tie, coupled with Princeton's hard-hitting victory over Lehigh, a team that was within three points of Pennsylvania earlier in the season, makes the Yale-Princeton game more interesting, with the Tigers trying desperately to wipe away its most disappointing season in years with one great finish. Even so, Yale remains favorite, for the Maryland game probably removed a good deal of bad football and will be apt to be a fillip more than an easy victory would have done.

Close behind the Yale game, or right along with it in the East, was Pennsylvania's defeat at the hands of Penn State. Here was another game in which a long run stood out from either an interception or a fumble, but this time French's 90-yard gallop only added to Pennsylvania's trouble and piled up the score. Pennsylvania's defense, which has stood up splendidly against opposition all season, was apparently working along the ground all right, but when State turned to the air it came through.

Navy's tie game with Georgetown was not so unexpected as some of the other results of the day. Georgetown has been playing fast, smart football through the season and was regarded as being very much of a threat to a Navy team which has not been going too well this season.

N. Y. U. Had Hard Fight.

Of New York's teams, New York University came through over Georgia after a hard fight, as had been more or less expected, and Fordham, with its one-point victory over Boston College, can be considered a little lucky. The victory of the Maroon, scored four days after its very hard-fought tie with West Virginia, came through a spot in the schedule that many thought would prove the stumbling block for the team and kept it with its record still unblotched by defeat.

For Columbia, the very clean-cut defeat at the hands of Colgate was a crushing disappointment. It was generally conceded that Colgate carried far too much power for the New Yorkers, but Columbia had hoped for more of a stand than the Blue and White was able to put up.

There cannot be too much credit given to a Dartmouth team for its return to winning form against Brown. Here was a team, with victory snatched from its hands by bad breaks and a fighting Yale team the previous Saturday and then, with high hopes marred there, informed after the game that the keystone of the team had been lost for the season in the unfortunate injury to Al Masters, going into action against a team which could be numbered among the hardest to handle in the East. The most significant thing about Dartmouth's victory was the performance of Bill Morton. Entering the game at the end of the first period, he picked up his team after from quarterback and went through with a very good performance, with the Green team going strong with him.

Notre Dame Faces Test.

Of the country at large, the even rolling along of the remarkable Notre Dame team was not jarred by Drake despite a touchdown by the losers, which gave them a lead for a while. But beaters loom up ahead for Rockne's men with Southern California and Northwestern and Army in sight. In the next three weeks this team from South Bend will either be hailed as the greatest Notre Dame team of modern years or simply as another fine team that couldn't quite get through a terrific schedule. If Notre Dame wins these next games, there can be no doubt of its brilliance.

Northwestern continued along by stopping Ohio State, which had been showing pretensions, to an undefeated record in the conference. Wisconsin's victory over Chicago was surprising in its size, and Iowa's victory over Minnesota was very surprising.

On the Pacific Coast, the day was featured by the very hard fight Stanford had in stopping Washington, 6 to 0, the winner requiring a partially blocked kick early in the game to score and then being hard pressed through most of the rest of the game to stand off a Washington score.

In the South, Tulane and Vanderbilt stand out, the former with its thorough defeat of Auburn, and Vanderbilt by adding another bit of bad news to Georgia Tech's season.

Of the games of the day, perhaps two played in the Middle West and lost by Army and Harvard, were the most interesting. Illinois had been favored over Army and Harvard had been favored over Michigan. In both games, a change in the luck here and there might have changed the balance of the scale.

Obviously, Harvard's missed points after touchdowns, the second kick being blocked, cost the victory, but if Tommy Gilligan had arrived across the goal in the closing minute a shade sooner than he did the Crimson might have come through in what would undoubtedly have been the most sensational come-back of the season.

Plans Not Carried Out.

In both these intersectional games, the lateral pass figured in scoring, but never as a play completed according to plans. Harvard's first touchdown came on a run from a fumbled pass, and what appeared to be the most important break of the Army defeat was the intercepted lateral that changed the game's complexion definitely.

Then there was the Harvard fumble that gave Michigan its first score and the muffed boundary line punt that gave Illinois its first score. It was the old story of two teams evenly matched in both games with breaks stepping in to decide things.

Harvard remains a fine team in defeat. The Middle West has pointed to these games with pride, but Michigan's early defeats can be left out of consideration. The team rested for two weeks, with an open date carefully scheduled for the day when Harvard was meeting a strong Florida team and pointed definitely to this game. And certainly Harvard played good football throughout. In the Illinois game it was the defensive strength of Illinois that decided the issue. But the Army will always think of the chance lost in the lateral pass.

Here was Army behind, 10 to 0, as the result of the amazing punt that had such a fatal backward bounce, attacking well and definitely. Down on the Illinois 15-yard line Army called for the lateral pass, and it was a logical, well-chosen play, but Wolgast, Illinois's end, figured it and chose to gamble on it.

This end came tearing into the back field, put himself between Murrel and Cagle, leaving Cagle absolutely clear on the outside, and chose a gamble on the interception. If he had missed, if Murrel, somehow, had managed to get the ball over his head to Cagle's hands, the chances are very strong that Cagle would have been across with the score. Instead there came the long run and a score of 17 to 0, a terrific task in front of Army with the game half over.

Taking away that long run, Army had greater yardage than Illinois and Army had more first downs. But Illinois, having forced the setting for the first break on the queer punt, took full advantage of the second and during the rest of the game kept out of the air and simply turned on a fighting, surging defense that made it, by a shade, the better team of the afternoon.

Army, like Harvard, remains a firm football team despite the fact that it has lost to Yale and to Illinois and has been tied by Harvard. Football today no longer demands undefeated teams as the entrance fee to first-class football.

Behind the uproar of the larger games, Williams triumphed in Little Three play, scoring a tight victory over Wesleyan, while Amherst was having a surprising tie with Tufts turned in.

So. California Leads Elevens In Point Scoring; Dartmouth 2d

COLUMBIA MAY LOSE EDLING, A LINEMAN

Extent of Injuries Suffered by End in Colgate Game Will Be Known Today.

Columbia University's football squad will begin preparations today for the game with University of Pennsylvania here Saturday. Although a number of the Blue and White varsity players came out of the Colgate game with injuries and bruises, Coach Crowley is hopeful these men will respond to treatment during the week, in which case he will be able to put his full strength on the field.

Ralph Hewitt, Harry Scott and Joe Stanczyk were kept on the sidelines during most of the Colgate game because of injuries, and it was not until the final period that Crowley sent in Hewitt and Scott.

In the line Art Hill, end, Captain Malcolm Bleecker and Remy Tye, tackles; and Jim Campbell, centre, started against Colgate even though they were still feeling the effects of the past few games.

Ed Edling, youthful sophomore end who was injured in Saturday's game, probably will be lost to the squad for the remainder of the season. Edling, who was a reserve wingman on last year's freshman squad, developed rapidly this year and won a first string varsity berth a few weeks ago.

Edling was carried from the field late in the first half of the Colgate game and an examination showed that his left shoulder and arm were injured. The extent of his injuries will not be known until today, when X-ray photos are available, but it appears doubtful if he will see further action this season.

St. Mary's Beats Santa Clara.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10 (AP).—St. Mary's football team today defeated the Santa Clara eleven, 6 to 0.

THREE TEAMS IN LEAD FOR SOUTHERN HONORS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 9.—Tulane, Vanderbilt and Tennessee remain on the top of the football world in the Southern Conference. Saturday there will be only two left in first ranks, as Tennessee and Vanderbilt will hold their annual clash in Knoxville. This game should be close. Tennessee has been recognized as strong from the start. Vanderbilt, after a fair start against comparatively weak teams, has come into her own.

Tulane on Saturday plays Sewanee, in which Tulane is favored. Then comes Louisiana State University, which should be a harder contest.

The fourth undefeated team in the Conference is Duke. However, the Carolinians have played only one Conference game.

Most of the big contests in which interest has centred from the start of the season already have been played. Perhaps the outstanding game remaining is that of Georgia and Georgia Tech in Athens. Georgia has had an off year; although one marked by brilliant moments. The team has to its credit victories over Yale and North Carolina, and has been beaten by Florida, Tulane, Oglethorpe and New York University. But in each game it lost Georgia came back in the last half, showing unusual reserve power. Tech also has experienced one of its worst years, but the mere attraction of Georgia playing Tech probably will draw 35,000 spectators.

In the S. I. A. A., Chattanooga stands far above the field. Spring Hill, coached by Mike Donahue, has made a good record. Oglethorpe has defeated Georgia, Dayton University and Manhattan College, losing to Villanova, Citadel and St. Louis University by narrow margins.

HARVARD RESUMES DRILLS TOMORROW

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—Harvard's disappointed but still courageous football squad returned this afternoon from its defeat at Ann Arbor by Michigan. The game took no toll of regulars, the only injury of any extent being that suffered by Tom Mason, track team captain, who took part in only one play, being knocked out when he ran back the ball on the kick-off in the second half.

While the Crimson forwards took a terrific pounding at their goal line in valaly striving to prevent the Wolverines' two touchdowns, they were in much better all-round shape after the game than they were after several previous contests.

Although failing to win, the eleven suffered no shock to its morale as in the game with Dartmouth in the stadium here two weeks ago, when the Green had Harvard practically disorganized in the second half.

There will be no practice for the men who played at Michigan when the second reserve team coach, Coach Horween spent the week-end at his home in Chicago and will not start the Crimsons' drive for the Yale game until Tuesday. Harvard plays Holy Cross Saturday and regards the Crusaders as stronger than last Fall, when a scoreless tie was played in the stadium, but it will be toward the Yale game of Nov. 23 that the Cambridge outfit will be constantly headed.

Whether there will be any line changes this week will not be determined until the team gets into action. Kuehn again may be tried in the line in combination with the Dickmor boys, or Talbot may continue at right guard.

The back field situation remains unchanged, with White and Mays continuing as the strongest players to interchange with Putnam and Devens.

PRINCETON TO OPEN FINAL WEEK'S DRILL

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—With no injuries resulting from the encounter with Lehigh yesterday, Princeton tomorrow will open its last week of gridiron practice this season with the services of all men on the squad, the possible exception being Trix Bennett, who was hurt in the Chicago game. A light workout is on the schedule, as Coach Roper begins concentration on the game with Yale Saturday.

Levine, former 200-pound guard in the Tiger line, has at last solved the problem of interference in the back field. His assignment to the fullback position has greatly increased the strength of the Princeton attack by clearing the way for Witmer and Carey. Not only did Levine show up proficiently at interfering, but also he was responsible for intercepting two of the Lehigh forwards and backed up the Tiger line on the defense with exceptional ability. As it appears now, Levine will be at the fullback post against Yale, with Lowry and Witmer at the halfback positions and Carey acting as quarter.

Moore is expected to be in shape for guard and will no doubt be in the starting line-up. His return will bolster the line, while Eastfield and White at tackles, Mestres at guard and Lea and Yeckley at ends will present a formidable forward wall against the Elis. Centre probably will be taken over by Caldwell.

Light scrimmages are expected this week in order to avoid possibility of injury.

NAVY ELEVEN LOSES DALE BAUER, CRANE

Both Out for Season, Former With Broken Arm, Latter With Sprained Ankle.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 10.—Two valuable members of the Naval Academy football squad are lost for the season as a result of injuries suffered in the game with Georgetown yesterday, while another, hurt in the Princeton game, also will not be able to play again.

One of the players injured yesterday is Dale Bauer, a back, who broke his arm. Leo Crane, end, hurt in the Princeton game, played a short time yesterday but sprained his ankle badly and is not expected to return to the squad this season.

Frank Crinkley, tackle, who sprained his knee a week ago, is improving slowly, and Little Chanon is the boy to relieve him. All three injured players have another year at the Academy.

On the other hand, Williams and Kobilus, good backs, out with injuries yesterday, are recuperating and soon will return for practice.

INTENSIVE WORK PLANNED FOR YALE

BOOTH WALKS WITH LIMP

Albie Has Slightly Twisted Knee, but Is Due to Report in Uniform for Practice Today.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—Albie Booth and Hastar Ellis, Yale's scoring ace, are both suffering from slight muscle bruises, but Head Coach Mal Stevens said tonight that Booth would be in first class condition for the Princeton game, which climaxes Yale's home season in the bowl next Saturday.

Booth accomplished more ground gaining than all his fellow backs combined in the Maryland game, scoring once and by his artillery drives wheeling the eleven into position for its second touchdown. He complained of a slight bruise and an examination of his injuries showed that he could be used in two or three days. He denied that he is also suffering from a cold.

Ellis, who pulled Yale from impending defeat against Dartmouth, was compelled to retire from yesterday's game because his trick knee slipped out of place. He was escorted from the bowl.

To Be in Uniform Today.

Trainer George Corros said that both Booth and Ellis would in uniform tomorrow, would probably take part in the signal rehearsal and would do some scrimmaging in the mid-week intensive football program which Stevens will outline. Booth has a slightly twisted knee and he walks with a limp.

Captain Waldo Greene and Frank Vincent received slight shoulder bruises. Coach Stevens will probably order three days of scrimmaging this week, starting on Tuesday. The Maryland tie revealed some team weakness which the coaches will try to eliminate by intensive actual play.

Yale has not seen Princeton play this year and has no knowledge of the details of the Princeton attack. Yale and Princeton have continued their practice unpresented although Yale and Harvard and Yale's other opponents have either allowed it to lapse or never framed one.

The Yale coaches stated that they have not decided upon the line-up against Princeton, but there is a belief that the rush-line will probably start the game as against Maryland. Big Jim Stewart, who was tried at left guard in place of Fred Loeser, filled expectations.

Yale's left guard formation this Fall has called for roving guard duty in that position and Stewart has appeared ideally adapted to the role.

Marting May Play Tackle.

Substantial gains were made by Maryland between Don Ferris and Dave Hickok over Yale's left wing. The veteran Frank Marting will probably be started at left tackle. The position has been in doubt between Marting and Ferris.

The back field combination which will line up Saturday is undecided. It is likely that Bob Hall, who was slightly bruised in the Dartmouth game, will be started at quarterback. His exhibition in running the eleven has excelled in all-round plays this Fall.

The veteran Bob Wilson will probably be reserved for one of the later playing periods. The coaches have not yet decided whether to place Booth at left halfback or quarterback, but chances are that Hall will be used during the first playing period and that Booth will be injected into the attack in the second.

N. Y. U. Loses O'Herin With Broken Leg for Rest of Season; Squad Drills Today

GAUDET MAY REPLACE HIM

Remainder of Squad in Good Shape and Will Take Part in Today's Workout.

Satisfied with the showing of the New York University football team in its contest Saturday with the University of Georgia, Head Coach Chick Meehan today will begin preparations for the Violet's third and final intersectional game of the season scheduled with the University of Missouri eleven at the Yankee Stadium Saturday. The victory over the Georgia Bulldogs was marred somewhat when it was definitely determined that John (Jinx) O'Herin, veteran quarterback, who has also been used as halfback, would be out for the remainder of the season and had played his last game for N. Y. U.

O'Herin was carried from the field on Saturday in the third period of the Georgia game, and it was announced yesterday by Dr. Michael Tetelman, team physician, that O'Herin's injury is a broken leg. This is the second serious blow of this nature that N. Y. U. has received in successive contests. In the Georgetown game the previous week Charlie Marshall, star end, was lost to the eleven for the rest of the season's campaign because of a fracture of the ankle. Both athletes are at the French Hospital.

It was pointed out that the injured quarterback has been a victim of ill luck since his entry at New York University in 1925, in this way earning the sobriquet of Jinx, as he is known to the student body. In his freshman year O'Herin suffered a shoulder injury and was unable to play; as a sophomore he was in an automobile accident soon after the season opened, and this year, as a senior, previous to his latest injury, he was late in reporting, due to a mastoid abscess that was removed the latter part of August.

Coach Meehan said that he had not decided on a substitute for O'Herin, having several members of the squad in mind. Al Gaudet, who replaced O'Herin, and who showed brilliant form until he was removed because of a slight injury to his arm, is among these. There is also a possibility that Dave Myers may recover from his injury in time for the Missouri game, but this is rather remote.

With the loss of O'Herin the kicking burden, which had been so capably filled by Marshall and then by O'Herin, will have to fall on Beryl Follet or Gaudet. The remainder of the squad finished the game in good physical shape, although somewhat shaken up, and will be present at today's workout.

BROOKLYN EVENING VICTOR.

Conquers Dickinson Evening High at Cross-Country by 15 to 40.

The Brooklyn Evening High School cross-country team vanquished the Dickinson Evening High School harriers, 15 to 40, over a course of about two and one-half miles in Jersey City yesterday.

William Drew and Samuel Lomax of the winning team finished hand-in-hand for first place, 110 yards ahead of their teammate, Irving Schwartz, who placed third. McTague, the first Dickinson runner to finish, placed seventh. The winning time was 11:33.

PURDUE IN FRONT FOR BIG TEN TITLE

Eleven Appears Headed for Championship for First Time in Conference History.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 (AP).—The 1929 Western Conference football championship is about to land at Purdue for the first time in the Big Ten history of more than thirty years.

The undefeated Purdue eleven, with victories over Michigan, Chicago and Wisconsin, faces its greatest test next Saturday at Lafayette against Iowa, and if victorious needs only to conquer Indiana a week later to finish the season without defeat and in undisputed possession of the title.

Iowa, the wrecker of Minnesota's championship aspirations, made Purdue's championship prospects possible, defeating the hitherto unbeaten Gophers, 9 to 7, yesterday. The Iowa game looms tonight as a tremendous hurdle for the Boilermakers. If Purdue does not clear it, then a three-cornered tie, involving Northwestern, Minnesota and Purdue, is possible.

Bergherm, Northwestern's fullback, closed in on Pharmer of Minnesota for Conference scoring honors yesterday, Bergherm boosted his total to 44 points, with Pharmer hanging on the lead with 49.

The standing of the leaders, including scoring in all games, follows:

Player.	Games.	Td.	Fg.	Pat.	Tp.
Pharmer, Minnesota	4	8	1	1	49
Bergherm, Northwestern	6	7	0	2	44
Glassgow, Iowa	5	6	0	0	36
Harmeson, Purdue	5	5	0	0	30
Welch, Purdue	4	4	0	0	24
Hansen, Iowa	5	3	0	4	22
Gembis, Minnesota	4	3	0	0	18

Can Take Big Six Crown by Defeating Nebraska if Latter Beats Oklahoma.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Kansas Aggies, the Big Six team which did not win a Conference game last year, has a golden opportunity to annex the 1929 title.

The Aggies, rising from third to second place in the Conference ranking by a 3-to-2 victory over Iowa State yesterday while Kansas was toppling Oklahoma from the peak, 7 to 0, have only one Conference game remaining. That is with the 1928 champions, Nebraska, on Nov. 23 in Manhattan. If the first-place Nebraskans defeat Oklahoma, the Aggies can win the championship by beating Nebraska.

The Conference standing:

	Won.	Lost.	Tied.
Kansas	2	2	0

Haverford Captain Increases Season's Total to 75 in Individual Scoring.

UANSA IN THIRD PLACE

Pittsburgh Player Has 67 Tallies—Marsters, Although Out of Game, Still Leads East.

Captain Morris of the Haverford eleven scored ten points for his team last Saturday and boosted his season's total to 75 to take second place in the race for individual scoring honors in the East. Al Marsters of Dartmouth, although he could not play last week, being in the hospital, still is the leader with 106 points. His playing days are over, so it is quite likely that he will not be at the top when the season ends.

Uansa of the undefeated Pittsburgh eleven advanced to third place in the present list through scoring one touchdown against Washington and Jefferson last Saturday. He now has 67 tallies and is steadily increasing his total.

Fourth place is shared by Dowler of Colgate and Hinkel of Bucknell, each having 66 points. Dowler came up the list through his work against the Columbia eleven and is another player who promises to remain among the leaders from the present time to the end of the campaign. He appears to be playing in top form now.

Davidowitz Is Next.

One point behind the Colgate and Bucknell stars comes Davidowitz of Lehigh, which was shut out by Princeton last Saturday. A week ago the Lehigh ace was in second place, but because he was unable to score he was forced down the list. However, the season isn't over and another week may find him in second or third place.

Although Booth of Yale added to his total against Maryland Saturday he dropped from sixth to seventh position on the list, some of the other stars having scored higher totals. The Yale ace now has 63 tallies.

Eighth place is held by Goff of Rhode Island State, with 55 markers, and Hewitt of Columbia, Murrel of the Army and Petrolonus of Albright share ninth position, each with 54 tallies.

Taking the first ten names on the scoring list it is seen that as many colleges are represented, showing that no particular one has a monopoly on high scoring. The colleges are Dartmouth, Haverford, Pittsburgh, Colgate, Bucknell, Lehigh, Yale, Rhode Island State, Columbia and Army.

Has Sixteen Touchdowns.

Marsters still is the touchdown king of the East with 16 successful crossings of the enemy line on his list. Four men are grouped in second place in this respect, Morris, Uansa, Dowler and Hinkel each having scored eleven times.

Ellert, end on the Syracuse eleven, is the pace setter in point-after-touchdown kicking with 13 successful attempts on his record. Second place, at 14 each, is shared by Stramiello, Colgate wing, and Wakeman, tackle on Cornell's team. Several others have sent the ball over the bar twelve times and still others have eleven on their list.

The first man on the list to have scored in all three ways, touchdown, field goal and point after touchdown, is Booth of Yale, who has eight touchdowns, one field goal and twelve extra points.

Bowling Body Meets Tonight.

The annual meeting of the New York Bowling Association will be held at 6:45 this evening at Thum's alleys. Officers and an executive committee will be elected.

FORDHAM'S ELEVEN PRAISED BY COACH

Coach Frank Cavanaugh of the undefeated Fordham University football eleven had nothing but praise for the Maroon team, which came from behind to defeat the previously unbeaten Boston College eleven at Fenway Park, Boston, Saturday. Cavanaugh praised his players in the dressing room after the game and then permitted those players who live in the vicinity of Boston to visit their homes.

The coach had especial praise for the passing combination of Fisher to Murphy, which was responsible for the touchdown in the last five minutes of the game. He also commended Pete Wisniewski, the guard, for the calm fashion in which he kicked the point after touchdown which gave the New Yorkers their single-point victory.

Captain Thomas Siano played his usual good game at centre and, although he was unconscious at one stage of the game for a few minutes, he showed no ill effects of the bruising contest.

Fordham will play Thiel on Fordham Field this Saturday, but the next two weeks' practice will be spent mainly in preparation for Bucknell, which closes the Maroon's season on Nov. 28 at the Polo Grounds. Bucknell on Saturday conquered the previously undefeated Villanova eleven.

PARTRIDGE BEATS BOWMAN.

Melvin H. Partridge defeated Frank L. Bowman in a five-set final match for the New York A. C. tennis singles championship at Travers Island yesterday. The scores were 1—6, 6—1, 0—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Partridge's victory was unexpected, as he was seeded No. 3 in the tourney, and Bowman, N. Y. A. C. team captain, was ranked one notch ahead of him. The match was poorly played, both men being far off their usual form.

McVey to Fight Smith.

Jack McVey, negro middleweight of Harlem, will undertake to check the winning career of Harry Smith, neighborhood rival, when they meet in the stellar ten-round bout Saturday night at the Olympia Boxing Club.

BIG COAST ELEVENS KEEP STIFF PACE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10 (AP).—In a week-end without incident except the unchecked advance of favored elevens, Far Western football swung into the homestretch of an already brilliant season.

Driving toward the Pacific Coast Conference championship and sole surviving undefeated member of the ten-team organization, California's Bears added another victim with a smashing 53-to-14 victory over Montana's Grizzlies. Some 25,000 persons saw the Bears win their third conference game at Berkeley. Second and third string men shouldered the burden for California during most of the contest while the regulars rested for the harder tilt with Washington here next Saturday.

Two hurdles loom between California and its probable first championship in six years. Next week-end Washington comes down, a short-ender and holder of that psychological advantage. A week later the Bears meet their oldest rivals, Stanford's Cardinals, in the game that is expected to determine the championship.

Stanford, with one defeat on its record, eked out a 6-to-0 victory over Washington after a terrific battle. Unaccustomed to the muddy, slippery home field of its opponent, the Cardinals were lucky to pull out with a victory. They scored their lone touchdown in the early minutes of play.

In the third conference engagement Washington State's Cougars pounded out a 41-7 victory over Idaho's Vandals.

One upset was listed with University of Arizona as the victim. Previously undefeated and untied and considered certain winners, the Wild Cats lost, 13-12, to Pomona's Sage Hens.

The conference standing:

	Won.	Lost.	Tied.	Pts. Scored.	Pts. Against.
California	4	0	0	125	20

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 10.—With the first Middle Three game of the season having been won from Rutgers Saturday, the Lafayette College football team will enter upon a final two weeks of practice tomorrow in preparation for Temple and Lehigh.

Coach McCracken has announced that much emphasis will be put on tackling practice and on forward pass defense this week. Lafayette has displayed weakness in both these departments. Woodfin, fullback, and Vanderbush, tackle, who were out of the game Saturday, will be in condition to take light workouts this week.

Plansky Also Excels With 40-Yard Field Goal—Friedman's Passes Aid in Touchdown Marches.

By ARTHUR J. DALEY.

A Giant line that played with devastating effectiveness in front of a smooth-working back field, paved the way to a 22-to-0 victory over the Orange A. C. at the Polo Grounds before a crowd of 20,000 yesterday.

By squeezing out a triumph from the Orange eleven, New York's contender for the professional football title increased its winning streak to seven straight, amply avenged a scoreless deadlock with the New Jersey team in the opening game of the season, and held its first place tie in the National League race with the unbeaten Green Bay Packers.

Less than five minutes after the game started the Giants, on two vicious line plunges by Leonard Sedbrook which traversed twenty-five yards, brought in the initial score. But no one was certain of the Giant victory at that early stage of the contest and it was not until a beautiful arching toss from Benny Friedman to Ray Flaherty accounted for a second touchdown in the same session and Tony Plansky drop-kicked a forty-yard field goal from a bad angle in the second quarter and Sedbrooke intercepted a lateral pass to run unmolested for sixty yards to a touchdown in the third period, that the convictions grew to certainty that it was seven straight for the New York combination.

Friedman Checks Pease.

Outside of that closing rush, the only moment that the Orange-shirted eleven had a chance to score was when George Pease, once of Columbia, hauled down a Giant kick-off with one hand, while standing on the goal line, evaded all New York tacklers except Friedman, who forced him out of bounds after a fifty-five-yard gallop.

Little time was wasted at the start of the game before six points dropped into the New York slot on the scoreboard. After an opening exchange of kicks Feather intercepted an Orange pass on the visitors' 25-yard strip. Sedbrooke smashed through the line for seven yards, and on the next play continued to a touchdown, shaking off tacklers in a relentless drive for the goal line.

The Giants gained possession of the ball right after the following kick-off on the New York 20-yard strip. Friedman arched the ball to Flaherty for fifteen yards. Plansky tore loose for twenty-three yards, and on the next play he shot a pass to Munn for fifteen yards more. This scoring drive was halted, however, with Sedbrooke one foot short of a first down on the 4-yard mark.

Then Kirkieski apparently kicked out of danger, but Friedman's accurate right arm, which is always dangerous, sent a beautiful bullet heave to Sedbrooke for seventeen yards. Benny gained slightly on a plunge and then dropped back to hurl a sizzling pass to Flaherty over the goal-line. Flaherty jumped up and hugged the ball tightly before dropping to the ground for the second touchdown.

Plansky Proves Versatile.

The Giants were in scoring territory in the second quarter, thanks to a long pass from Plansky to his old Georgetown team-mate, Jack (Ghost) Hagerty, a pass that brought the oval to the 11-yard strip. But two more passes were batted down and the ball still rested eleven yards from a touchdown. Plansky dropped far behind the line of scrimmage and applied his left toe to the ball, which sailed high over the posts for a field goal.

FAVORITES WINNERS IN SCHOOL GAMES

FORDHAM PREP OUTCLASSED

Suburban and out-of-town scholastic elevens were seen in many fine football games on Saturday, while in Greater New York the majority of the more important teams were idle because they saw action on election day. Only nine games were played within the city limits, but in Westchester, on Long Island, in New Jersey, up-State New York and New England virtually every schoolboy eleven of prominence engaged in gridiron combats.

In the nine local games the favorites ran true to form, with perhaps one exception. A minor surprise was furnished by Seward Park High, which defeated James Monroe High, 13 to 0. The Monroe team is not strong, but was regarded as a likely winner over Seward Park, which has had a drab football history. The triumph over Monroe was Seward Park's first victory over a major opponent.

Fordham Prep was utterly outclassed by the powerful Hun School eleven of Princeton, N. J. Although outweighed greatly and handicapped by the absence of several regulars, the Fordham team fought hard in a valiant attempt to stem the Hun School attack, which registered a 32 to 0 victory. In the last few minutes Fordham advanced to the Hun 2-yard line as the result of several brilliant forward passes, but efforts to score were futile.

St. Francis Prep Beaten.

Over in Brooklyn, St. John's High vanquished an old rival, St. Francis Prep, 12 to 0, and advanced a step nearer the Brooklyn Catholic Schools championship. The only obstacle now standing in the way of St. John's as far as that title is concerned is Brooklyn Prep, and the two will battle it out on Thanksgiving day. In the meantime, Brooklyn Prep humbled New Utrecht High, 14 to 0, with Arthur Toomey and Captain Jiggs Haggerty playing the stellar roles.

Alexander Hamilton High went down in its third defeat before Brooklyn Tech, Bushwick, by a 12 to 0 score, and another Brooklyn eleven, Brooklyn Tech, vanquished Thomas Jefferson, 20 to 0.

Over on Staten Island the strong Curtis High eleven, which, previous to the Peekskill M. A. clash a week ago, had been unbeaten, got back into the winning column by conquering St. Peter's High, 18 to 0. In other games, both of which involved evening high schools, New Lots Evening defeated Fordham Evening, 7 to 0 and Dickinson Evening of Jersey City disposed of Bay Ridge Evening, 12 to 0.

Roosevelt High of Yonkers and New Rochelle remained at the top in the Westchester Interscholastic A. A. race by winning, as did also Yonkers High and Mamaroneck in the other two league contests. Yonkers won its first league game in three starts by handing a surprise 12 to 0 defeat to Mount Vernon High due to the scoring activities of Andy Kramer, who registered both touchdowns.

New Rochelle Triumphs.

New Rochelle, which has scored heavily on all its games this season, romped to a 45 to 0 triumph over White Plains, which has won one and lost two of its W. I. A. A. games to date. Roosevelt and New Rochelle are scheduled to meet on the latter's field next week and the winner will likely capture the league laurels. Close behind Roosevelt and New Rochelle, each of which has won three and lost none of its W. I. A. A. clashes, is Mount Vernon, with two victories and one defeat.

Roosevelt won Saturday at the expense of Port Chester to the tune of 15 to 0. Like Yonkers, Mamaroneck and White Plains Port Chester now has won one and lost two. In the other W. I. A. A. contest Mamaroneck scored its initial victory, turning back Gorton High, 25 to 14. Gorton has lost every one of its three league games and is in the cellar position.

In other noteworthy Westchester games Pelham Memorial High scored its fourth straight triumph, defeating Pleasantville, 32 to 0, and the Riverdale School eleven tallied its fourth victory of the season, downing MacBurney School, 13 to 0.

Poly Prep Wins Third Straight.

Poly Prep of Brooklyn and Richmond Hill High journeyed out to Long Island to win impressively. Poly registered its third straight triumph in conquering Stony Brook High, 32 to 0. Frank Sheldon, star Poly left halfback, scored seventeen of his team's total points. Two blocked kicks led to two touchdowns as Richmond Hill vanquished Lawrence High, 19 to 6.

Among the other important Long Island games was the one between Rutgers Prep of New Brunswick, N. J., and St. Paul's School of Garden City, which resulted in a 13 to 13 deadlock. The final whistle probably saved the visitors from defeat, as St. Paul's was deep in Rutgers Prep territory when the game ended.

The undefeated and untied Patchogue High eleven kept its record unblemished by scoring its sixth straight victory, defeating Sayville, 12 to 6. The powerful Southampton team won easily from Greenport High, 41 to 0. It was Southampton's fourth successive triumph.

Another leading Long Island team, Freeport High, went over to Asbury Park, N. J., to engage the high-scoring Asbury Park High eleven and was forced to submit to a 56 to 0 defeat. However, the Freeport team gained the distinction of registering the first touchdown of the year against Asbury Park. Eastman accounting for it. Union Hill High took first place in the North Hudson Interscholastic League by downing West New York Memorial High, 6 to 0, while Nutley High went into the lead in the Bergen County Class A division by swamping Lyndhurst High, 72 to 0. Nutley's undefeated and untied eleven conquered Newark East Side High, 21 to 0.

Princeton Prep Loses, 27—6.

Other New Jersey highlights included the unbeaten Peddie Institute team's 27 to 0 triumph over Princeton Prep, Lawrenceville's 13 to 12 victory over St. Benedict's Prep, the 13 to 6 defeat of Blair Academy by Seton Hall Prep, and Bordentown Military Institute's 27 to 12 setback received from Morristown Prep.

In the public school ranks additional features included the 7 to 7 tie between Paterson Central and Passaic, the scoreless deadlock between Barringer and Newark Central, Dickinson's 20 to 0 triumph over Kearny, and the scoreless tie between Rutherford and Newark South Side.

Outstanding among the New England prep school games was the 14 to 7 triumph of Phillips Exeter over its ancient rival, Phillips Andover, in their forty-ninth annual game, which served as the feature of the dedication of the new Exeter stands. It was Exeter's first victory over Andover since 1924 and its twenty-first in the series. Andover has won twenty-three times and five contests resulted in a tie.

Over in New Jersey Lincoln High will play Paterson East Side High at Paterson and another game will bring together Bloomfield and Irvington at Irvington. Up in Westchester, Harrison High will be host to the East Chester High eleven. On Long Island, Hicksville High will meet Manhasset High at Manhasset.

MIAMI TRACK SOLD TO PHILADELPHIANS

Joseph M. Smoot, organizer and president of the Miami Jockey Club, announced here yesterday that he has sold his entire interest in the Hialeah racing plant to J. H. Carstairs and Barclay H. Warburton of Philadelphia, former business associates of Mr. Smoot, and intimate friends. Terms of the sale were not announced, but the racetrack represents an original investment of $1,110,000.

Mr. Warburton will be the new president of the Miami Jockey Club, and Frank J. Bruen, vice president of the Madison Square Garden Club, is expected to take the post of general manager. Norman B. Mack and Charles E. Newton will also be associated with the management.

Mr. Bruen has been asked to succeed John J. Day, but has not accepted definitely, as he intends to continue with the Garden corporation. Mr. Day, who has been associated with Mr. Smoot for several years in the Miami proposition, resigned voluntarily.

The new management has assumed control of the Jockey Club and will carry on the plans already under way for the coming forty-five-day meeting, beginning on Jan. 14.

Mr. Smoot, in announcing the sale of his interests, said his only reason was to retire permanently from all business. He first entered racing when he built the Hialeah race course and started operations on Jan. 15, 1925. The meetings have been conducted every Winter with the exception of 1928, when the racing was discontinued because of the Florida ban on mutuel betting.

The retiring executive said he first thought of disposing of his Miami interests in August, during the Saratoga meeting, but continued with his plans and preparations before doing anything definite because he feared for the future of the 1930 meeting.

He went ahead with all plans and expected to have at least 1,000 horses at the track this Winter. Many of the leading Eastern owners have made reservations. Daily purses at the Miami meeting will average $10,800.

Plans Are Outlined.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10 (AP).—Plans to make Miami, Fla., a great racing centre were outlined today by Barclay H. Warburton, prominent in club and society circles here and who recently resigned as Mayor of Palm Beach, following the announcement that a group of Philadelphians had purchased an interest in the Miami Jockey Club.

"We hope to interest Eastern and Western horsemen alike in our effort to make the Miami track a miniature Belmont Park or Saratoga," said Mr. Warburton. "We shall endeavor to promote the interest of breeding and racing along the same lines as the Westchester Racing Association has done, and in time to give the State of Florida a track that, so far as beauty and appurtenances are concerned, will compare favorably with any in this country.

"We shall also strive to give the State an amusement feature that will draw thousands of visitors in a way that will reflect the greatest credit upon Miami and Dade County.

"We propose to conduct racing in Florida under the laws of our State and under no condition ever to overstep their proprieties. We shall race this Winter under those conditions and none other, and already have applications for more than 1,700 stalls with accommodations for but 1,100."

HORSE SHOW SETS ATTENDANCE MARK

RESUME SESSIONS TODAY

Will Start This Morning at 10 o'Clock—Walter Dear, Trotting Champion, Appears Tonight.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Following a welcome rest over Sunday, the sessions of the forty-fourth annual National Horse Show will continue this morning at 10 o'clock in Madison Square Garden, to run through Wednesday evening, when a program promising much of the spectacular will bring the great exhibition to a close. This year's event has been remarkably successful, especially in the matter of attendance, the first three days last week showing a 20 per cent increase over the corresponding period a year ago.

At each session thus far, the programs have been of sufficient variety to engross the most fastidious enthusiast and while many of the classes, especially in the breeding and harness divisions, have suffered from lack of competition, this deficiency has been more than made up in the various saddle groups, the hunter and jumper events and the international military competitions.

The dash and thrills of the exhibitions by the "White Horse Battery," the pageantry and color of the four-in-hand contests and parades, will be continued and will be supplemented by other features quite as interesting. Notable will be the two exhibition appearances of Walter Dear, 2:02¼, the three-year-old trotting champion, at 8:15 o'clock tonight and at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when he will be shown by the noted reinsman, Walter Cox.

Record Is Unequaled.

Walter Dear's racing record has never been equaled in the history of the light harness turf. This champion juvenile, although credited to the ownership of W. H. Cane of the Good Time Stable of Goshen, N. Y., really was bred and is owned by Mrs. Cane. She bought his dam, Biltsy, without consultation with any expert and bred her to Laural Hall, a son of Peter the Great. During the latter part of the 1928 racing season Walter Dear showed more than enough speed to warrant his being held for this year's rich colt stakes and he fulfilled expectations with a record unsurpassed.

Walter Dear was not started until the sixth Grand Circuit meeting in Grand Rapids, where he won a first heat in 2:08½ and a third in 2:04½, which at once made him the class of the year for his age. He started in five other stakes—the Champion Stallion at North Randall, the Review Stake at Goshen, the Breeders Futurity at Syracuse. He topped the summary lists with the turf's two richest stakes for age—the Kentucky Futurity, worth $9,000 to the winner, and the Hambletonian, with a net value of $39,152, closing his season with a winning credit of $57,510.

In his six starts the champion trotted fifteen heats, losing two, and including seven in 2:04¼. He averaged a fraction faster than 2:05—extreme speed for a trotter of any age or sex—while five of the seven averaged faster than 2:03. In his two starts in Kentucky he trotted three heats in 2:08¾, a speed mark which has been surpassed by only one three-year-old, but in one heat only.

St. Mesrob to Be Shown.

Horse show followers will have another unique equine career to marvel over this week when St. Mesrob, the world's most noted trotting-bred roadster, will make his appearance in the Garden ring, being entered for competition in classes on all three days. This fifteen-year-old New York bred brown son of the noted stallion Peter the Great has carried off 702 blue and championship ribbons during the ten years he has been in competition in the horse show ring. In addition, he has won three stakes of $2,000, three of $1,500, forty-five of $1,000 and thirty-two of $500.

St. Mesrob became the property of George W. Peak of Winchester, Ill., as a four-year-old in 1918 and was started on the show circuit the following year. He has been exhibited in every prominent show from coast to coast and from Canada to Texas with very few defeats. As a three-year-old he gained a trotting mark of 2:28¾ and has sired a number of speedy trotters. He is shown in double harness with his mate, Peter Handsome. The latter, while not as prominent as St. Mesrob, has accounted for three $2,000 stakes when shown singly.

CARLSON CAPTURES MET. TITLE WALK

WEISS OF NEWARK SECOND

William Carlson, Finnish-American A. C. walker, annexed the seven-mile walking race for the metropolitan championship held over the MacCombs Dam Park course yesterday before 500 persons. Carlson succeeded Harry Kinkel, who did not defend his title.

Max Weiss of the Newark A. C., who finished in second place last year, again placed second, finishing about 200 yards behind Carlson, while Arthur Podbielsky of the Amis A. C. was third, about five yards behind Weiss.

The victor was timed in 0:55:13 2-5, and Weiss finished in 0:56:09 4-5. Podbielsky's time was 0:56:12. Of the field of twenty-four which started, nineteen finished. Two of the starters were disqualified.

Carlson gained the lead at the start of the walk and maintained his advantage throughout, increasing it as the walk progressed. For the first three miles, Carlson, Weiss and Podbielsky led. After this point, Weiss dropped back, but regained second place at the five-mile post.

When it became apparent that Carlson would be an easy victor, interest in the walk centred about the duel between Weiss and Podbielsky. The latter, trailing Weiss by about 100 yards, staged a rally in the last mile, which brought him within five yards of Weiss. Last year, Carlson finished in third place, behind Weiss.

The order of finish:

Belgian Cyclist Enters Contest Opening in Garden Nov. 30.

Gerard Debaets of Belgium, a veteran of nine six-day bicycle races, has entered the contest which starts at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 30, it was announced yesterday. Debaets has a good record in competition, having won five of the events he has entered thus far.

Last March, paired with Franco Georgetti, he was victorious in the Garden. Debaets is one of the most colorful and daring riders in the sport and is a favorite with fans.

Move to Make Conditions More Severe In Grand National to Reduce Size of Fields

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The entry of horses for the Grand National—the world's greatest steeplechase—may be restricted in the future by qualifying conditions. The purpose of the proposed change is to reduce the size of the field, which reached sixty-six this year and threatens to grow into impossible dimensions.

It is now suggested the race be open only to five-year-olds and upward which have placed first, second, third or fourth in a steeplechase of three miles or more and with a value of £1,000 to the winner. Another suggestion is to admit five-year-olds or upward which have won any steeplechase with a value of £2,500—selling races in every case excepted.

A complaint often heard against the Grand National is that the fields are too large, with too many mediocre horses among the starters. Last March, it is recalled, Gregalach, a 100-to-1 shot, won, while only nine of the sixty-six starters completed the course. Next year's race will be run March 28 at Aintree, near Liverpool.

GEN. DRUM POLO CUPS CAPTURED BY BLUES

5,000 See White Defeated, 8-6, in Closing Competition of the First Division.

Getting off to an early lead the Blues defeated the Whites, 8 to 6, in a fast First Division polo game at the Fort Hamilton army reservation yesterday. By the victory the Blues won the cups offered by Brig. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding officer of the First Division. A crowd of 5,000 saw the closing contest of Fort Hamilton's most successful polo season.

Each of the members of the victorious quartet, Lieutenant S. Megargee, Lieutenant J. D. Scott, Captain D. M. Scott and Captain J. W. Blue, scored two goals, but their fine teamwork was somewhat overshadowed by the brilliant riding and scoring of Captain Keith B. Wise, No. 1 for the White. Wise registered five of the six goals made by his team.

He started his scoring in the fifth period after Lieutenant J. D. Scott and Captain Blue each had tallied one goal for the Blues, by taking the ball in a scrimmage in front of the Whites' goal, carrying it down the field and shooting it through from a sixty-yard angle. He scored twice again before the close of the fifth and tallied two more goals in the sixth.

STARTING GATE FOUND EFFECTIVE AT PIMLICO

The Bahr starting gate, which is being tested at Pimlico during the current meeting, has worked well in the races in which it has been used.

The gate, designed to prevent injury to horses, keeps the entries in their proper post positions and aids in securing uniform starts, is a padded stall contrivance mounted on wheels and weighing about 10,000 pounds.

The gate carries its own barrier and a bell to warn jockeys of the start, an electric button releasing the barrier. It is in use at Pimlico daily, the Bowie Handicap being among the events in which it has been employed. In the Bowie the start was perfect, no time being lost at the barrier and the field breaking in stride.

SOCCER GIANTS WIN FROM HISPANO, 5-1

The New York soccer Giants defeated the Hispano eleven, 5 to 1, in an Eastern League game at Starlight Park yesterday before a crowd of 1,500. George Duncan, the Hispano goal, played a great game for his side and was not responsible for any of the tallies scored.

For thirty minutes he baffled every attempt of the Giants' sharpshooters to get the ball past him, many of his saves bordering on the sensational. The terrific pounding caused the defenders in front to weaken and the rest was easy work for Lyell and his teammates.

O'Brien made the first goal and rammed in another soon after, while Lyell made another before the interval. Another by Lyell twenty minutes after resuming stirred the Spaniards to action and they went on the attack, Patterson driving home Hispano's only goal.

Lyell scored his third goal before the end to make the final count 5 to 1.

Once more Tebel came into contact with the ball, but this time he handled it and Referee Creighton whistled for a penalty. Leo Gruenfeld took the spot kick and sent it to the left of Scullion into Hungaria's net for the first goal of the match.

Hakoah's second goal resulted from a foul of L. Gruenfeld by Tebel. Haeusler took the free kick and from 25 yards out landed in Hungaria's net five minutes from half-time.

Kuntner shot Hungaria's only goal with a high shot from 30 yards out, fifteen minutes after the restart. Wortmann, hurt in the first half, gave way to Grunewald in the second. From Neufeld's pass L. Since D'Andrea Brothers' camel's hair overcoats arrived on the scene, the word "heavy" has passed out of the overcoat vocabulary of well-dressed men.

MAHONYS' DOG BEST IN SHEPHERD SHOW

Ch. Arko Von Sadowaberg of Jessford Also Wins Von Stephanitz World Trophy.

HEWITTS' ENTRY SCORES

By REGINALD M. CLEVELAND.
Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—For the first time since the formation of the Shepherd Dog Club of America in 1914, one dog has won the coveted title of grand victor and best of breed at three national specialty shows. The dog is International Champion Arko Von Sadowaberg of Jessford, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Fordham C. Mahony of Roslyn, L. I.

Placed first in the champion class in the fifteenth annual specialty show of the S. D. C. A., held this year under the auspices of the Shepherd Dog Club of New England, which came to a conclusion in Horticultural Hall here today, he went on to be crowned best in the show of 222 shepherd dogs and later to take the Von Stephanitz world prize, the permanent international challenge trophy for males.

Winners bitches, an award which completed her championship; best of opposite sex, grand victrix and winner of the Von Stephanitz prize for females was International Champion Christel Von Stimmberg, the Mardex Kennels' entry of Mr. and Mrs. Dexter W. Hewitt of Ardsley-on-the-Hudson.

Both animals are characterized by unusual length, firmness of back and deep angulation of the hindquarter. The dog is a rich black and tan, and the bitch an iron gray. Both have had distinguished show careers abroad and in this country.

Best of Breed Thirty-two Times.

Arko, who was the German sieger or grand champion in 1927, has been shown in this country thirty-four times and never been placed lower than best of winners, going best of breed thirty-two times. Christel, second in Germany this year, was the Holland champion of 1928 and completed her Canadian championship last Summer.

The judging of Charles L. Kammerer of Vienna, Austria, was more consistent with the placing of other foreign authorities at previous specialty shows today than in the opening session yesterday. For example, in the champion dog class his first four places were identical with those of last year.

With first place awarded to Arko, second went to Cosalta Kennels' first-moving champion Ise Von Bergholtz, third to C. A. Matson's champion Ajax Von Kuckkuckshof, fourth to Jessford Kennels' champion Baltasar Von Orlemunde.

Jessford Kennels' Entry Wins.

In the class for champion bitches the first three places were also repeaters from last year. First was Jessford Kennels' Champion Gera von Feenteich; second, George W. Griffin's Champion Jessica bf Hohefuhlt; third, Cosalta Kennels' Champion Tara of Cosalta. Fourth went to the gray Canadian-owned Champion Pia von Haus Schutting, entered by Gooderham.

Also receiving the qualification "excellent" were two bitches of which more had been expected by the ringsiders, Champion Inky of Willowgate, Grand Victrix in 1927, and Elli von Fürstensteg, German Siegerin of 1927, both owned by Jessford Kennels.

Another well-known female which failed to live up to expectations was the grand victrix of last year's show, Erich's Mereeda of Shereston, also a Jessford entry, who went unplaced in the open class today.

Kammerer was less liberal with his higher qualifications than have been the two previous foreign judges who judged the shows of 1922 and 1923, Ernst Otto of Hamburg, Germany, and Captain Felix Werlich of Brünn, Czechoslovakia, respectively. The Austrian judge awarded in males eleven qualifications of "excellent" and nineteen of "very good." In females the figures were fifteen and thirty-five.

German Practice Adopted.

This method of giving qualification in addition to placings has been adopted at the national specialty shows from the German practice. Although there is no rule governing the matter in the Reich, it has long been the practice there to consider only animals in the older classes which were rated "very good" or better suitable for breeding, and to this method of selection has been attributed much of the phenomenally rapid improvement of the breed which has marked its progress since the foundation of the German club in 1899. This organization, with a membership in excess of 35,000, has now registered more than 375,000 shepherd dogs in its stud book.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

TO realize the devastation that one Saturday can produce it is only necessary to glance back over the week-end. Army, Navy, Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Boston College and Columbia were in action on seven different fields and not one of these seven institutions reported a victory. It's true that Yale and Navy were not defeated, but the tie at New Haven was a sad shock after the brilliant victory over Dartmouth a week earlier.

It would seem that the teams are getting temperamental. They have their good and their bad days. Yale was ragged against Georgia and great against the hosts of Hanover. Princeton was swift and rugged against Navy and soft and helpless against Chicago. N. Y. U. was sloppy against Fordham, brisk and effective against Penn State, powerless against Georgetown and powerful against Georgia.

However, two fairly well-known teams seem to be carrying an attack along with sustained pace. They are Notre Dame and Pittsburgh. More attention has been paid to Notre Dame than to the Panthers because of the color and reputation of Rockne's South Bend boys and the terrific schedule they undertook to play this year. But when a team can roll along undefeated and flatten W. and J. to the tune of 21-0 at this stage of the campaign, it must be a combination of steam, steel and dynamite. Scouts have been rushing in from the hinterland with reports that the Panthers have one of the great teams of football history. They can't be far wrong on the returns to date. The W. and J. eleven that was flattened so completely is the same team that tied Carnegie Tech and outplayed Bucknell and Lafayette.

A Prophet With Honor.

At a luncheon a year ago last Summer Knute Rockne said: "I'm not worrying this year [1928]. We're sure to lose four or five games. It's the coach who thinks his team won't lose who does the worrying. So my worries are over for this season. But next year we'll have a good team. Our slogan is: 'Watch out for us in 1929!'"

Nor was he joking. He meant it and it has turned out just as he promised it would. It seems impossible that Notre Dame can go through its schedule undefeated in these days of fierce and unrelenting competition all over the country. It's remarkable that the team has gone this far with a clear record. But all Notre Dame opponents insist that the South Bend aggregation now dashing from one victory to another deserves to be ranked with the Four Horsemen model and the famous 1921 team at Notre Dame.

Scouts report that the team has been playing well within itself all the way, too, putting on enough power to win, but not wasting any energy that can be saved for rough spots up ahead. A scout who covered the Georgia Tech game said:

"They used thirty-four men in the first half, more than three full teams. After the second-stringers started and lagged a bit, the big team went in and scored two touchdowns in about three minutes. Then they went out and let another bunch of reserves hold it. It's one of the greatest outfits I ever saw."

More Blue Than Red.

Pennsylvania rooters received a sad shock as they watched the Nittany Lions rip and rend the Blue and Red team at Franklin Field. The vaunted Penn line more than met its match in the sturdy forwards from Penn State. It's true that intercepted passes ruined the Red and Blue in the first half, but there were some vicious plunges and tackle slants by George Lasisch and Cooper French that the distinguished trio of Pennsylvania, Ulm, Magidsan and Olexy, failed to halt because they were rendered null and void by the swift surge of the Penn State charge.

Another indication of the power of the Penn State line was the way Dick Gmitis and Walter Masters, star ball-carriers for the Red and Blue, were smeared so often before they could get up to the line of scrimmage. State also had something of an advantage on the ends. Kaplan, Stahley and Edwards were hard to take out, turned in plays quite regularly, and were fooled only by Penn's surprise attacks with lateral passes in the third period.

It was Rolf Carlsten, former De Witt Clinton star from this city, who did the best ball-carrying for Penn until he was carted off with a bad leg. He went down just as he broke into the clear for what might have been a second touchdown for Penn. Victory was hanging in the balance there and when Carlsten's leg gave way under him Penn's great chance to turn the tide vanished with him from the field.

Tricks and Trappings.

Bezdek's lads were full of guile all afternoon. Penn was watching Diedrich and it was Cooper French who snared Red and Blue passes out of the air or made swift dashes off tackle. When the Red and Blue tacklers got ready to halt French, Lasisch carried the ball straight through the middle for good gains.

Sometimes the State centre would call signals as he beat over to put the ball into play. Sometimes Zorella at guard would stand up and bark out the numbers that didn't mean anything except as a starting signal, since the play had been determined in the huddle beforehand. Sometimes State used a shift and sometimes the line and back field merely did a shimmy-shake, a bobbing and weaving affair, to draw the opposing players off-balance before the charge.

No longer does Penn use its famous hidden ball hocus-pocus, by the way. The deception now is attempted with a man in motion toward the sideline or plunges and passes from a kick formation. It was State, however, that had the bigger bag of tricks, some of which went wrong including a short kick-off and a plan to make a lateral pass after receiving a kick. This last play gave the Nittany Lions a Frank Merriwell last gasp victory over Lafayette, but something went wrong when they tried it against Penn.

Here and There.

The Western Conference hit the East with both barrels when Michigan defeated Harvard and Illinois repulsed the Army. Probably the Conference opponents saved up a little something to pour against such unusual visitors in that area as John Harvard and the young gentlemen from the United States Military Academy. But Harvard at least made it close and lost little prestige by the defeat. The Crimson still remains a formidable figure for that Yale game up ahead.

As the season proceeds it becomes more and more evident that Army has bitten off more than it can chew in the way of a heavy schedule in enemy territory. (Three silent cheers from down Annapolis way!)

Skipping to another sector, Boston College went down to its first defeat in several years and Fordham still remains among the undefeated teams in the East. Cornell added an easy victory to its untarnished record but the big tests, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania, are still to come. Those games should be worth going some distance to see.

SCHMELING ACCEPTS ATLANTIC CITY OFFER

RETURNS HERE IN JANUARY

Late February or Early March Date Is Considered Most Likely—Fighter Will Visit Italy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—After careful consideration of the three propositions Joe Jacobs, his representative, brought from the United States—from Chicago, Miami Beach and Atlantic City—Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight title contender, has accepted the Atlantic City offer, presented by Promoters Herman Taylor, Bobby Gunnis and Bill Duffy, who agree to guarantee the German boxer $250,000, with the privilege of accepting 35 per cent of the gross receipts, to engage in a fifteen-round bout with whatever opponent they select.

Rival Named 40 Days Before Bout.

The promoters must name Schmeling's opponent forty days before the contest is scheduled to take place. They also agree to post the guarantee whenever and wherever the aforesaid German heavyweight desires. Schmeling will sign articles when he arrives in the United States and only when guaranteed that the money is posted in cash to his satisfaction.

The date of the contest will have to be some time during the early part of March, or possibly at the end of February, inasmuch as the boxer for the past three weeks has been nursing a bruised ankle which, considering the fact that he possesses a million dollar pair of legs, is an important matter. Schmeling plans to go to some part of Italy for three weeks' recreation.

Plans Visit to Italy.

Jacobs claims that, if the promoters select an outstanding opponent—both Schmeling and Jacobs are hoping they succeed in obtaining Jack Sharkey—the bout will draw $1,000,000. Jacobs declares the New Jersey State Athletic Commission will recognize the coming bout as contest for the world's heavyweight championship. Schmeling will sail for the United States early in January and will pitch his training camp in Atlantic City, where he intends to start training a month before the battle.

Jacobs plans to return home within two weeks to make all arrangements, as that, Schmeling may find everything prepared at his arrival.

MULQUEEN VICTOR IN MOSHOLU GOLF

HESS SECOND WITH NET 31

Mike Mulqueen, Fordham University freshman, won the J. Clarence Davies Cup tournament yesterday at the Mosholu golf course when he scored a low net of 27 for nine holes. His gross score was 36 and he had a handicap of 9. A large field competed in the event, which was open to municipal links players.

The eighteen-hole qualifying round was played in the morning. Fourteen players who had net scores of 85 or under gained the final cup competition. Handicaps were adjusted for the final event.

Louis Hess, president of the New York Municipal Golf Association, finished second with a net 31, four strokes behind the winning score. Hess had a handicap of 10. E. V. Parshall finished third with a net 32.

Mulqueen played steadily all day, scoring a net 68 in the morning play with an allowance of 17. The winner's shot to the fourth green, a difficult niblick over a fifty-foot tree, was one of the features of his round.

Harry Wilson had the low net score in the morning play, carding 61—25—36. In the final his handicap was reduced to 9 and he finished with a net of 39.

T. Tomaino and W. Tobin were tied for the low gross in the morning with 74s. Low handicaps prevented them from gaining the final round.

ADOPTS FRENCH DEFENSE

WIESBADEN, Nov. 10.—After a rest of three days, Dr. Alexandre Alekhine of Paris and E. D. Bogoljubow of Russia resumed play today in the match for the chess championship of the world and contested the twenty-fourth game of the series at the Kurhaus. The result was a draw after forty moves had been recorded. This left Dr. Alekhine still six games in the lead, the present score being 11 to 5 in his favor, with 8 drawn. The twenty-fifth game is scheduled for tomorrow.

Bogoljubow had the white pieces today and played out his king's pawn on the first move. Dr. Alekhine adopted the French defense, as he had done in the eighteenth game, which he lost. This time, however, the champion, on his sixth move, played BxB instead of PxB, thereby preserving his pawn line.

After Dr. Alekhine had castled on the king's side, Bogoljubow castled on the other wing. The challenger succeeded in opening the king's knight's file, but was unable to derive any direct benefit therefrom. After an exchange of minor pieces, only queens and rooks, in addition to five pawns on each side, remained on the board. Thereupon the four rooks were traded off. By that time Bogoljubow's king had reached the centre of the board and Dr. Alekhine forced the draw by perpetual check.

The contest is one of two arranged for Singer as part of a plan to have the Bronx lad fight himself into condition for his ten-round bout against Pete Nebo later this month at Madison Square Garden, and has attracted unusual attention. Supporting the battle will be a ten-round match in which Nel Tarleton, English bantamweight, will tackle Pinkey Silvestery of Harlem. This contest will witness Tarleton's third American ring effort. In his two previous matches the English lad conquered Archie Bell and Jackie Cohen.

Andres Castano, Mexican heavyweight, is scheduled to meet Frank Zaveda, New Jersey boxer, tonight in the principal six-round bout at the Jamaica Arena, Jamaica, L. I. In three other six-round matches the principals will be: Joe Marino vs. Eric Lawson; Al Brennan vs. Jack Seagan; Nick De Prospo vs. Eric Homberg. Four four-round bouts also are scheduled.

You know the importance of Food Sanitation

That's why I certify Cremo Cigars says

famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"You housewives should know that here is a cigar manufacturer who looks at his product as an article of human consumption and gives it the same care and thought that I wish existed in the minds of every food manufacturer in the land. No longer need the spectre of spit and disease-lurking germs endanger the health of cigar smokers.

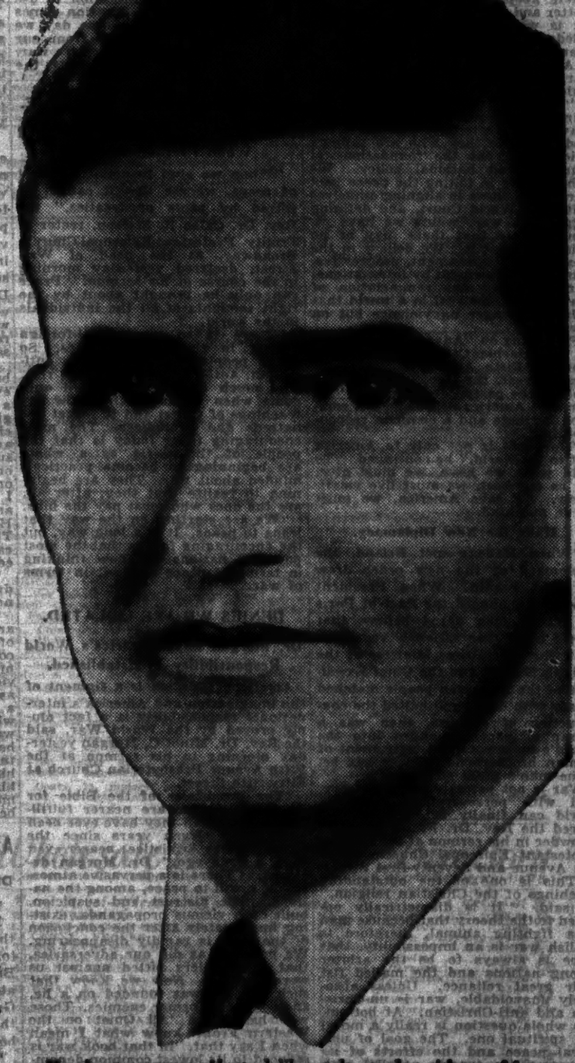
"Every man who smokes Cremo has the double assurance of fine cigar quality plus protection against the menace of spit-tipped cigars.

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. Every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along each step of the way.

"Cremo Cigars are folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions without the menace of spit . . . in factories that are models of cleanliness . . . air-flooded, sun-baked, spotlessly clean!

"This Cremo purity is sealed . . . in separate sanitary foil wrappers. Thus the method of manufacture used by Cremo insures a cigar that aims to give the same standard as found in certified milk."

Do you remember the old, filthy shop where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers . . . and spit on the ends? What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.



Here's a suggestion deliberately made with confidence, which you smokers of imported cigars will appreciate: Try a Certified Cremo. You will recognize the superiority of Certified Cremo which starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported wrapper! For 5 cents you get the delight of a high priced cigar for Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

KELLOGG TREATY LAUDED

Dr. Poling Calls It First Step in New Diplomacy—Futility of War Is Stressed by Dr. Crowder.

Peace, disarmament and ways to avert war in the future were topics in Armistice Sunday sermons preached in the churches of the city yesterday.

"Patriotism, if it is to be intelligent, must in this twentieth century disentangle itself from the support of war," said the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick before the Riverside Baptist congregation, worshiping in Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street. His sermon topic was "The Need of a New Patriotism."

"I hate war," said Dr. Fosdick, "because I have seen it. I hate it for its results; the lies it lives on and propagates, the hatred it rouses, the democracies it destroys to replace with dictatorships, the starvation that trails after it. If any one says that on patriotic grounds I must support that sort of thing which I so hate, I challenge him."

Calls Peacemakers New Patriots.

"One deep difference made by the Paris Peace Pact has been too little recognized. That pact outlawed war. It renounced war as an instrument of national policy, and in so doing it took patriotism from the warmakers and gave it to the peacemakers. We who stand for the full, complete keeping of the peace pact in letter and spirit are now the patriots. It is we who support the nation's pledge. It is we who hold up the hands of our President."

Assailing William B. Shearer, the large navy propagandist, Dr. Fosdick said:

"Mr. Shearer and all his kith and kin are not patriotic. They might have been yesterday. They are not today. It is they who are sapping and mining at the foundations of our declared national policy. We who believe in taking the peace pact seriously believe in aligning ourselves with the World Court, and defining aggressive war, which we have renounced, so that there may be no mistake about it. We believe in the next step: disarmament, progressive, mutual disarmament by international consent, until our renunciation of war has become real in a world that relies no longer on violence but on law."

Preaching on "Adventuring Peace" in the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, the Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, the pastor, declared that "100 per cent Americanism is both a common heritage and a common responsibility."

"Our debt is not only to America but to the world," he continued. "To hold what we have, we must give, to be our best, we must live vicariously. To save America, we must serve mankind.

Hails the New Diplomacy.

"When Kellogg met Briand, the diplomacy of the new order drew its first breath. When President Hoover announced the Pact of Paris in effect, men dared believe that world peace was seriously regarded. But when the Prime Minister of the British Empire and the Chief Executive of the American people matched words with deeds and halted the construction of cruisers, then was a 'scrap of paper' changed into the world's most potential instrument of human brotherhood. Peace has become man's great adventure."

War is not permanently necessary, and with perseverance a warless world can finally be achieved, declared the Rev. Dr. Frank Warfield Crowder in his sermon at St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street.

"This is one of the outstanding teachings of the Christian religion," he said. "It is diametrically opposed to the theory that because man is a fighting animal, therefore to abolish war is an impossibility, that force is always to be the arbiter among nations and the mailed fist their great reliance. Unless absolutely unavoidable, war is un-Christian and anti-Christian. At bottom this whole question is really a moral and spiritual one. The goal of universal peace and the efforts of its advocates are exactly parallel with those of the Christian religion."

Others who preached Armistice Day sermons and appealed for the promotion of the cause of peace were the Rev. John Walter Houck, at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Grand Concourse and 178th Street, the Bronx; the Rev. George Maychin Strickland, of St. James's Methodist Church, Madison Avenue and 126th Street; Dr. Richard Lynch, at the Unity Auditorium, 36 West Thirty-ninth Street, and the Rev. George A. Trowbridge, in All Angels' Protestant Episcopal Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-first Street.

LISTS THOSE WHO WANT WAR.

J. H. Holmes Assails Army, Navy, Armament Makers, Politicians.

Complete disarmament, or, if that be impossible, full governmental control of the building of fighting ships and war material, was advocated by John Haynes Holmes in his sermon yesterday in the Community Church, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street.

The three main groups that are clinging to war, he declared, are the soldiers, the shipbuilders and armament manufacturers and the politicians.

"Our military friends," he said, "are as instinctively opposed to the ending of war as actors are opposed to the closing of theatres. Do you suppose a General can be satisfied to sit in a fort all his life and march his men up and down on a parade ground? Do you suppose an Admiral in command of a magnificent fleet can be forever happy with mere manoeuvres? Give a boy a rifle and he won't be happy until he fires it. The same thing applies to our soldiers and sailors. Hence the imperative need of complete disarmament if war is ever to be done away with.

"The second class of men who want war are the armament builders. They, of course, deny the charge. But what did those armament manufacturers do when they got a chance? The Shearer investigation tells the story. Preparedness keeps their factories busy; war, or the possibility of war, is the foundation of their business. There is nothing to do with such men but to take their business away from them by government action and thus put the building of ships and the manufacture of ammunition exclusively in the hands of the government.

"Politicians are also in favor of war. In their hands is the power to declare war. The temptation to use this power when the occasion comes is almost irresistible. Some day we are going to take away from our politicians the power to declare war. The Briand-Kellogg treaty is the first step toward this end."

SAYS ALL MUST WANT PEACE.

Dr. Stetson Declares War Will End When Prejudices Cease.

"When we stop to count the cost of peace, we see that it cannot be solved by pacts or treaties," the Rev. Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, Broadway, at the head of Wall Street, declared yesterday morning in the course of his sermon. "Peace can only be brought about by the right thoughts of all the individuals in the world.

"There is so much anti-foreign feeling in the United States. So many people are anti-British, anti-Italian, anti-French and all the rest. The much desired peace will only come when we learn to follow the teachings of Christ and to forget our hatreds and prejudices. The most encouraging thing today is that the people of the world as a whole are beginning to become practical-minded about war. They are beginning to realise that they, after all, are the ones who must pay the bills.

"We are starting on the way that leads to peace. It is a long way, but the encouraging fact is that the most powerful nations are now thinking in terms of peace and not in terms of war."

DENIES WE ARE ISOLATED.

Dr. Morgan Says America's World Responsibility Is Established.

American isolation is a figment of the imagination and America's international responsibility is a fact amply proved by the World War, said the Rev. Dr. Minot C. Morgan yesterday morning in his sermon at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church at Fifty-fifth Street.

"The prophecies of the Bible for world-wide peace are nearer fulfillment today than they have ever been during the eleven years since the signing of the Armistice; nearer even than a year ago," Dr. Morgan declared. "There is a pervasive atmosphere, a will to peace, among the nations. The distrust and suspicion, built on a vicious propaganda, existing immediately after the conclusion of the war, is rapidly disappearing. We believed, as did our adversaries, that the soldiers pitted against us were demons. Now we know that such a belief was founded on a lie, and so do our former enemies. Those who have read 'All Quiet on the Western Front' know what I mean when I say that. In that book war is reduced to its lowest common denominator."

GLORIES OF PEACE OUTLINED.

The Rev. Howard D. Higgins, rector of the First Reformed Episcopal Church, Fiftieth Street, east of Second Avenue, preaching a special Armistice Sunday sermon yesterday morning at the memorial service held there for the Rev. Dr. William De Lois Stevens, former rector, who left his pulpit to enlist as a Red Cross chaplain and died on duty in France, reviewed the history of the destructiveness of war, saying:

"Today America has no greater advocate of peace than President Hoover and General Dawes. Both these men know war intimately; they have lived in the midst of it. These men have received the honors of war. They have had its glory and tasted its fruit and it has been as ashes in their mouth.

"Too long have we magnified the glories of war and taught our children to love it. There is more glory in happy homes, fine schools, beautiful churches, than can be found in homes with a vacant chair, school children taught to carry arms, ruins of fine buildings. In the works of peace, the conquest of disease, social advancement and cultural pursuits is to be found high adventure. The distinctive message of Christianity is peace with God and with man."

Asserts Pleasures Must Be Selected.

Special to The New York Times.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 10.—The Rev. Frederick D. Niedermayer, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, told his congregation in his sermon this morning that the Christian's purpose in life determined his attitude toward pleasure. He then said: "Pleasures that keep us cheerful and give us new zest for the main object in life should be eagerly enjoyed by Christians, even as those that dull spiritual aspirations or weaken our grip on worthy ideals should be shunned."

Piety Alone Can Bring Peace To World, Dr. McComas Says

Piety has been the national strength of America, according to the Rev. Dr. J. P. McComas, vicar of St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel, Broadway and Fulton Street, who preached on "Piety and Peace" yesterday morning. He said:

"There can be no peace without religion. Where does politics come in?

"We are a nation of several races, in which one race of various national brigins is dominant. The piety which teaches us God is Father of all the races has been our national strength. It will enable us to deal with all nations, Christian and pagan, where there is this ideal. Where this is lacking, they must be constrained by holiness, which springs from prayer, worship and union with God, through Christ.

"When it comes to disarmament, the reduction of naval forces and the making of world peace, all will fail if God is not called upon to guide and bless. Beware of a materialistic peace with selfish motives of trade expansion and commercial prosperity. We demand more than this in our leaders, an initiative which is from within, and a world peace with those who fear God."

HAIL DR. BRENNECKE, 40 YEARS A PASTOR

DR. KNUBEL LAUDS HIM

Father-in-Law of Pastor, Only Living Charter Member of Church, Comes From Philadelphia.

High officials in the Lutheran communion joined with a fellow pastor and chief lay officer of the congregation in paying tribute yesterday morning to the Rev. Dr. Ernest Brennecke, on his fortieth anniversary as pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, West 100th Street, just east of Amsterdam Avenue. The big church was filled, many former parishioners being present. In a front pew was Conrad Beck, in his eightieth year, father-in-law of Dr. Brennecke, who made the trip from Philadelphia especially to attend. He is the only living charter member of the church. Professor Ernest Brennecke Jr. of Columbia University, one of the three sons of the pastor, played the organ and directed the choir.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexler, president of the United Lutheran Synod of New York, preached the sermon, and just before the benediction read a letter of felicitation from the Rev. Dr. Frederick H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America.

The Rev. Heinrich S. Kropp, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, spoke in German. August D. Ritterhoff, president of the Council of Trinity, speaking from the chancel, stated he had been appointed to present the "loving greetings" of the entire baptized membership, which is more than 1,500, and to announce that Tuesday evening there will be a jubilee festival in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Brennecke.

Dr. Trexler described the pastorate of Dr. Brennecke as "extraordinary." He said he hoped the anniversary would lead some young men to enter the ministry. "From this pulpit for forty years has gone out the voice of a faithful pastor proclaiming the message of Almighty God to save, to counsel and to direct," said Dr. Trexler. "Thus, this morning as we gather for this beautiful service with full hearts, every one joins in rejoicing for the faithful, loyal, self-sacrificing and self-effacing pastor.

"One thinks of New York City as a busy place where pastors change every five or ten years. But here is a fine example where a man has given himself for forty years in this church and this community. Few are privileged to have a pastorate such as Dr. Brennecke's. This is not only an official visitation here today on my part, but a personal one, for I have labored here also many years and in these I have come to love him. His is an extraordinary pastorate. This is a day of thanksgiving. Who can measure the influence of this consecrated personality?"

"Your father's service has stood as an undeniable evidence of the value of a long stay where a true pastor is concerned," Dr. Knubel wrote. "In many respects your father has provided a picture of an ideal pastor and as such has been an inspiration and a guide to many a man concerning whom he himself never knew that he was supplying an example. This has been the case to me personally. Furthermore, I have loved and respected him for his studious ways and for his keen discernment of the deepest meaning in everything which comes before his attention."

ASSAILS "GOD OF SCIENCE."

Dr. Haldeman Says It Repudiates Conception of Sin.

In his sermon yesterday morning the Rev. Dr. I. M. Haldeman, pastor of the First Baptist Church, at Broadway and Seventy-ninth Street, attacked what he called the "new God of science" and said that only the God of the Bible could satisfy both heart and brain.

"According to the protagonists of science, man is nothing more than a conglomeration of atoms, nothing better than a chemical combination," Dr. Haldeman said. "When he reaches the point where this combination wears out the current is cut off and he ceases to exist. There is no personal God who created him or the universe and so both man and universe become the offspring of evolution."

Dr. Haldeman went on to say that such a conception of God and man repudiates sin and redemption from sin, and sets aside prayer, for a machine cannot be charged with sin, nor can it pray.

POLICY OF WAR DENOUNCED.

Dr. Fitch Calls It Degradation of the Human Race.

War as an international policy was denounced by the Rev. Dr. Albert Parker Fitch as "a degradation of the human race," in his appeal for world amity yesterday morning from the pulpit of the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church at Thirty-fifth Street. Dr. Fitch said good-will could never be established permanently among nations until racial barriers were shattered and people made to realize that "the road to peace begins at home."

"In preparation for the crusade of peace," he said, "there must always be the memory of the horror of war. We must remember that all the horror, shame and futility of war was caused by Christian people.

"On Armistice Day we should make solemn renewal of our debt. The young men who died in the World War made a sacrifice for a world they did not create. They went to die for a great ideal, not to advance imperialistic ends. Those young men went to war to glorify a great cause, and it was not long before officials began clickering for material gains.

"All these boys died without receiving the promise, and we must see that they did not die in vain."

Congregation in Procession in Fifth Avenue Celebrates Opening of Church Doors Forever

Led by crucifers and choir, the congregation of the old Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, walked in solemn procession last evening from the church up Fifth Avenue to Eleventh Street and then west to the Parish House. The procession was the culmination of a special service to celebrate the fact that the doors are to be kept open day and night as long as the brownstone edifice stands.

In his "Service of the Open Door," the Rev. Dr. Donald B. Aldrich said: "New York is a twenty-four-hour city, a city that never sleeps. Between 6 P. M. and 6 A. M. thousands of persons pass this church. This fact has awakened us to our proper function and place in such a city. Because of the number of persons using the church for private devotions daily, the need of these passers-by has forced itself upon us. So the decision to have the church open comes as a response to practical human needs.

"To recognize the universality of the Light that never falleth is the purpose of the special service here this evening. So we shall throw open the doors, never again to be closed by day or night.

"The Church of the Ascension has always been a spiritual sign of the times. Its people and pastors continuously sensed the need of their generation and community and met it. In 1859 the congregation with John Cotton Smith settled the question of 'fundamentalism' in their place, binding themselves not to the letter but to the spirit of the Book of Books.

"In 1883 the congregation with Winchester Donald recognized the art of worship as central to the Christian religion, and that Protestantism had too long confused fareness with simplicity. They welcomed, in the work of La Farge, Saint Gaudens and White, the beauty of the Rhinelander Memorial chancel. In 1903 the congregation with Dr. Percy Grant abolished pewrents of pews and sittings. Their love for their church made them exclude no one from any place within its walls. Thus this place became a symbol of the social gospel."

In the congregation were committees representing the Salmagundi Club, the Pen and Brush Club, the Washington Square Association, the Fifth Avenue Association and the Advertising Club. After the service, James Wright Brown, president of the New York Advertising Club, said that the church would probably come to be known as "The Church of the Open Door."

REISNER LAYS CRIME TO 'LOOSE' WRITERS

Also Assails Ex-Preachers Who Deny God and Give Us "Cheap" Humanism.

FINDS DEITY BASIS OF LAW

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of Chelsea Methodist Church, Fort Washington Avenue and 178th Street, warned his congregation in his sermon last evening that "much lawlessness may be traced to the loose writers of note like Harry Elmer Barnes and a few former preachers, who, having failed every place else, have joined this crowd in denying God's existence, discarding religion and the Church and then furnishing either no substitute or a cheap and intangible thing called humanism."

"If the God of love is fiction what solid basis exists for law to rest upon?" Dr. Reisner asked. "If we are as the loose behaviorist, John Watson, claims, but the creature of our surroundings, who has a right to punish us for stealing or for carrying out an 'impulse' to murder? If, as the book publisher, Haldeman-Julius of Girard, Kan., claims, sex appetite is to be appeased as that for food, who can complain over polygamy either open or hidden.

"Who are Barnes, Dreiser, Durant, Watson, Haldeman-Julius and similar writers whom we allow to sneer about and spit upon this 'faith' without offering us any substitute? First, they had better show us how to construct a finer nation than Christianity has built. They and their teaching are the chief cause of crime today. Why, then, do the papers give such space to these blind leaders even though some of them still retain the titles the Christian Church gave them?

"We are proud to have men like Fred Stone, George Jessel, Will Rogers and Eddie Cantor speak in this pulpit and they have all spoken for me. They help restore people to health by starting laughs which break up destructive absorption at serious tasks. Funmakers furnish the salt and pepper to life, the vanilla extract, the tang and taste to things. But God pity one who lives alone for or on pleasure.

"It is pathetic that so many millions are dependent on movies for fun. They are incapable of creating any for themselves. As a result, they are so shallow that pictures must often be inane and even vulgar to really reach their taste. For the same reason we must have disgusting tabloids, prurient periodicals, and low sensations in plays repugnant to decency, and finally at any cost to society or health recourse is had to the degrading use of booze. All the time same religion stands ready to build a personality that does not merely demand thin and hurtful 'fun,' but creates it as goose do fragrance and then is superior to all depressants or so-called defeats."

SEES MOVE ON HUMANISM.

Potter Warns of "Coalition" Which Aims to Destroy His Cult.

Charles Francis Potter, founder and leader of the First Humanist Society of New York, in an address to his following at Chalif Hall, 163 West Fifty-seventh Street, yesterday morning, asserted that there was "a concerted movement" to destroy humanism. He said he had been informed that the classroom teachings at Union Theological Seminary this Fall had been "full of condemnations of humanism."

After referring to criticism by the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of Union Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Riverside Church, Mr. Potter said:

"The Fundamentalists and Modernists have evidently taken Dr. Coffin's advice to combine against humanism, as any one can see who has read the newspapers of this city for the last few weeks. And the rabbis seem to have entered the coalition."

Mr. Potter then named twenty-two New York clergymen who had attacked his cult and gave excerpts from their criticisms.

PAULISTS SEEK RADIO AID.

Letter From Bishop Dunne Asks Support for Station WLWL.

A plea for funds for the support of Radio Station WLWL, owned by the Paulist Fathers, was read at masses yesterday morning at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Paul the Apostle, Fifty-ninth Street and Ninth Avenue.

The letter asking for support was signed by Bishop Dunn and pointed out the missionary work performed through the station. It spoke of the value of the station in bringing inspiration to shut-in Catholics.

Next Sunday was named as the date for "cooperation of a material sort." The station has been supported solely by the Paulist Fathers.

DR. NORWOOD HAILS UNITY LEAGUE MEETING

The Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood, speaking at St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal Church, Park Avenue and Fiftieth Street, yesterday morning hailed the New York Conference of the Christian Unity League, to be held this week at St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, Stuyvesant Square and East Sixteenth Street. He said he saw in it a "realization that we have come into the thrill of eternity and have sensed its unity and universality."

"A new sanctity and a new dignity" are needed for motherhood, Dr. Norwood said, decrying "shallow-faced jades" and demanding "gorgeous angelic beings."

"If your sons are turning aside from God, the fault is not in the sons, but in the mothers," he said. "Our problem is not divorce, it is motherhood. It is a shame on any age whose women are indifferent and whose mothers do not realize the infinite."

ASKS US TO EMULATE EARLY CHRISTIANS

CALLS JESUS UNIVERSAL

The Rev. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church and Professor of Theology at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Chicago, preached the sermon in the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street, yesterday morning. The service was held in celebration of foreign missions, Armistice Day and Red Cross Sunday.

Dr. McAfee said the General Assembly urged the Church to consider the work of the first generation of Christians this year. Jesus, he pointed out, remained within a territory 50 by 125 miles in area, according to the records, but by the end of the first generation Christianity had spread 1,000 miles north and south and 2,500 miles east and west, as well as to the very capital of the world.

"In the first generation the Christian faith surpassed limitations in geography, race and language," said Dr. McAfee. "The Christians of that generation made a great break and loosed themselves from bonds that would have restrained them from growth.

"The result of the freedom of the first church, he continued, is that the Bible is no one language today and Christianity is being preached in 600 different languages around the world. Another accomplishment of the first generation was the building up of a type of church that modified itself according to conditions wherever it grew up, he said.

"The third thing which that first Christian generation did was to give one central message," said Dr. McAfee. "They went about everywhere talking about Christ, and that is the one unqualified thing we have to say to the world today. We cannot present the Church without qualifications; even the Book must be interpreted. But Jesus Christ is the centre and the master of the whole situation. The name Jesus is known in more languages than any other name in the world.

"In this generation we should rise to as great things as they did in the early days of the Church. We should see that a great brotherhood is formed around Jesus Christ, not around the Church and that brotherhood is being formed all around the world today."

Warns Against Spreading Rumors of Financial Distress

The Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, rector of St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, from the pulpit yesterday morning appealed to his congregation not to engage in the spreading of idle rumors about the condition of business and financial houses.

"In view of the stress of business today, do not engage in the spreading of idle rumors," the Rev. Mr. Brooks declared. "This is not a time for hysteria, but a time for sober judgment. A rumor is easily started and readily spread, but once passed on it cannot be recalled.

"If you hear from one of your friends that a certain business firm is suffering heavily, keep that rumor to yourself. Do not pass it on to others. To help spread it will not do any good, but much harm. Idle rumors—and there are many being disseminated today—are extremely dangerous."

DICKIE BEGINS PASTORATE.

Contrasts Ministers and Priests to Bethany Memorial Church.

The Rev. Paul R. Dickie took the words of Solomon, "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he," as his text in his first sermon yesterday morning at the Bethany Memorial Reformed Church, First Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street. The new pastor replaces the Rev. Dr. A. R. Churchman, who was forced to resign because of illness after twenty-five years in the pulpit.

"Compare the priesthood of the Catholic Church with our own ministry," the Rev. Mr. Dickie said. "The priest is wrapped up in his celibacy. He has no family, no children to think about. His thoughts are given over entirely to the Church. Take 100 Protestant ministers and 100 priests and you can see the difference of human, emotional thinking in their lives. Spiritual thinking cannot be severed from the feelings and emotions."

CALLS MACDONALD A REAL CHRISTIAN

DISCUSSES LIFE'S PURPOSE

It Is Not "Progress," He Says, but to Develop Character and Achieve Beauty and Truth.

Ramsay MacDonald is simply a Christian man, who is trying to put the Christian religion into practice, according to the Rev. Dr. James S. Kittell, secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church in America, who preached yesterday morning in the West End Collegiate Church, West End Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street.

"Ramsay MacDonald shows the effect of the teachings of Jesus," said Dr. Kittell, "and the influence of the kirk upon his life. We can settle the question of war, and we can settle the perplexing economic questions of the day if we can put the Christian religion into practice among the great mass of people."

Dr. Kittell said that an increasing number of intelligent people were wondering about the limitations and mysteries of life, asking themselves the same questions: "What is there back of life?" and "What is the purpose of life?"

"We are being taught, and our children are being told," said Dr. Kittell, "that life is simply a great machine, going on relentlessly, cruelly, heartlessly, a purposeless machine. And the idea of a mechanistic life appeals to many today. We must either accept that theory or the view of Jesus Christ that the life of Jesus is the explanation of what lies back of the world. To explain man the meaning of Jesus Christ's life, so simple in itself, is God's explanation to His children of Himself.

"As to the purpose of life, the great word with us seems to be 'progress,' a fascinating word, and one that is often explained as the accumulation of commodities. Jesus's life is a long way from that. I can't imagine Him interested in the production of commodities, or the accumulation of wealth. Jesus's purpose was to make life good, true and beautiful, and to show the relationship of goodness, truth and beauty to life. The main purpose of life is to develop character."

RESIDENT OFFICES REPORT ON TRADE

FALL SILHOUETTE TO HOLD

Early Winter Resort Wear Favors It—Double-Breasted Suits Gain—Rug Lines Open.

Buying of apparel and kindred lines here during the past week plainly reflected the transitional state through which the market is passing. Of women's garments, particularly, was this true. There was some buying of lines designed especially for late Fall and Winter wear, but buyers' attention was given chiefly to what the Winter resort and early Spring seasons would show. Enough information became available during the week to indicate in the latter lines an important duplication of the current silhouette. Skirt lengths for the new season appear not get fully settled, and there is a tendency toward more trimming. Increased decoration of sleeves is notable in the early showings. In the men's wear field seasonable merchandise, particularly overcoats, continues active, although here, too, there was some looking ahead to Spring. In other fields the opening of the Spring floor coverings season by some of the trade leaders was a feature.

McGREEVEY, WERRING & HOWELL, INC.—"Although there is no question regarding the popularity of the new silhouette and longer skirts for Spring, it is expected that there will be some modification in the lengths of the new lines. 'Sunday night' dresses continue to hold interest. Although manufacturers are stressing high shades in flat crêpes, chiffon and crêpe Elizabethan, the orders received specify black, brown and blue mostly. Printed crêpes in light and dark backgrounds are offered with both small and large patterns. Taffeta has become very active for evening wear. Contrary to the general belief that the upheaval of the stock market would greatly reduce prices on coats, the market remains firm. This week's coat orders were mostly for sport models."

Domestics Deliveries Behind.

FELIX LILIENTHAL & CO., INC.—"We have noticed no drastic change in the cotton piece goods market, which is due to the fact that mills are still holding down production. In fact, we have found it impossible to obtain prompt deliveries from many mills on such wanted items as sheets, pillowcases, bedspreads, blankets and towels. With such a condition existing we are confident that there will be no price cutting in the immediate future. Many of our clients are now making arrangements for their January white sales. We are impressing upon them the necessity for anticipating their wants in order to obtain satisfactory delivery. The demand for rayon twill and taffeta bedspreads and pillow sets is increasing as the season advances and we are receiving many reorders for them."

HART, FLANAGAN COMPANY, INC.—"The new lines of better dresses viewed to date have been very original and interesting. For street and daytime wear one-piece dresses with semi-fitted bodice and normal or almost normal waistline are typical of the new models. They are elaborately trimmed, among the decorations being small capes of the bertha type (of self-material) and shoulder capelets over each sleeve. Sleeves are playing an interesting part in the new offerings, being much more elaborately trimmed than heretofore. Peplums are placed at the elbows, while shirring and bows lend very smart touches at the wrist. Skirts are mostly circular with even hemlines, and fall four to five inches below the knee. Dinner and evening dresses, however, are extremely long."

CONSOLIDATED CLOTHIERS, INC.—"A marked increase has been noted in bookings for hand-painted mufflers. In the early part of the season these lagged behind, but more recent orders indicate that they are expected to sell very well for the holidays. Neckwear continues a strong item, and orders also have been substantial on sweater and golf hose sets and fancy hosiery. Demand for preshrunk broadcloth shirts is increasing, and they are becoming standard with practically all stores. Boys' suedene cloth, sheep-lined coats with fur collars are attracting attention in the departments catering to the better trade. In the clothing department orders for Spring indicate tan as the foremost shade in men's clothing."

MERCHANDISE REPORTING COMPANY, INC.—"The collections of late Fall and Winter coats show distinctive types in both garments and fabrics. Velvet is still important from a style standpoint. In black trimmed with self-colored fur in a 'blende' shade, it is being purchased by practically all shops catering to the better-class trade. Many flared versions, as well as princess lines, are shown in these models, and our reports show a very favorable acceptance of them. Manufacturers of $8.50 dresses are beginning to make up models in the new Spring shades for the holidays in canton crêpe, georgette and chiffon. The colors include Spanish red, cornflower, rose, rosewood, tan, oak, seaweed green and sea foam."

Floor Coverings Volume Fair.

McELROY-SHEEHAN, INC.—"There was no scramble for merchandise at the Spring floor coverings openings of the past week, but, generally speaking, the volume of business placed was fair. The Wall Street situation may have had some effect in holding orders down, but a more potent factor was the approach of the holidays. In many stores during the gift season carpets and rugs are set to one side to make more room for the toy department, and this year promises to be no exception in this respect. The most interesting feature of the buying was the attention given to wash wiltons to retail from $150 to $200 and to better axminsters to sell at $40 to $55, retail."

JOHN M. BIGGINS, INC.—"Velvets, both cotton back and chiffon and transparent, continue to stand out in the silk piece goods market. Pure-dye and flat crêpes and slightly weighted 'flats' are in demand. Interest is also being shown in Spring prints for December selling."

BEN F. LEVIS—"The millinery trade is showing new falls silk hats trimmed with metallic effects in very clever style. In pastel colorings these look like good items. Another new item consists of felts with pedaline 'trims' in all the high shades. Manufacturers are trying very hard to show new things, as the millinery business has not been very good. Off-the-face models are still selling and continue to hold a strong position. Our requests for fur coats during the past week have been nothing to speak of, although a few special orders have been received for better-grade models, such as Russian caracul and ermine. The demand for fur scarfs has been very slow."

JACK HARTBLAY, INC.—"Increased activity was noticeable in both men's and boys' clothing during the past week. Purchases were principally of men's overcoats in the lower and popular-price ranges. Blues were wanted most, with a few browns also taken. There has been an increase in demand for the half-belted model. Numerous requests were also received for better-grade worsted suits in blues and browns. We note a return to popular favor of the double-breasted style, liberal orders for which are being placed. In boys' clothing, students' suits are being called for freely. Many orders have been received for sheep-lined clothing in moleskin, leatherette and corduroy."

PRICES OF LIVESTOCK DECLINE IN THE WEEK

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Prices on beef steers declined 75 cents to $1 on yearlings and 25 to 50 cents on heavies. The top paid for fancy yearlings was $16 and choice heavy steers $15.75, as compared with a top of $18.10 for yearlings a year ago.

Average for all beef steers for the week of $12.75 was the lowest since last March, a drop of 25 cents for the week and of $1.40 from a year ago, but they are $1 higher than the five-year average. Declines were made in the face of the reduction of nearly 6,000 in receipts for the week, yet the run was 5,000 more than a year ago. Dressed beef prices are slightly lower. A top on the best cuts in the wholesale market was 25 cents and lowest 14 cents on the poorest of steers.

Hog prices, although declining to the lowest of the season, with the top at one time 90, closed with a good rally and were unchanged to 10 cents higher. Bulk of sales at the last were $9 to $9.40. The week's average of $9.15 was the lowest since last January but only 10 cents under a year ago, while supplies were smaller than the previous week.

Pork loins are off 1 cent in a week at 17 to 21 cents, while a year ago they were 17 to 26 cents.

Fat lamb values slumped 25 to 50 cents at the last, but an average of $12.15 was the same as the previous week and 17 cents under last year. Sheep brought more money, although the average was up only 10 cents at $4.85, or almost $1 lower than a year ago, with receipts off about 19,000 for the week. Fresh dressed lamb prices were 15 to 25 cents, an advance of 1 cent for the week and also as compared with last year.

THREATENS TRADE BREAK.

Minister Says Spain Will Retaliate if Our Tariff Bill Passes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Nov. 10.—The Count de los Andes, Minister of Economics, discussing the proposed new tariff rates of the United States in an interview today, said that unless America makes some concessions to Spain the Spanish will be compelled to break off trade relations with the United States.

"The United States embargo on Spanish grapes is an unjust discrimination," the Minister asserted, "because American grapes already have exactly the same blight from which Spanish grapes occasionally suffer. Prohibitive duties are imposed by the United States on Spanish olives, peppers, onions, almonds, garlic and cork. Unless the tariff is lowered on these products of our country we will be obliged to retaliate by creating a prohibitive tariff on American importations. This, in effect, will amount to killing trade relations between Spain and the United States."

New Low Levels in Raw Hides.

The raw hide market last week reached new low levels on the Exchange for the present decline, according to M. R. Katzenberg's weekly review of the market, which said: "The May position broke through 13 cents for the first time, and among the inactive months, November fell below 14 cents. At the low prices, declines ranged from about ½ to 1 cent. The volume was heavy, trading on three days alone representing about 8,000,000 pounds. Sole leather prices dropped from 55-56 to 54-55 with very little business being transacted."

STUDIES STATIONERY TRADE

Harvard Research Bureau Figures Average Operating Costs.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—The Bureau of Business Research of Harvard University, acting in cooperation with the National Stationers Association, has just completed a study of the operating expenses of retail stationers and office outfitters. The report is based on statements submitted by 275 stationers and office outfitters and presents data for firms grouped according to lines of merchandise handled.

In addition to the operating margins, costs and profits, financial ratios also are presented. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities averaged for 1927 and 1928, was found to be 2.9 times for general stationers and 3.8 times for commercial stationers.

Total assets for these groups were equivalent to 44 per cent of sales and 39 per cent of sales respectively. Net worth for these two groups amounted to 31 per cent and 28 per cent of sales.

Provision Markets in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Foreign interests which have been in the lard market for months, take hold occasionally on sharp declines. General speculation is light and packers support the market for futures at times, and consumptive trade in lard is good, with shipments in excess of last year. The close was within a fraction of the week's lowest. December being $10.40, January $10.90 and May $11.35, showing losses of 22½ to 32½ cents for the week. Bellies were offered more freely and closed 47½ cents lower, with January $11.02½ and May $11.67½.

Cocoa Prices Lowest for the Year.

Cocoa futures dropped to new low levels for 1929 in the past week on the New York Cocoa Exchange under the pressure of heavy liquidation from commission houses attributed to hedge selling of the new West African crop, selling in sympathy with the stock market declines, and indications of heavy shipments from producing centres. By Friday's close declines of 14 to 41 points had been recorded for the week, with spot cocoa at 9¾ cents, off 31 to 32 points.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Reversion of Friday's stock market, after Thursday's moderate recovery from its seemingly irresistible decline in the preceding two business days to narrow variation in prices and a business of only normal magnitudes, was reasonably good evidence that the crisis is at an end. This does not mean that a rising market is necessarily ahead of us. It leaves resumption of Wall Street "bull movements" as remotely distant as it could have seemed on Oct. 29. The traditional habit of the stock market at such junctures is to move with extreme rapidity and violence in its first reflection of a changed condition, then to lapse into lethargy while awaiting the longer sequel of events.

Recovery after the first brief readjustment is always slow. For one thing it is never clear, during a considerable lapse of time, that sale of "distress stock" taken over in the crisis has been completed. Only the course of time will show whether trade has actually been affected, and how greatly. Notwithstanding the depths to which Stock Exchange prices plunged on such "panic days" as Dec. 22 of 1920 and Oct. 24 of 1907, the record shows a long list of industrial shares which sold in 1921 below the worst prices of 1920, and a dozen important railway shares which in 1908 went under the previous year's lowest.

It is quite true, on the other hand, that the stock market crash of those two years itself resulted from a dangerously overexploited trade, which is hardly true today, and that industrial reaction was cause rather than consequence of events on the Stock Exchange. But even in the early periods of reaction (perhaps excepting 1921) it was only gradually discovered what was wrong with trade. The prospect will not be altogether clear on this occasion for some little time to come. The community perfectly understands the good points discernible in the prudent policies of general trade during the last six years. But it cannot yet know surely how far, in some great industries, the rash use of credit from which producers carefully abstained was practiced by consumers. Statistics of current industry will therefore be watched with absorbing interest during the next few weeks and months.

The stock market may or may not be essentially affected by the diversion of investors' interest, as a result of last month's catastrophe, from stocks to bonds. Bond prices are not low as a rule, even when compared with years before the war; but, on the other hand, the propaganda lately in vogue for common stocks was absurdly overdone. The recent shift in appetite for new securities from bonds to stocks, the offer, during the nine months ending with last September, of new stock issues greater by $3,700,000,000 than in any previous corresponding period, and the fact that this year stocks made up 72 per cent of the total new securities offered, whereas in 1927 bonds made up exactly the same percentage, were neither new phenomena in American finance nor a result of deliberate investors' choice. Precisely the same impulsive rush to new stock issues occurred in 1920 and 1901 as in 1929, and for exactly the same reason—which was the abnormally rapid speculative enhancement of prices for existing stocks.

When the inevitable readjustment of Stock Exchange values had come in the markets of those days, the reverse process followed instantly. Investors would not take new stocks, and the market for existing bonds grew stronger as the market for existing stocks began to be deserted. To how great an extent this change will be carried on the present occasion is yet to be discovered. Its very general adoption would be no misfortune to the investing community, which had all but been pushed into an atmosphere of financial illusion by the recent propaganda.

There will always be, as heretofore, a great body of capital to engage intelligently in the country's sound industrial enterprises through purchase of their stock. But to do this prudently requires knowledge of intrinsic values, and recent experience shows the extent to which a speculative "outside public" can be trusted to obtain such knowledge. Even with serious investors, the lately insistent assertion that, as a uniform principle, investment in stocks is or safe over long periods as in bonds and inevitably far more lucrative, the constant harping on the hardship of bondholders when the "purchasing power of money falls," may now quite as well be relegated to the background.

CRASH'S AFTERMATH AS EUROPE SEES IT

STOCK SPECULATION ENDED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Not the least significant feature of the Wall Street collapse, as London sees it, is the enormous reduction in brokers' borrowings, the decline in which during two weeks has wiped out a whole year's growth. This conveys to our market, more vividly than anything else, the extent of the recent speculative liquidation. No doubt is now expressed here that the American market is passing through one of the most serious financial crises in its history, the influence of which will be felt for a long time to come.

Had the reaction been more orderly and not such a complete rout, its effect on American business would in London's view have been comparatively slight. It is now felt, however, that prediction that a collapse of the present dimensions will pass lightly over American trade is felt to be somewhat rash. The best opinion here is that, for a time at all events, American trade is almost certain to suffer more or less severely.

Must Be Some Trade Reaction.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 8.—What effect the Wall Street crash will have on American production and trade it is considered difficult yet to determine. The present feeling is that the general economic situation in the United States is sufficiently solid to make possible resumption of satisfactory production after a short period, even though its volume may not for some time reach again the high levels of the last few years.

Thorough Liquidation Salutary.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The past week's renewed decline on Wall Street made no such impression here as did the crash of a week before, because it was felt that, at the lowest prices, serious resistance was certain to be offered to a further decline. It was also foreseen that enough new buyers would be reached to offset the distress sales. Most experienced observers here considered the recovery which immediately followed the Wall Street panic as too rapid, and regarded speedy liquidation of crippled bull positions, even if made at low prices, as the preferable alternative. That process, it is argued, would insure the passing of liquidated securities into the hands of reliable investors or purchasers, whose position would be invulnerable by reason of the low prices paid for their purchases.

Some time is expected to elapse before any considerable Stock Exchange recovery from the shock. It will certainly be a long time before the general public will resume speculation on the recent scale. Still, it is not overlooked here that the number of people who were engaged in the recent speculation represented only a small percentage of the American population. The direct effect of the Wall Street break on the American economic situation is still expected to be limited to "luxury industries," but, that contingency apart, the feeling exists that a slack period would have been normal in any case after the industrial superactivity witnessed last Summer.

Stage in Downward Readjustment.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The past week's renewed decline of American stocks, some of them to prices lower than were reached in the October panic, is held to confirm the opinion which prevailed at Berlin during the October crash, that the episode was no mere flash in the pan, but is the first stage of a prolonged movement of downward readjustment and general liquidation.

SUPERFICIAL VIEW HERE CRITICIZED IN LONDON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—London's feeling about the Wall Street collapse and its possible sequel is best illustrated by this week's very general criticism here of the comments by American financiers. Some of these are described as platitudes about unchanged fundamental conditions and unwarranted assurances of the situation not being such as to give any cause for disquiet.

One of the London financial journals points out this week that, while it is perfectly true that fundamental conditions, as applied to growing wheat and cotton are unaltered, nevertheless grave financial losses have been incurred throughout the whole country; the instalment buying system, so vastly developed in America, will now be on trial, and even today American stock valuations do not in numerous cases provide a reasonable income return on the basis of current dividends. It is believed as firmly as ever that America will eventually make wonderful recovery, but the feeling is that it will take much time.

LONDON STILL LOSING GOLD

But £1,000,000 Is Due to Arrive From South Africa This Week.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Gold taken in by the Bank of England during the past calendar week was £852,613, mostly bars bought in the open market. Withdrawals were £1,543,187, nearly all for France.

Next Tuesday £1,000,000 is due to arrive in London from South Africa. Half of this will go directly into the Bank of England; the balance will be offered, as usual, in the open market.

EUROPEAN MARKETS HIT BY OUR CRASH

SEE NO LOWER BANK RATE

Further Change Is Not Expected Until Bank of England's Gold Reserve Is Built Up.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The effect of last week's reduction of the bank rate here has been lost on financial markets in the face of the excitement and depression caused by the violent upheaval on Wall Street. This week's fresh decline in your stock market has resulted in further widespread liquidation here, and it becomes more obvious every day that the Wall Street crash is creating serious trouble in other markets.

Our own Stock Exchange settlement this week went through without mishap, but reports of difficulties outside are current and assistance will probably be necessary to prevent trouble. This appears to be particularly the case on the Continental markets, where speculators have been badly hit. In consequence of those difficulties liquidation of international securities on the London market has been heavy and market values have sometimes crumbled alarmingly.

Difficult Position at London.

The position at London is relatively sound, but, surrounded as it is by shaken credit and with a very confusing outlook, it is difficult to say how our markets will ultimately emerge from the violent purging now in progress. Confidence is, at any rate, likely to be slow in returning, and speculation has received a blow from which it will not quickly recover. Under these circumstances British investors are turning their attention to investment securities, and this class of business is expected steadily to increase.

Apart from the losses to Paris, the outlook of the London gold market continues very satisfactory. Not only is the large amount noted in last week's cables on the way to this market from Australia and Argentina, but arrivals from South Africa in the near future will be very substantial.

Gold and the Bank Rate.

If gold exports to France should cease the Bank of England's gold reserve ought to rise substantially between now and the end of the year. Until this is an accomplished fact, however, no further reduction in the bank rate is likely. That much has been officially intimated by the Bank of England to the money market.

The reduction in the bank rate gave a fillip to all government securities and other high-class issues at first, but this gain was lost immediately last Monday when the government announced the terms of its 5 per cent conversion loan at par.

NEW HIGH-GRADE LOANS FIND BETTER MARKET

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—In spite of the present shaky condition of the speculative markets money is already coming forward here for good new securities. The government can expect large subscriptions for its new conversion loan, the amount of which is unlimited, and British municipal bodies, many of which need funds, will also be in the market. They have been encouraged by the very successful issue made this week for one of our smaller municipal corporations.

Industrial concerns should now also find a ready market for their issues whenever they can show good records and a reasonably certain outlook for a prosperous future. But there is no money available for companies without any past and with only conjectural prospects for the future. On these lines the London market for new capital expects to do good business for some time to come.

Breakdown of Speculation Clears Outlook in Europe

LONDON, Nov. 8.—While the immediate outlook on London's markets is obscure and financial difficulties may yet multiply, the longer outlook is nevertheless felt to be more satisfactory than for two or three years past. For one thing, the ultimate effect of the present world-wide breakdown of speculation will be easier terms for available money, far too much of which has of late been diverted from financing trade and other legitimate objects.

This means that money will now flow freely into sound securities, and that the movement ought not to be confined to this country alone. It is expected that, when the effects of the present speculative destruction have passed, America will again take its place as an important lender abroad, and that all markets may look with confidence to obtaining whatever funds are required for sound financing.

BRITISH PRICES LOWER, 'ECONOMIST' SHOWS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The Economist index number of commodity prices at the end of October, based on the 1927 average, was 90.2, against 91.8 in September and 95.3 a year ago. Compared with the 1913 average percentage figure, all commodities stand at 129.6, comparing with 131.9 in September and 136.9 a year ago.

Figures for the various groups on this basis are as follows: Cereals and meat 129.3, other foods 171.9, textiles 133.7, minerals 118.2, miscellaneous 105.

July, 1929	93.7	Oct., 1925	106.8

Aug., 1929	134.5	Oct., 1926	154.2

	Oct., 1929.	Sept., 1929.	Aug., 1929.
Cereals, meat	129.3	131.4	140.5
Other foods	171.9	178.1	174.3
Textiles	133.7	137.7	143.9
Minerals	118.2	120.3	122.6
Miscellaneous	105.0	106.3	103.6

NEW PUBLIC LOAN RATE IS SHOCK TO LONDON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Announcement of a 5 per cent rate at par for the new government conversion loan rudely dispelled this week the market's view that government credit had been permanently established on a lower basis than 5 per cent. Consideration of surrounding circumstances, however, has since thrown a more favorable light upon the treasury's decision to offer such good terms.

In particular, the Chancellor's personal explanation regarding the purposes of the loan has helped to remove the first impression that British Government credit had suffered a serious decline. No doubt is entertained, that this new government stock will be heavily applied for, because it represents a long-dated investment on a 5 per cent basis. Further, it is believed that the eventual establishment of this loan at a considerable premium will serve to lift to a higher level other investment securities.

MOVEMENT OF GOLD TO PARIS NATURAL

FOREIGN CREDITS REMAIN

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Although the gold holdings of the Bank of France increased 207,000,000 francs in the week covered by Thursday's statement, its liquid credits abroad also increased 53,000,000. This proved that the bank had not utilized its balances abroad to purchase gold. In fact, it is known that the bank has continued the policy of no longer intervening on the exchange market as a purchaser of foreign bills. It has merely been buying at Paris, at the current rate, the gold already imported by French banks from London or New York for their own account, whenever the gold point may have been reached.

Since the bank grants no special facilities for those transactions, the present influx of gold to Paris is considered a result of the natural play of the exchange market, without any artificial stimulation. The evident inference is that movement of capital between France and foreign countries is creating a balance in favor of France which can be settled only by gold imports.

Surprise has been expressed that France should be a creditor to such extent in relation to countries where money rates are considerably higher than at Paris. This apparent anomaly was explained here this week by the fact that only floating capital is invested by France on foreign markets, and that it is invested only temporarily. It may be again remarked that the French bank's balances abroad still aggregate $1,000,000,000, in addition to which the Treasury holds foreign balances of about $400,000,000 and private banks, as nearly as can be judged, $200,000,000. The total of these balances has been higher at other times, and the tendency is rather toward further reduction, especially given lower interest rates on foreign markets.

In order to avoid an increase of such foreign credits, however, it is necessary that interest on French capital still lodged abroad should be brought home. As a matter of fact many of the recent purchases of francs with dollars or sterling have been made solely for that purpose.

MOVEMENT AT FRENCH BANK

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Bank of France return of last Thursday, covering the position at the October month-end, renders the changes reported for the week less immediately significant. Certain items, particularly the increase of 2,120 millions in circulation, were counterbalanced by increase of 1,083 millions in sundry assets and by decrease of 845 millions in private deposits.

Furthermore, bills discounted by the bank decreased 653 millions during the week, although loans against securities rose 160 millions. The ratio of reserve to liabilities decreased from 45.96 to 45.35.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The French foreign trade balance on merchandise account, which has long been running heavily against this country, is now improving rapidly. Not the least important reason for this change is the abundant wheat production at home in France this year, rendering unnecessary the very large import of foreign wheat which characterized the last few years. It is also believed that stocks of raw material have now been accumulated by French industries in sufficient quantity, rendering possible reduction in import of such goods.

Nevertheless, it is not easy to see whether gold imports into France will continue, and in what quantity. The answer seems to depend chiefly on the movement of securities—that is to say, on the balance between purchases of foreign securities by French investors, attracted by low prices, and sales of French securities in Paris by foreigners. The point is made that many French securities were bought by foreigners with money borrowed in France, and that therefore resale of such securities would necessitate no export of capital.

FRENCH GOLD DEMAND BAFFLING TO LONDON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The reduction in the Bank of England rate has produced no ill-effects on the foreign exchanges because similar action was taken at New York, Amsterdam and Berlin. The French demand for gold remains the only really unsatisfactory factor of the monetary situation. But for that the Bank's gold reserve would be several million sterling above what it was when the bank rate was raised at the end of September.

As it is, the gold reserve is actually a million sterling less now than then. Several millions in gold have come in since the September rise in the bank rate, but all has been re-exported to France. Having made several false guesses as to when this French demand for gold would cease, the London market has abandoned its rôle of prophet in that direction. It also has given up speculating as to the real reasons for this somewhat remarkable movement. It still hopes and believes, however, that further gold shipments in large amount to France, if such shipments are made, will come from America.

PARIS WATCHES NEW YORK.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—After the scarcity of money on the Paris market at the end of October, rates have again become easier. The Bourse, however, has been generally weak under the influence of liquidation of bull positions.

REICHSBANK CUT IS TAKEN CALMLY

GERMAN INDUSTRY HALTING

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The effect of the lowering of the Reichsbank discount rate from 7½ to 7 per cent has this week been confined to the short-time money market. The Official Institute for Studying Trade Fluctuations predicts, however, real alleviation in the home capital market. As yet the Berlin money market has been merely inactive.

Friday's day-loan rate was 6¾ to 8, monthly loans brought 8¾@9¼. The banks generally forecast cheaper money in the coming fortnight, since funds are coming in abundantly from the provinces and no great demand is expected before the month-end.

The feeling, nevertheless, is that, notwithstanding the apparent decrease in German industrial activity, there is no prospect that industry will be able to dispense entirely with foreign capital. As for the trade situation, unemployment continues slowly to increase. It is still contended that, although 850,000 German workingmen were estimated to be out of work at the beginning of November, nevertheless the pace of the seasonal Winter increase in unemployment is slower than it was last year. The Prussian Chamber of Commerce monthly report for October states that there has been no general decline of industrial activity, although orders are slackening and the home market for steel is quiet.

Although the Reichsbank has been gaining gold in the last few weeks, no fresh inflow of gold from London is expected. Dollar exchange, however, at 4.179 marks to the dollar, stands well below parity. If, as is expected, American funds move heavily into the German market, gold shipments from New York to Berlin are considered possible.

Berlin bankers express doubt as to whether England, after reducing the London discount rate, will be able to prevent further gold outflow to France.

STOCKS VERSUS BONDS, AS BERLIN NOW SEES IT

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—European critics have long watched with skepticism the growing popularity in America of the theory that bond investments are inadvisable, owing to the failure of fixed interest yields to adapt themselves to a rise of general prices, whereas stocks, according to the contention, necessarily advance when such prices rise. This is considered here a typical "bull market theory": it is held to ignore the fact that American stocks periodically suffer disastrous reactions and are subject to periodical overspeculation.

According to old American precedent, the German experts say, the American bond market will now recover steadily, whereas months if not years may pass before a new and important bull market in stocks sets in.

WE have prepared a list of Common Stocks which we consider decidedly attractive for investment around present price levels.

THINK OUR MARKET WILL LEND AGAIN

European Capitals Confident That Release of Loans Will Be Resumed.

SEE CURRENCIES IMPROVED

ROME, Nov. 8.—The Wall Street crash, as judged in this market, will at least have the brief effect of leaving capital which formerly flowed into the speculative American market free for investment in Europe. This should accelerate the reconstruction economics upon which European States are working, should permit greater stability in sterling and therefore of other sensitive currencies.

In any case, the return to normal money markets after the wholly abnormal situation of the past two years is expected to work toward better distribution of capital in the outside world and to favor reconstruction of gold reserves in countries needing them.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—In German business circles the most important significance of the American Stock Exchange collapse to Europe is considered to be the probable revival of American willingness to lend abroad. Representatives of an international auditing firm which watches closely foreign investments in Germany stated this week that negotiations for new large American loans are under way. This development is considered here to be inevitable. Financial Berlin did not miss the fact that the last stages of the Wall Street boom were increasingly accompanied by indifference and even aversion to bond investments.

In this respect the evidence of a changing attitude is gratifying to European borrowing nations. It is expected now that the result will be to enable them to obtain American capital on favorable terms. Even a decline in American industrial activity (which most bankers here expect) would be indirectly favorable to Europe, because it would set free American capital for investment abroad.

NEW UNSETTLEMENT ON BERLIN'S MARKET

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The stock market at Berlin began the week with another sharp advance, which was lost, however, in the ensuing days. The market is just now strongly influenced by the aberrations of the rayon Allgemeene Kunstzuide corporation, which is the title of the new amalgamated company formed by fusion of the German Vereinigte Glanzstoffe and the Dutch Enka. This stock, introduced on the Berlin Boerse at 161, rushed up in a few days to 181, and then collapsed to 150 for no known reasons.

The week's fluctuations in Reichsbank shares, owing to uncertainty about the treatment of shareholders under the proposed reform of the banking law, have also been a disturbing factor, and Friday's market, although slightly firmer, was very dull. The Frankfurter Zeitung's index of Stock Exchange prices as of Nov. 1 was 109.35, comparing with 109.94 on Oct. 25, 117.61 at the end of September, 141.34 last Autumn and 177.44 at the high point of 1927.

ITALY TO CUT BANK RATE.

ROME, Nov. 8.—Early reduction of the Italian bank rate is expected as a result of the similar action already taken on other European markets where dear money has prevailed. Money rates are not yet, however, any easier on the Italian market.

This is due both to the slowness in growth of savings, the necessity to reduce bank circulation and the unfavorable balance of international payments.

German Potash Sales Reduced.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The potash syndicate's total sales in October were 79,109 tons of pure potash. Sales in the completed ten months of the year were 1,217,216 tons, against 1,261,772 in the same months of 1928.

Slight Decline in German Prices.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The official index of wholesale prices in Germany as of Oct. 30 was 136.8, as compared with 137.9 on Oct. 23. A year ago it was 140.2.

FEWER NEW CORPORATIONS.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 10.—A slump in the number of new corporations marketing securities was disclosed in the October corporation list, made public today by Edward J. Flynn, Secretary of State, in his report of the activities of the Bureau for the past month.

A pronounced decrease in the last two or three weeks is attributed to the crash in stock market prices.

For the ten months of this year a total of 22,174 stock companies were formed as compared with 22,261 for the corresponding period of 1928. In October 1,852 companies were formed a decrease of 260 from 1928 when 2,342 were granted charters. Forty-one companies were represented in the corporation list and Erie County led with forty-four concerns, several of which were capitalized at more than a million dollars. Westchester County had forty-three and Nassau County forty-two.

During October one livery stable was incorporated, the first in many months. There were 256 concerns formed to deal in realty, many of them in the vicinity of New York City.

Italy Reduces Her Imports; Foreign Trade Balance Up

ROME, Nov. 8.—A slight improvement in Italy's foreign trade balance is noticeable in the latest reports. It is due chiefly to reduced importation of wheat. In July that import had amounted to 1,838,000 quintals, but in August it was cut down to 806,000, in September to 140,000 and in October to 287,000. Last year the August import of wheat was 1,462,000 quintals, the September import 1,116,000 and the October import 1,942,000.

This decrease in importation has been partly due to the much larger Italian harvest, but partly also to internal prices for wheat. These have been more favorable than the prices prevailing in America and other exporting countries.

PREDICTS BENEFITS FROM STOCK CRASH

Bankers Association Journal Says Various Constructive Elements Will Come Into Play.

Numerous constructive elements in general business lines should come into play now that the crisis in the stock market has passed, according to the monthly business review of The American Bankers Association Journal, which says:

"The tornado of stock liquidation that struck the security markets during the past month has severely shaken the American speculative structure. Now that the crisis has passed and the fallen débris cleared up it can be seen that the underlying foundation is still sound and that the principal damage done by the storm was to tear away the superstructure that had become top-heavy through overextended credit.

"The runaway bull market of the past several years seems to have ended. The day of easy profits without labor has passed. Trading on margin has not proved the royal road to wealth.

"Numerous constructive elements now enter the business picture. A genuine bond market promises to return. Building construction should revive, as funds are again available for purchasing real estate and mortgages. Commercial enterprise should be stimulated with the burden of high interest rates removed. Foreign loans can again be sold to provide credits with which to build up our export trade.

"While the immediate effect of the stock crash may be to curtail purchasing power somewhat for merchandise outside the range of necessities, a broad analysis will show that the ultimate result should be highly beneficial. Many individual holders of stocks have lost heavily, but America is noted for its rapid 'come-back' after any disaster and this should be no exception."

FINISHED PRODUCTS SHOW EXPORT RISE

Total Sent Abroad in the Third Quarter Was 9% Higher Than in Same Period of 1928.

IMPORTS HAD EQUAL RISE

But Quantitative Gain Was Greater Than Indicated, Owing to Reduced Foodstuff Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—In a survey of American foreign trade for the third quarter of 1929, made public today by the Department of Commerce, emphasis was laid on the fact that there was a 9 per cent expansion in exports of finished manufactures as compared with the same quarter in 1928.

While foreign sales of this class of goods fell below the extremely high values of the first two quarters of 1929, the report said, they continued to make up more than one-half of the total value of exports. This was owing, in part, to the fact that shipments of grain and cotton were smaller than is customary at this season of the year.

The survey stated that the total exports of merchandise for the third quarter of 1929 amounted to $1,221,000,000—an advance of 2½ per cent over the third quarter of 1928, and the largest value for any corresponding quarter since 1920.

As compared with a year before, the price level of all export commodities combined was practically unchanged, and, consequently, the increase in value represents larger quantities exported. Decreases in prices of certain leading commodities tended to be counterbalanced by increases for others; the average export unit values of cotton, automobiles and gasoline were somewhat lower, while those of wheat, heavy iron and steel products and copper advanced.

Imports for the third quarter of 1929 amounted in value to $1,074,000,000—a 9 per cent increase over the corresponding quarter of 1928, and nearly double that for the third quarter of 1921, which was the low figure of the period of post-war deflation.

The increase in the quantity of imports, as compared with the third quarter of 1928, was even more substantial than the gain in value. In fact, a careful adjustment for price changes of leading commodities shows the price level for all commodities imported in the third quarter of 1929 to have been at least 7 per cent below that of a year earlier, and the quantities of merchandise imported consequently one-sixth larger.

Imports of crude materials amounted to $367,000,000, an increase of 8½ per cent as compared with the third quarter of 1928.

"In consequence of the greater expansion in imports than in exports," the review stated, "the excess of merchandise exports over imports for the third quarter of 1929 was reduced to $148,000,000, as compared with $195,000,000 in July to September, 1928.

"Since July, 1928, the flow of gold has been toward the United States; in the third quarter of 1929 the excess of gold imports over exports amounted to $71,000,000, as against a net excess of exports of $63,000,000 a year before.

"Foreign capital issues publicly offered in the United States during the third quarter of 1929 fell to $82,000,000—the smallest figure for any corresponding quarter since 1923."

BRAZILIAN LOAN DISCUSSED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAO PAULO, Nov. 10.—The Brazilian representative of the Rothschild banking interests, Sir Harry Lynch, is, according to reports from Rio de Janeiro, holding a series of conferences with President Washington Luis and the president of the Federal Bank concerning the £9,000,000 loan which Brazil is endeavoring to float to normalize the coffee situation.

Definite information regarding the progress of the negotiations is not obtainable but local newspapers state the loan will be floated shortly in the London market. Informed banking circles here, however, are skeptical as to the progress of the negotiations, but believe the loan would greatly alleviate the credit situation here.

SIX POINTS TO REMEMBER
WHEN YOU ARE ASKED FOR ADVICE ABOUT INVESTMENTS

THE CONSCIENTIOUS MAN is sincerely perplexed when asked for investment advice. He knows that in giving such advice he is assuming serious present and future obligations.

Before suggesting the purchase of any security or type of security, he should be informed as to the circumstances of the prospective investor. He should know what securities are already held, to the end that any additions suggested may contribute to a well-balanced investment position.

He feels, moreover, that in advising what to buy, he is often accepting a moral obligation to advise when a change in holdings should be made, to correspond with changing investment conditions. A busy man may find it impossible to discharge such an obligation.

Many responsible men in these circumstances turn to organized investment management—provided it meets certain definite requirements. Among them the following are important:

FIRST, an organization whose record discloses full recognition of the seriousness of the obligation involved in managing the resources of individuals and the endowments of institutions.

SECOND, an organization which, over a period of speculation, has demonstrated its uncompromising adherence to a conservative investment policy based on the results of industrial analysis and economic research.

FOURTH, an organization having no interests which conflict with those of the investor whom it serves.

FIFTH, an organization whose sole compensation is on a clearly stated fee basis, and whose members may participate in the investment funds which it manages only on the same terms as the general public.

SIXTH, an organization providing, by contract, means of entrance or withdrawal at will on the basis of the actual market value of securities held.

You are invited to investigate Trust Funds A and B, administered by the IRVING INVESTORS MANAGEMENT COMPANY, INC., as a way of meeting such requirements as the above. Information will be furnished at any office of the Irving Trust Company.

For months we urged

"Buy Bonds at Present Prices for 6% Return"

BECAUSE continued high money rates had forced down bond prices creating an unusual opportunity to buy for high income return and profit possibilities. Now, cheaper money is stimulating bond buying and prices are advancing. At this time, however, it is still possible to select a well diversified list on which the average yield is around 6%.

TRADE IN LUXURIES HIT BY STOCK CRASH

BUILDING OPERATIONS HIGH

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Hesitation among buyers is reported in a few lines of trade as the result of the severe break in stocks. This is reflected in the drop in the buying of luxuries and is noticeable by wholesalers of dry goods and general merchandise whose orders have shown small reductions, except on seasonal goods, which have held up because of colder weather. Distribution in these lines is, however, about the same as a year ago. Retail buyers have taken hold liberally and there has been a large distribution of necessaries.

Although the steel industry of the West continues to operate at 80 per cent capacity, or the same as the past few weeks, mills have largely eliminated their backlogs and specifications and shipments are running nearly even. New buying is mainly for immediate delivery in bars, plates and sheets. Structural tonnage has reached a good aggregate on orders from outside points, with a few large tonnages for local building.

Implement makers have taken a fair tonnage, although not up to last year's mark, but their sales are said to be ahead of that period. Railroads are in the market for about 250,000 tons of rails. Car orders run well up into the thousands, with a sufficient supply already placed to require more than 200,000 tons of steel, and will keep car builders busy for several months.

A good part of the orders recently placed will be filled in the new year. To prevent an overproduction of radios one leading manufacturer which has been turning out 6,000 radios a week announces that it will gradually reduce its output.

In the pig iron situation there is less new buying, but melters are taking a fair tonnage, and merchant furnaces continue in active operation. Western wire and nail mills are operating at about 80 per cent capacity.

There are no new features in building supplies. Building operations throughout the country for the ten months ended Oct. 31 aggregated $5,553,000,000, as estimated by the Indiana Limestone Company.

October business was about the same as a year ago.

BANK SAVINGS DROP IS FIRST IN 20 YEARS

Decline of $195,305,000 in Year Reported by All Institutions in Country.

524,221 FEWER ACCOUNTS

Lure of Expected Profits in Stocks an Important Factor, Says Official Report.

Savings accounts showed a decrease for the first time in twenty years in the year ended on June 30, according to compilations of the savings bank division of the American Bankers' Association, which were made public yesterday by W. Espey Albig, deputy manager in charge of the division. Savings accounts in all banks in the country on June 30 last decreased $195,305,000 from the total of June 30, 1928, and on this latter date the accounts had shown an increase of $2,200,000,000 from the total of June 30, 1927.

The announcement stated also that the number of depositors of savings accounts had decreased by 524,221 during the year.

In discussing the matter Mr. Albig said:

"The causes of the recession are possibly multiple. In a mass movement it is difficult to evaluate all the factors. There is nothing to indicate a considerable increase in instalment buying during the year. There is scarcely any reason to doubt that one of the important factors in draining away savings deposits and decreasing the number of depositors has been the lure of profits to be made in stocks.

"For a number of years the people of this country have been regaled almost daily with stories of profits which have been made in stocks in all types of companies. Those who feared the uncertainties of the stock market in many cases yielded to the name 'investment trust,' which connotes a wisely managed company of widely diversified holdings both as to type of industry and geographical location, but which in the United States has been used to cover all sorts of companies ranging from investment trusts of the highest possible integrity to holding companies and even blind pools."

The statement says that the recession should not cause alarm, as it amounts to only about $2 on each account.

SAVANNAH AFFILIATION FOR NEW ATLANTA BANK

Interest to Be Acquired in Liberty, Which Will Double Capital and Get National Charter.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 10.—Henry Blun, chairman of the board of the Liberty Bank and Trust Company, announced today that the First National Bank of Atlanta, which is to be formed by a merger of the Atlanta and Lowry National Bank and the Fourth National Bank of Atlanta, will become affiliated with the bank of which he is the head. The Atlanta bank will get an interest in the Liberty. The capital stock of the Liberty is to be increased from $300,000 to $600,000. There is to be no change in the officers of the bank nor in its policy.

Mr. Blun said that in a short time the Liberty would be made a national bank.

It was announced tha the changes will in no way affect the Georgia States Savings Association, which is owned largely by Mr. Blun and his associates of the Liberty. It is understood that the Savannah acquisition by the First National of Atlanta is but one of a series of similar affiliations between First National and banks in othes cities in Georgia. The Liberty Bank and Trust Company was established in 1889 as the Germania Bank, but a little more than eleven years ago it changed its name.

BOTTLERS' GROUP TO MEET.

Convention of Soft Drink Industry Will Fight Rise in Sugar Tariff.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 10.—The American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages Association, which will meet in annual convention at the Auditorium tomorrow to continue for several days with approximately 6,000 delegates attending, will act vigorously in opposition to the proposed increase in the tariff on sugar, according to National Secretary Junior Owens of Washington, D. C.

The Association, through its headquarters in Washington, had been in the thick of the fight against what it terms "a raid on the American sugar bowl," centered in the increase in the duty on sugar was proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee last Summer, Mr. Owens said today.

"Our industry and sugar consumers generally, we believe, are strongly opposed to any increase in the tariff on sugar," he said, "and most especially to the exorbitant rise that is proposed in the bill now before Congress. The $2.20 per hundred pound rate named by the Senate Finance Committee would increase the cost of production for our industry by approximately $5,000,000 a year. Sugar is one of the chief ingredients of our products."

Mr. Owens added that the soft drink industry was not opposing relief to the continental American sugar-beet and cane growers in opposition to an increase of the sugar tariff, but advocated that such relief be given by a bounty payable directly to them from the United States Treasury.

An exhibit occupying 30,000 square feet of floor space has been staged for the gathering.

Armistice Day

BUT throbbing with modern business. The scene of many a parade—today, no less patriotic, Washington Square pursues the business of peace. ¶ Lofty office buildings and modern apartments rising everywhere. ¶ Soon a new subway—a new artery—new and increased human life coursing through it. ¶ New business and growing business manifested the need of a local bank with metropolitan facilities, convenient to Washington Square. ¶ Shoulder to Shoulder we march along with advancing business, with heartfelt enthusiasm and interest in the business and problems entrusted to us. ¶ Come in and join the ranks of those who have enlisted with us in the common cause of peace and prosperity, with friendliness, mutual understanding and reciprocal respect as its foundation.

Stock Market Losses

THE recent market crash has depleted many Estates. In the endeavor to replenish these dwindled Estates, there is too much chaotic thinking and chaotic action. Over-speculation caused the recent losses. Renewed speculation is just as hazardous—it is not the remedy.

The surest way to regain losses is for every man to get back to normal productive effort. Get into a sound, safe, stable business that has the potentiality of big earning power for honest, able effort.

In this business there are today quite a number of individual producers whose commissions have run well over $100,000 in a single year! Incomes of $50,000 a year are by no means uncommon, and hundreds of men earn $10,000 to $25,000 a year.

The business we refer to is Modern Life Insurance—as dignified and as worthy of respect as any service ever offered to the public. "One Hundred Billion Dollars of Life Insurance in Force" proves it. Yet the business is still in its infancy and the recent market decline opens up immediate unusual opportunities for increased sales.

Life Insurance Selling has undergone many progressive changes in recent years and is well worthy of the wholehearted effort of big men, men who have demonstrated outstanding ability in other lines of endeavor.

A mighty interesting book, recently published, will give you the real picture of Modern Life Insurance as a profitable business for you. It will pay you to read this new book. We shall gladly mail a complimentary copy to you or to your friend. Write to Herman Robinson, General Agent, The Travelers Insurance Company, 363 Fifth Avenue, New York.

N. J. STANDARD OIL INCREASES CAPITAL

Delaware Corporation Files Notice of Adding $50,000,000, Making Total $250,000,000.

PLAN FOR EXPANSION SEEN

Teagle Says Action Is an Internal Matter, Taken to Carry On the Business—No Public Financing.

An expansion in the activities of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey (Delaware), the principal operating subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company (of New Jersey), is seen in the increase in the company's capital from $200,000,000 to $250,000,000, of which a notice was filed on Saturday with the Secretary of State of Delaware.

Walter C. Teagle, president of the New Jersey company, said last night that the capital increase was an internal matter relating to the corporate structure of the Delaware unit and was undertaken in order to carry on business. The original capital of $200,000,000 provided upon incorporation of the Delaware company in August, 1927, is now insufficient for its needs, he said, explaining that the additional capital would be acquired by the parent company in exchange for working capital.

The increased capitalization is seen as an enlargement of the plan whereby the Standard Oil Company (of New Jersey) segregated its operating interests two years ago. The Delaware organization took over the finding and marketing business of the Standard Oil Company (of New Jersey) together with the stock of the Carter Oil Company, Transcontinental Petroleum Company of Mexico, Tuscarora Oil Company, Ltd., and Oklahoma Pipe Line Company.

No public financing will result from the new expansion of this company, Mr. Teagle said, adding that 36 acquisitions of additional properties were imminent. The Delaware unit carries on producing, refining and marketing operations in many States as well as in foreign countries.

MIDDLE STATES OIL PLAN.

The New York Stock Exchange has removed from its list the stock of the Middle States Oil Corporation not yet deposited under the reorganization plan, and since Nov. 6 transactions on the Exchange have been limited to certificates of deposit representing stock subject to the plan.

The reorganization committee announced that the deposit date had been extended to Nov. 22 to accommodate holders of undeposited stock. The same date has been set for the deposit of Middle States Oil serial notes and gold notes and the 6 per cent bonds of the United Oil Producers Corporation and the Oil Lease Development Company, subsidiaries of Middle States Oil.

UTILITY EARNINGS.

New York Water Service.

The New York Water Service Corporation reports gross revenues of $2,840,777 for the year ended on Sept. 30, compared with $2,408,180 for the preceding year, and gross income after expenses and general taxes, of $1,530,078, against $1,312,347 for the preceding twelve months.

COLOMBIA VICTOR IN OIL LAW SUITS

CONSTITUTIONALITY UPHELD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BOGOTA, Colombia, Nov. 10.—The government has won practically a complete victory in the consolidated suits a number of American oil companies filed in the hands of Colombian attorneys in March 1926, asking the courts to declare unconstitutional and unenforceable the second, third, fourth and sixth articles of the emergency oil law of 1927, according to a decision of the Supreme Court announced in the Espectador last night. The suit also questioned the constitutionality of a number of articles in Executive Decree 150, issued under the law.

The Espectador prints the resolutory part of the decision, holding that all the articles in the law and decree discussed in the suit are constitutional and enforceable excepting parts of the second and third paragraphs of Article 21 of the decree and Article 20 so far as the same requires the presentation of land titles by persons not engaged in petroleum exploration by drilling and so far as it excludes titles accrediting ownership unspecified in said article. Except for the last point, the decision was wholly adverse to the plaintiffs' material contentions.

Decree 150 will be superseded by the decree of June 1928, pending the court's execution of the decision. The temporary oil law has been in effect pending the enactment of the general petroleum law passed recently by the Senate and now up in the House.

FARM BOARD BACKS MODEL GRAIN PLAN

LOCALS WILL HOLD STOCK

They Will Be Linked to the National Marketing Corporation Through the Regional Organization.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The basis upon which the Federal Farm Board hopes to organize the country's producers of wheat and other grain so that overproduction may be averted and orderly marketing promoted was indicated today when the board authorized a statement approving the grain-marketing plan of the new $1,000,000 North Pacific Grain Growers' Cooperative Association, which it characterized as a "model set-up for our grain cooperatives which are to be affiliated with the Farmers National Grain Corporation, recently established under the direction of the board."

One of the serious problems confronting the board in its efforts to bring about more established agricultural prices has been to obtain cooperation from a large percentage of the farmers to restrict production and market their crops on a sound business basis. With the establishment of organizations such as it now approves, the board is hopeful that sufficient cooperation may be obtained, without recourse to the rejected theory of the mandatory equalization fee, to make the organized cooperatives the controlling factor in the situation.

Wants Mere of Such Groups.

The board is hopeful that farmers in every part of the country can be induced to form organizations of the kind described, especially in sections where overproduction and the piling up of surplus wheat has caused forced sales, consequently causing, from time to time, a severe depression in price.

The "model" organization to which the board calls attention was the outgrowth of a movement started among grain producers of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Western Montana. The plan calls for a cooperative corporation with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000, consisting of 50,000 shares at $20 per share. The stock may be sold only to a local cooperative elevator, warehouse or other grain-handling association on the basis of the average volume handled annually.

At the discretion of the board of directors, farmers in localities not served by affiliated cooperatives may subscribe directly for the capital stock. These direct subscriptions would be transferred to the local association as soon as one affiliated with the regional organization was formed. Each share of stock would have one vote.

Then the regional association would subscribe for its pro rata share of the capital stock of the Farmers National Grain Corporation, the central selling agency with headquarters in Chicago, and would be entitled to nominate and elect directors to serve on the National Corporation's board. Where farmer-owned warehouse or elevator associations exist and are not organized cooperatively, assistance would be given to put them in shape to affiliate so they would become eligible to subscribe for stock in the regional association.

For Action by Local Farmers.

Where no farmer-owned local association exists, a new local organization would be formed by all interested farmers in the community. This association would be a cooperative stock concern, which would subscribe for its pro rata share of the capital of the regional association. The local association would be responsible for the local warehousing of the grain of its members, either through the building of new facilities or by purchasing or leasing of privately owned facilities, or by contracting with private agencies for the handling and warehousing of their grain until physical facilities may be acquired.

"As soon as practicable after organization of the regional association," the board said, "attempt will be made through the local associations to obtain as many signers as possible to the standard marketing contract between the grower and his local association, requiring delivery of the grain to the local association on a triple-option basis. These options are:

"(1) Sale upon day's price prevailing at time of delivery; (2) deferred sale with storage privileges with a definite time limit, and (3) seasonal pooling basis. The contract will operate for an indefinite period, but provides for a two weeks' annual withdrawal period.

System of Handling Outlined.

"Contracts will also be drawn up between each local association and the regional organization requiring delivery of all grain received, and a contractual arrangement affected between the regional and the Farmers National Grain Corporation covering the handling and sale of all grain by the latter.

"In operation, the plan contemplates that contract signers will deliver all their grain to the local warehouse facilities provided by the local association. Such grain will be handled upon three bases, depending upon the optional sale method chosen by the growers at the time of delivery. If the grower elects to sell it on the day's basis, or deferred basis, he will receive the day's local market price, less any storage charges accrued.

"If he elects to use the seasonal pool he will receive, when such pools are closed, the average pool price for the grain delivered, less a fixed local handling charge, plus other marketing expenses. Such contracts are to be so drawn that the signer will be eligible for advances on storage tickets through the Intermediate Credit Bank.

Help Offered in Financing.

"Producers who do not execute the marketing agreement may deliver grain to the local warehouse association and sell it upon the usual day's local market basis, or place it in storage for later sale. If they are stockholders in the local association they will participate in its earnings, but will not be eligible for advances on storage tickets.

"The local elevator or warehouse association will receive from the regional association, whatever needed, assistance in financing its daily operations in grain, and also final capital loans.

"In return, the local association will contract to deliver all the grain it receives, either contract grain or purchased grain, to the regional associations. The local association will deliver all pooled grain received, and sell all purchased grain received, to the regional association.

"The regional will deliver all pooled grain to the Farmers National Grain Corporation for sale by the latter. The regional will sell all grain purchased by it from locals to the Farmers National Grain Corporation on the day's market basis. In this way there will be placed under the control of the regional association and the Farmers' National Grain Corporation all grain which farmers in the entire area are willing to market on any plan through farmer-owned agencies."

CORN MOVING FREELY TO MARKET, PRICES LOW

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—New corn has been moving from the country in large volume and is being bought by investors at good discounts under old. Prices on new in the cash markets are off 5 to 6 cents for the week and 2 to 3 cents on old. Trading is mostly of a local character, with prices 3 to 3¼ cents lower for the week.

December closed at 87½ to 87¾ cents, March, 93¾ to 93½ cents; May, 95½ to 95¾ cents, practically the lowest of the season for these two months.

Receipts of corn for week, 2,972,000 bushels, against 2,985,000 bushels the previous week and 5,350,000 bushels last year. Shipments for week, 1,450,000 bushels, previous week 2,422,000 bushels, and last year, 2,280,000 bushels.

Oats meet realizing sales on all hard spots and are absorbed on recessions. Little new buying is coming into the market and closing prices were around the lowest, with net losses of 2¾ to 3¼ cents. December being 46¾ cents, March, 49¼ cents, and May, 51½ cents, the two deferred months being at the season's low.

Leading holders of rye who have supported values for months withdrew several days during the week, which induced heavy selling by local and Northwestern bears. There is no export demand and trade is puzzled as to what large holders intend to do with the market. Prices are 10 cents lower than a week ago, with the close on December $1.00½, March, $1.05¾, and May, $1.05¾.

GERMANY'S EXPORT MARKET.

Wireless to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The improvement in Germany's export market for steel, which followed the international cartel's reduction of producing quotas by 10 per cent, continues. Export prices of bars, joists and semi-products have all risen, and producers again dominate the market.

This rise in prices is sustained by visible improvement in the prospect that the international cartel and the German home syndicates will be renewed before the expiration date. Germany's export of iron and steel is now not only large on an absolute basis but it exceeds the monthly average of 1926, which was the best post-war year.

FRENCH STEEL OUTPUT LESS

September Production Below Last Year's Monthly Average.

Wireless to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Iron output in France as now reported for September was 601,000 tons, comparing with 893,000 in August and 821,000 in September of last year. The September output was the smallest of this year, except for February, but was above the monthly average of 1923, which was 534,000.

September's steel output was 762,000 tons, against 827,000 in August and 767,000 in the preceding September. This is the smallest monthly output of 1929, except for February, and it is slightly below the monthly average of 1923.

UNFILLED ORDERS OF STEEL

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—It appears that the United States Steel Corporation's unfilled obligations increased 163,981 tons during October, but the excess of rail bookings over rail shipments would more than cover this amount. September rail busines was not sufficient to account for all of the 244,670-ton increase reported for that month, indicating that there was some of the usual quarterly contracting in various finished products, although not much.

Taking the two months together, the excess of rail bookings over rail shipments probably approximated the total unfilled tonnage increase, which means that in the uncertain market conditions prevailing, the corporation did well in having an even balance between bookings and shipments in products other than rails. The rail buying is, of course, merely the usual and routine annual buying.

Finished steel prices appear to be holding, with slight exceptions in galvanized sheets and cold finished bars, but there is so little test that it is better to avoid forming opinions as to probabilities.

STEEL PRODUCTION SHOWS A DECLINE

PRICES WELL SUSTAINED

Despite Hand to Mouth Purchasing, There Still Remain Substantial Backlogs on the Books.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—Steel buying has been decidedly light for a week and the rate of production has undergone more decrease than in previous weeks. Much of the decrease in buying is attributable to the slump in the stock market. The favorite analysis, however, is that for a time at least consumption will proceed much as would otherwise have been the case and that as buyers were carrying no stocks at all or a supply for only a week or two at most, buying will soon recover to a considerable extent. At the same time, it is thought there will eventually be far-reaching effects from the break.

Steel production, after an insignificant tapering off, had turned markedly downward before the break in the stock market could be an influence, and that turn is the more noteworthy from coming at the very time of year when production has usually increased. Four of the last five years showed increases September to October, last year's increase having been 3.8 per cent. The exception was 1927, which had a poor second half throughout.

Continued to date, the September to October rate of decrease would indicate an 80 per cent rate of steel ingot production now. Probably the rate is nearer 75 per cent. Chicago reports an 80 per cent rate and usually does better than other districts. The Youngstown district is at about 65 per cent, while the Pittsburgh district is at fully 75 per cent. Carnegie being above that rate, while some of the smaller independents are at low rates.

In view of the momentum of various manufacturing industries, the early buying of rails and the big logs at structural fabricating and freight car shops, it seems fair to put steel production at about 75 per cent for this month and 70 per cent for next month. On that assumption, the year's total production of steel ingots would be about 55,500,000 tons, or a trifle over 10 per cent gain over the 1928 record.

A forecast of steel demand to the middle of next year concerns itself with two distinct matters. First, individual buying, as of automobiles, radio and even items such as refrigerators. No one doubts that such buying will be greatly reduced, and in a double way, by its having been stimulated for a year and more past by real or assumed stock market profits, and by there being now a definitely adverse influence, from stock market losses. Second, financing of construction and other work, recently done so largely by issuing common stock at what would formerly have been considered very high prices, but now to be accomplished chiefly by borrowing on bonds or otherwise.

Despite the prevalence of hand-to-mouth buying in steel, there is a substantial volume of backlog business, which is helpful for the next few months but presages nothing for later periods. The railroads that have bought rails have the whole taken, slightly larger tonnages than in the last two years, but more important they have bought earlier than usual and rail production this month and next will be heavy. Already Chicago reports rail production at 80 per cent. The structural fabricating shops are very well booked for from four to six months. The carshops are well booked. Freight cars on order Oct. 1 plus orders since reported, minus production, indicate about 40,000 cars on order Nov. 1, the largest number since early 1926 except for slightly larger amounts April 1 and May 1 of this year.

GINNING DATA HALT DECLINE IN COTTON

Selling in New Orleans Was General Most of Week Awaiting Government Report.

WALL ST. DROP FELT ALSO

Trade Becoming Firm Despite Estimate That 15,080,000 Bales Will Be Produced.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 10.—Although the government cotton report based on conditions existing on Nov. 1 was issued only at the end of last week, it influenced the course of cotton prices during virtually the entire week, the bulk of the trading being in evening-up transactions in advance of the showing to be made by the government. The situation in Wall Street was a contributing influence, especially in encouraging the liquidation of old long cotton in the market.

The course of prices was therefore progressively downward all week until the wind-up on Friday, when a bullish view of the ginnings total to Nov. 1, coupled with a sharp falling off of the movement of the crop to market, induced enough short covering to give prices a moderate rally.

The selling, due jointly to fear of what the Census Bureau might show and to the situation in Wall Street, caused prices to decline gradually, making an accumulated drop of $4.50 a bale. At the same time the December option broke through the 17-cent line to 16.98 and all active months were at the lowest levels of the season. While hedge selling was not as heavy as it had been in previous weeks it was of sufficient volume to be a contributing factor in the downturn.

Scale-Down Buying Has Effect.

The main supporting influences the greater part of the week included fair trade buying on the scale-down and considerable price fixing by spinners. While this buying, unassisted by much outside speculative buying, kept the downward trend orderly, it was not sufficient to absorb offerings except at a progressive decline in values. Fear of large ginnings was probably one main incentive to liquidation, and as it turned out there was less real cause for selling on ginnings than on other phases of the situation.

A ginning total to Nov. 1 of 10,880,214 running bales was several hundred thousand bales smaller than the trade was looking for. The totals showed that only 1,750,000 bales were ginned in the last period, compared with 2,011,000 in the corresponding period last year. Some traders pointed out that the falling off came in the face of unusually fine harvesting weather, and many argued therefore that the government's crop estimate was actually larger than was warranted, even if it was only a hundred thousand bales more than the crop forecast of a month ago. The comparatively light ginnings, coupled with bad weather since Nov. 1, are believed by many as responsible for the sharp falling off in the movement of the crop to market last week.

The bureau's crop forecast of 15,009,000 bales, although about what most traders looked for, is now thought by many to be a larger total than will be finally ginned. Nevertheless, the trade idea of the crop will now crystallize around 15,000,000 bales and there will be more disposition from now on to figure on the probable distribution of the supply rather than on the size of the supply itself.

In the first two months of the season consumption has been figured as about the same as last season or a trifle more. In these circumstances the supply, even with a 13,000,000-bale crop, will be smaller than last season's, yet the ruling prices are well below those of 1928.

Influence of Stock Market.

While some slackening in the manufactured goods trade has evidently resulted from the unsettlement in the securities markets, it is argued that this difficulty will soon disappear. Earnings of corporations, including the transportation lines, indicate that business in general is prosperous; hence there is every reason to expect that the demand for cotton goods will soon pick up again.

FARM BOARD HELPS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 10.—A sustaining influence in the market is the activity of the Farm Loan Board in insisting that prices for cotton and grain are much too low and urging farmers to hold back the balance of their crops. Whether the board's idea is right or wrong, it nevertheless exerts a powerful influence owing to the substantial financial assistance it is offering to producers through the cooperative associations.

It is contended that there is evidence of some holding back of cotton in the interior and it is also asserted that deliveries to cooperatives have virtually doubled of late. A holding movement, if persisted in, would without doubt influence a firmer range of prices.

Exports of late have shown some increase, the total clearances last week having exceeded those of the corresponding period last year. The continued liberal sales of cotton in Southern markets indicate that exporters are buying and although total of shipments abroad thus far this season is still behind last year's, there are not lacking indications that the deficiency may soon be made up.

Farm Finds Twenty Uses for Gas.

A model farm in Northern Illinois now uses manufactured gas in twenty different ways, according to the New England Bureau of Public Service Information: House heating, hot water, high-pressure steam, standpipe heating, garage heating, gas steam radiators, combination heater and incinerator, gas range, fireplace heater, clothes drying, incubator, forge cutting and heat treatment, soldering, laundering, heating and cooling water for stock, heating water for poultry houses, heating sprouters and germinators for seed. The owner hopes to increase the uses for gas to forty before the end of the year.

World Trade Rises Over Pre-War Rate; Values $1,000,000,000 Above 1927 Total

World trade in the last three years has reached a pace of average annual increase even slightly higher than that during the pre-war years from 1900 to 1912, and export trade in 1928 was valued at almost $1,020,000,000 over that of 1927 at current money values, according to the fourth Annual Armistice Day accounting of international trade issued today by the National Foreign Trade Council. The advance of world foreign trade since 1925 has been 15 per cent, or at an annual rate of 5 per cent, while that in the thirteen years before the war was at a rate slightly below 3 per cent a year.

Germany, the United States and Canada have been largely responsible for the restoration of the world to its pre-war rate of progress since 1925, according to the report, which adds that Germany has outstripped all other nations in the advance of exports in the last three years. The German exports, then, based on the 1913 dollar, were $2,414,000,000, while they were $2,068,000,000 in 1925, a gain of $670,000,000, or almost 50 per cent.

The increase in this country has been about 17 per cent, or from $3,147,000,000 in 1925 to $3,668,000,000. Canadian exports increased from $819,000,000 to $961,000,000, or about 18 per cent. American exports since 1913 have increased by $1,179,000, or 46 per cent, while Canada's rose by $520,000,000, or 113 per cent, and Japan's by $341,000,000, or 100 per cent.

Figures from ninety-one nations, representing 95 per cent of current international commerce, show 1928 exports amounting to $22,514,000,000, equivalent to $23,607,000,000 at the 1913 valuation of the dollar. These compare with $20,065,000,000 for these same nations in 1913. The pre-war level was not reached until 1923, when the total was $20,454,000,000.

Among the nations whose export trade decreased in the last year were France, where the decline was $116,000,000; British Malaya, with a drop of $34,000,000; Russia, with a fall of $48,000,000; Cuba, with a setback of $21,360,000, and Mexico, with $21,000,000 lower. The French increase in export trade since 1913 was exactly cut in half by last year's falling off.

China, in spite of its revolutions and internal disturbances, is fifth in the world from the point of its gain in exports since 1913 and its gain last year. Since 1913 that country has gained 68 per cent, or from $238,000,000 to $400,000,000, and in 1928 the gain was $48,000,000, or 10 per cent over the previous year.

The Asiatic nations as a group will show the largest increase among the geographic groups since 1913, although they reported a decline of $60,000,000 last year. The increase in this group since 1913 has been 67 per cent, against 50 per cent for North America, 34 per cent for South America, 27 per cent for Africa and 35 per cent for Australasia. Eastern Europe alone stands as the one place where exports are below those of 1913. There the exports are only 81 per cent of those in the pre-war year.

WHEAT PRICES DROP 8 3-4 CENTS IN WEEK

RECORD VISIBLE SUPPLY

Movement of New Corn From the Country Is Increasing—Prices Are Lower.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Grain exchanges in the United States and in Winnipeg will be closed Monday, Armistice Day. A Federal crop report is to be given out at 3 P. M., Eastern Standard Time. Its main feature will be estimates on corn, based on husking returns.

Private estimates suggested an average of 2,572,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,528,000,000 bushels in November and 2,636,000,000 bushels as the final in 1928, while the five-year average is 2,747,000,000 bushels. Farm reserves on Nov. 1, showing the balance left from the 1928 crop, are to be given. Private reports indicate around 90,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels. Last year they were down to about the smallest on record, 33,939,000 bushels, with 113,412,000 bushels in 1927.

With uncertainty as to foreign buying of American and Canadian wheat in volume for the next few months, traders are decidedly mixed on the future course of wheat values.

Argentine's harvest is about at hand and estimates on its wheat production are being revised downward. Bullish news from there, however, has but a temporary effect, and trade sentiment regarding it is mixed, although leaning to the selling side on bulges. There has been an increase in export sales and clearances, but the latter are materially under last year's.

The congested situation at Galveston is about cleaned up and restrictions removed. A better feeling has developed in the cash situation with millers in the market here and in the Southwest. A cargo of 200,000 bushels of hard Winter wheat was sold today to be shipped from Manitowoc, Wis., at 1¼ cents over Chicago December, with freights said being about 10 cents a bushel. The fact that wheat is being picked up at outside points by millers is regarded as significant by cash wheat handlers here.

Eastern interests have been active buyers on breaks and sellers on bulges throughout the week. At times they were also responsible for putting sufficient wheat on the market to cause severe breaks.

One outstanding feature is the record visible supply in the United States—194,000,000 bushels, or 80,000,000 bushels more than last year. Should there be exports of 15,000,000 bushels a month for the next eight months, there would be a disappearance of 120,000,000 bushels in the visible supply on July 1, which would still be a record. The largest previous visible was about 136,000,000 bushels.

The influence of the Farm Board is a factor which deters short selling, but there is nothing to indicate that the government is to come into the market, although reports to Minneapolis said that the Farm Board was loaning 2 cents over the Minneapolis price to North Dakota farmers through cooperatives.

Prices dropped over 11 cents from the high of the previous week and finished around the lowest for the period, with net losses of 8¼ to 9¼ cents after a range of 3 to 9 cents. December closed at $1.19¾ to $1.19¾, March 3¼@3¼ to $1.26¾@¼, May $1.20¾.

Primary receipts of wheat for week 8,806,000 bushels, against 9,240,000 bushels previous week and 9,184,000 bushels last year. Shipments for week this year 5,039,000 bushels compared with 5,079,000 bushels the previous week and 7,067,000 bushels last year.

MERCHANTS DEMAND CURB ON PUSHCARTS

NEW LAWS ARE ADVOCATED

Better Enforcement Also Urged, but No Blame Is Attached to City Officials.

A six months' investigation having shown one-half of the pushcart markets in Manhattan to be "dirty, disorderly and overcrowded," the Merchants' Association of New York has made a series of recommendations for improving them in a letter sent to Mayor Walker and made public yesterday.

The letter was prepared by H. Boardman Spalding, chairman of the association's Committee on City Conditions and Ordinances, following a study by W. S. McGrane, chairman of the Anti-Litter Bureau. Commissioner of Markets Thomas F. Dwyer also cooperated in the work, the letter said.

The association recommended three changes in the laws governing markets of this type and several changes in the procedure of enforcing others to correct conditions summarized as follows:

Lists Abuses Found.

That pushcart market conditions are responsible for a large part of the annual bill of $6,000,000 for street cleaning.

That the Commissioner of Markets does not have proper disciplinary powers over vendors and that the system of fee collections by supervisors opens the way to irregularities.

That markets known as "open" markets" exist without authorization in the code of ordinances.

That markets operate entirely without supervision between the hours of 6 and 9 P. M., making possible "exceptionally bad conditions."

The changes in laws recommended involve the establishment of central offices where peddlers may pay their $1 fee, thus taking collection from the hands of supervisors, the placing of "stop-line stands" under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Markets and a revision of the localities where markets are permitted.

The association also would either eliminate or legalize the "open" markets," take pushcarts off some streets of the lower east side, and where possible, keep them off of streets less than seventy-five feet in width.

Concerning conditions which could be brought about without a change in laws, Mr. Spalding's letter asked for stricter enforcement of the ordinances regarding unsanitary exposure of foodstuffs and these relating to obstruction of fire plugs. Other recommendations included the following:

Suggests Enforcement Rules.

The spacing of carts at least five feet apart, the use of carts of uniform size and the elimination of "floaters," or unlicensed peddlers.

The removal of surplus goods from the streets and the equipping of every peddler with a covered refuse receptacle.

The institution of a uniform system of permits and the detailing of "summons men" by the Street Cleaning Department, who would take into court those who persisted in violating the rules.

Because of the division of authority over the streets, the letter also requested that the Fire, Police and Health Departments cooperate in bringing about a better condition.

While pointing out these shortcomings, the association, through Mr. Spalding, congratulated the Mayor on "the very considerable improvement that has been made with respect to supervision over the pushcart markets under the present incumbent in office."

"We realize," the letter continued, "that the Commissioner of Markets is trying to overcome the shortcomings of these markets, and hence you will find that many of the recommendations in this letter are heartily approved by the commissioner and are in some instances recommendations which the commissioner himself has previously made."

In making the survey Mr. McGrane was said to have investigated fifty-four markets covering 212 city blocks and containing 6,847 carts. Of these he reported, "twelve markets might be considered fairly clean, orderly and not overcrowded; eleven have been abandoned and two moved beyond legitimate boundaries. Two others extended in areas not provided for in the code of ordinances and come under the supervision of the Police Department. The remainder were dirty, disorderly and overcrowded."

BANKRUPTCY STUDY WIDENED TO JERSEY

Experts Will Seek the Causes of Failures by a Survey of 1,000 Newark Stores.

JOINT BODY WILL FUNCTION

Yale Faculty, Commerce Department Officials and Federal Judge Clark Will Cooperate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The national study of the causes of retail failures is to be extended to include a survey of more than 1,000 stores in all lines of retail trade in Newark, N. J., it was announced today by William L. Cooper, Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce.

Commerce Department specialists who will conduct the investigation will cooperate with Judge William Clark of the United States District Court of New Jersey, representatives of the Yale Law School and the North Jersey Association of Credit Men. The inquiry was undertaken at the request of retail credit and other business organizations.

The Newark inquiry will be a continuation of the series of studies begun in February designed to ascertain the cause of bankruptcies and other retail failures. Previous studies include an analysis of all grocery stores in Louisville, Ky., a similar inquiry for comparative purposes in Philadelphia, and a preliminary survey of the causes of failure in the restaurant trade in Kansas City, Mo.

To Compare Liquidation Methods.

Basic facts showing the kinds of business, form of organization, sources of capital and credit, assets, liabilities and the original capitalization, detailed by sources of capital, will be gathered. In addition, the extent of use of credit bureaus, the previous experience of the owner, his practices with regard to inventories, the source of his financial difficulties, his business practices and opinions of interested persons as to the causes of failures will be inquired into.

Considerable data of a legal nature will be gathered to indicate the cost of liquidation by different methods, the length of time required and the difficulties encountered.

In Louisville several bankrupt retail grocers and their creditors reached settlements out of court as a matter of economy in time and expense. The inquiry there also disclosed that ill-advised credit extension was a major cause of failure. This cause has been found to be of less importance in the survey of the Philadelphia area.

Yale's Part in the Inquiry.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—In announcing the cooperation of the Yale School of Law and the Yale Institute of Human Relations with the Commerce Department and Federal Judge William Clark in the extension of the "bankruptcy clinic" to New Jersey, President James R. Angell of Yale said today that the work would begin on Nov. 21 and deal with all New Jersey bankruptcies for the year, numbering about 2,000.

During the ensuing year, the handling of all cases will be analyzed by Law School staff members from the point of view of the legal processes. A smaller number of cases, largely in the retail field, will be investigated thoroughly by the Department of Commerce, from the economic or business aspect. In about 200 cases the medical, psychiatric, psychological and sociological histories of the individuals concerned will be examined by representatives of these various fields at Yale.

The data obtained will be correlated by the Institute of Human Relations to throw light upon the relationship to business failures of such factors as physical and mental health, morals, education, home and community conditions, and industrial and economic developments. Methods for improving the administrative machinery for dealing with insolvencies may be suggested and further checks on dishonest practices in the business world worked out.

Professor William O. Douglas of the Yale School of Law is director of the study for the Institute of Human Relations. His assistants will be Paul O. Ritter, S. R. Gamer and J. H. Weir, research assistants in the Yale Law School.

On the advisory committee are Dean Charles E. Clark of the school, Dean M. C. Winternitz of the Yale School of Medicine, and Professors Edgar S. Furniss, Roswell P. Angier, Ira V. Hiscock, Walton H. Hamilton, Wesley A. Sturges and Donald Slesinger.

Dr. W. C. Plummer of the Wharton School of Commerce is directing the economic study of retail credit for the Department of Commerce and is assisted by George W. Robbins.

WEATHER GOOD FOR CROPS.

Winter Wheat Has Been Benefited by Rains—Corn Husking On.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Winter wheat has had good moisture in practically all sections, especially in Kansas and all the Southwest. There have been heavy rains over the eastern sections of Kansas, and one to four inches of snow in extreme western and northern counties, which protected the young plant from low temperatures. Kansas has a good supply of soil moisture for the coming Winter in nearly every section of the State. The crop there is up to a good stand and many fields are being pastured.

Corn is being picked throughout Kansas and Nebraska except where delayed by rains. Freezing weather has helped to dry out the crop. Corn husking was interfered with by rains in some sections, but is up to, if not above, the average of the season. In Iowa husking has been delayed by rain.

The government report on Monday is estimated to show more than 2,670,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,528,000,000 bushels in October and 2,636,000,000 bushels harvested last year.

CASUALTY INSURANCE SHOWED GAIN IN 1928

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Casualty insurance showed increases for the last year, according to the report of Albert Conway, superintendent of insurance, which is soon to be issued. The report says a remarkable development is indicated by the fact that twenty-three new companies were authorized in the State in 1928. Workmen's compensation and automobile coverage lead, as they have for several years, and show big increases.

Casualty companies reporting had on Jan. 1 last assets of $1,284,780,202, an increase of $177,237,544 over 1928 over 1927. The report deals with the business of seventy State companies, fifty-seven others and eighty foreign companies authorized to do business in New York.

Liabilities, excluding capital, amounted to $852,360,006 and capital invested totaled $19,455,625, leaving a net surplus of $264,545,171. There was an increase in surplus of $20,665,039 and in capital of $38,569,379 over the previous year.

Auto liability	180,125,762
Plate glass	12,980,207
Boiler and machinery	11,787,101
Damage and collision other than auto	2,490,911
Credit and all other classes	9,482,235

The total disbursements of 1928 were $740,406,714, of which $236,806,050 was for losses and $64,339,705 for investigation and adjustment of claims.

The total premiums received in New York State were $214,409,250 and the total loss claims paid $69,227,150.

STEEL ORDERS SHOW NEW TREND OF FUNDS

INVESTMENT CASH APPEARS

Beals Comments on Abrupt Way in Which Call Market Money Has Turned to Building.

"Unstimulated" structural steel tonnage contracts in New York City last month exceeded any previous month's total for building construction exclusively, according to Allen E. Beals, who, in the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports, takes these orders to indicate favorable prospects for builders in the near future.

"If the purpose of the enormous withdrawal of non-banking funds from the call market during October was to release such funds for investment, then, true to time-worn maxim, building was due to gain," Mr. Beals says. "But the strange thing is the abrupt way in which this money has turned toward building.

"October, financially twisted out of shape, brought in the greatest unstimulated tonnage of any month since the Structural Steel Board of Trade has been in existence. With October's high aggregate, the ten-month record of structural steel for strictly building construction purposes in New York City this year eclipsed by 57,000 tons the total amount of structural steel contracts placed for exactly the same purposes in all twelve months of 1928. The total for October was 85,600 tons, sufficient to build four structures the size of the Chrysler Building."

This total has been exceeded only once before, according to Mr. Beals. That was attributed to wholly artificial causes arising in September, 1925, when word went out to architects, builders and owners that no more structural steel orders would be accepted after Nov. 1 of that year on a per ton basis, and without completed, detailed plans and specifications being submitted to the steel concern before it would figure. That order resulted in a stampede that brought in 112,000 tons of steel practically in one month.

Capacity Output Seen.

"If the projects for which plans have been filed," said Charles L. Eidlitz, chairman of the steel board, "should actually go ahead during 1930, there would not be sufficient fabricating plant capacity to turn out the material. That all of these planned buildings will not proceed goes without saying, for it has been my experience that about 30 per cent do not survive the financing searchlight. Still, it is a vast amount and even 70 per cent, and greater than anything I have seen in many years in the building industry.

"It is perfectly natural to expect that higher prices will prevail in the early part of next year, because a busy industry never makes for anything else. The records that we now have for the ten months of 1929 clearly show that 30 per cent more structural steel was actually shipped into this district than was the case in the year preceding."

It is held to be significant, in this connection, that in September structural steel orders were being taken with a six to seven week promise of delivery. October's orders were placed on a promise of delivery between eight and nine weeks. November's steel orders are being taken subject to delivery from ten to eleven weeks.

For every ton of steel about 1,000 common brick are used in New York City. Based on the steel tonnage placed in October, practically 85,000,000 common brick will begin to pass through the city's traffic-jammed streets soon after the first of the year, to supplement the 8,500 ten-ton truck loads of steel ordered in October. About 70 per cent of this brick and steel will rise on Manhattan sites, where improvement of real estate is already under way in the form of excavations or demolition of existing time-worn uneconomic structures, Mr. Beals estimates.

Large Brick Demand.

Adding to the 85,699,000 common brick for use in steel-framed buildings, the five boroughs of New York will need at least a third as much again for building purposes where no steel framing is used, it is believed. This will make a definite demand for January and February in New York alone of 114,267,000 common brick. There is now on hand, according to Floyd W. Flint, secretary of the New York and New Jersey Common Brick Association, 200,000,000 brick. The building construction needs of Northern New Jersey and Westchester, Orange, Putnam and Rockland counties in New York and Southern Fairfield County in Connecticut remain to be supplied.

"Years ago," said Mr. Flint, "this sort of a situation would be alarming, but there is now an increasing number of plants equipped to manufacture common brick all Winter. Even the spectre of a frozen-up river from brick manufacturing centres to market holds no terror for the New York City builder who gets his brick when river navigation is closed, via the New York Central Railroad and its container car service to the crane's nearest job-site.

"This structural steel symbol of greater requirement for common brick in New York this Winter will be pretty sure to delight, rather than distress, the New York and New Jersey common brick trade. I should think all the other building material supply firms will be encouraged as well."

SUNSHINE CITY GROWTH.

New Jersey Community Enlarged by 800 Homes.

A census of population and homes of Woodridge, N. J., recently made by Charles H. Reis, Inc., developers of Sunshine City in that Bergen County community, shows that the increase has more than doubled since 1927.

In that year, prior to the opening of Sunshine City, the municipality contained 739 homes. Since that time, although there has been a normal increase of homes throughout Woodridge, the major expansion took place within the confines of Sunshine City, where more than 800 homes were built.

As evidence of the growth, announcement was recently made that the Public Service recently started a bus line through Sunshine City to the Erie Railroad station to meet incoming trains.

DOUBTS HOOVER BAN ON 3 SHIPBUILDERS

CONCEDES RIGHT TO ACT

H. I. Smith Declares It Is to the Government's Interest to Employ Contractors.

Nothing official has been heard by the National Council of American Shipbuilders to indicate that President Hoover will withhold contracts for the construction of naval cruisers from the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, the New York Shipbuilding Company and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, it was said yesterday by H. G. Smith, president of the council.

He conceded to the administration the right to act as it will in letting the contracts, citing the following from an act dealing with appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service:

"* * * and that no part of the moneys herein appropriated for the naval establishment or herein made available therefor shall be used or expended under contracts hereafter made for the repair, purchase or acquirement, by or from any private contractor, of any naval vessel, machinery, article or articles that at the time of the proposed repair, purchase or acquirement can be repaired, manufactured or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards or arsenals of the United States, when time and facilities permit and when, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, such repair, purchase, acquirement or production would not involve an appreciable increase in cost to the government."

Mr. Smith said that American shipbuilders are ready to cooperate with the President and the Secretary of the Navy, and that, in their opinion, they are equipped to build better ships at less cost than are the navy yards. Eighty per cent of the navy's ships have been built in private yards, he said, succeeding Naval Secretaries having found it advisable to depend on the navy yards chiefly for repairs.

The bids of private builders guarantee performance by ships, the cost of which is definitely assured before the work is started, whereas the navy yard estimates are no guarantee of the final cost and performance of a ship is not assured until long after its construction, Mr. Smith said. He cited the "thirty days' annual leave of absence to the government workers, the fifteen days' annual sick leave and their holidays as factors leading to higher wages and higher cost of government shipyard construction.

"The navy yards were created principally as repair places and it is advisable that they be developed that way," Mr. Smith said. "It is to the government's interest that the American shipyards be built up to their highest point of efficiency to meet the emergencies that come with war, and the best way to do that is to keep them active on naval contracts.

"The best talent in the shipbuilding field is to be found in the private yards. The government gets the benefit of the finest maritime talent and the government, too, is the strictest taskmaker the private yards have. Both the government and the yards gain, the former by getting the finest ships and the latter by working under the eye of a critical customer at high standards."

The Secretary of the Navy can interpret the word "appreciable" in the law and can direct that the navy yards build the proposed naval cruisers despite the figures quoted by the private yards, Mr. Smith said. The cause of President Hoover's alleged proposal to withhold from the yards the contracts for the cruisers is said to be his dissatisfaction with their association with William B. Shearer, "big navy" propagandist, whose activities were recently the object of the Senate's investigation.

WHITE STAR ADDS SERVICE.

Two Liners to Liverpool to Stop at Boston, Belfast, Glasgow.

The White Star Line announced yesterday the extension of its long-established New York-Liverpool service to include calls at Boston, Glasgow and Belfast on trips in both directions by the sisters Adriatic and Albertic. The regular New York-Liverpool service will be continued by the Baltic and the Cedric, which will be joined next May by the new motorship Britannic, largest cabin liner in the world.

The addition of the new ports of call at Glasgow and Belfast has been caused by the increasing volume of traffic from Northern and Central Ireland through Belfast, and from Scotland through Glasgow, according to the line. This service will obviate expensive journeys by rail to the port of embarkation.

Bids Asked Again for Mayflower.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP).—For the second time the Navy will offer for sale the former Presidential yacht Mayflower. Announcement has been made that bids would be opened on Dec. 7 at the Navy Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. Recently the Navy Department offered the Mayflower for sale, but only one offer, which was not accepted, was received. The Mayflower, now at the Philadelphia (Pa.) Navy Yard, was discarded as a Presidential yacht by President Hoover.

Shippers to Act in Lighter Case.

The Shippers' Conference of Greater New York will take action tomorrow at its monthly meeting in the controversy that has arisen between New York and New Jersey leading to the filing of suit by New Jersey with the Interstate Commerce Commission to end free lighterage of freight in the port of New York. Other subjects to be discussed include container-car service, railroad propaganda and rate adjustments and store-door delivery method of handling freight.

Two Men Drowned, Three Saved From Branch of Flushing Creek —Three Killed in Jersey.

Five persons were killed and five critically injured in three motor accidents in Queens yesterday. In one of these an entire family was practically wiped out when a motorcycle and side-car in which they were riding was in collision with an automobile and the wife and 5-months-old daughter of the driver were killed and the driver and his son suffered head injuries from which they are expected to die.

The woman, Mrs. Pellegina Ponasi, 32 years old, of 17 Bradford Avenue, and her child, Clementina, were killed when her husband, Proffenso Ponasi, attempted to skirt a traffic line with his sidecar motorcycle at Kissena Boulevard near Cherry Avenue. The motorcycle was in collision with an automobile driven by Misens Perrong of 63 Fowler Street, Queens. Perrong was not injured. Ponasi and his son Joseph, 6, suffered fractured skulls, while his wife and daughter were killed.

Michael McAuliffe, 23, of 265 East Fourth Street, Brooklyn, and John Burns, 21, of 22-20 200th Street, Bayside West, Queens, were killed early yesterday morning, and three men with them narrowly escaped death when their automobile, crashed through the guard rail of the College Point Causeway Bridge over a branch of Flushing Creek in Flushing and fell twenty feet into water several feet deep.

Samuel McLeod, 27, of 180 Browns Street, Flushing, noted the broken guard rail and notified the police. Patrolman George Lynch, the first to respond, and McLeod pulled McAuliffe and Burns free from the car. They were aided by other police men in freeing the three men whose lives were saved.

The three are in Flushing Hospital suffering from shock and submersion. They are Bernard Dunn, 22, of 139 Lawrence Street, Flushing; Daniel McAuliffe, brother of Michael, 21, of 201-19 Thirty-fourth Avenue, Bayside West, Queens, and John Hanlon, 20, of 1,913 Bogard Avenue, the Bronx.

Burns was the driver, according to the police. There is a slight turn in the causeway, where the car went through the rail and it is believed that Burns failed to take it into account.

In the third Queens motor accident Jack Van Buren Brown of 160-17 Northern Boulevard, Flushing, was killed when he lost control of his car and was carried down an embankment at Rocky Hill Road and 204th Street, early last night.

William Mealey, 45, a bricklayer of 236 East Thirty-second Street, was instantly killed last night when, in crossing Thirty-fourth Street at Third Avenue, he was struck by an automobile driven by Samuel Waters, a negro, of 257 Franklin Avenue, Brooklyn. The victim was thrown into the path of a United States mail truck and was crushed under the back wheels.

Policeman Mankiall of East Thirty-fifth Street station arrested Waters and the driver of the mail truck, Carmine J. Stabile, 25, of 84 First Place, Brooklyn. They were held on charges of reckless driving. Mealey had $1,111 in his pockets.

Five persons were hurt in a collision of three automobiles at Seventy-ninth Street and Transverse Road in Central Park last night. They are Sol Lenbarssky, 23, of 1,171 Sherman Avenue, the Bronx; Molly Gaynor, 23, of 312 Cathedral Parkway, Wanda Hohn, 23, of 410 Cathedral Parkway, Betty Mullins, 28, of 3,453 Third Avenue, Maria Van, 23, of 227 West 116th Street. The first three are in Roosevelt Hospital and the latter two in Lenox Hill.

NORTH BERGEN, N. J., Nov. 10.—After having been run down, according to witnesses, by three automobiles in two minutes, Louis Goode, 48 years old, of 1,508 Bergen Turnpike, North Bergen, said to be a former prize-fighter, was pulled out dead from beneath the rear truck of a Paterson-New York bus on the Hackensack Plank Road here tonight.

Witnesses of the series of accidents told Police Captain Kennal that Goode was first struck by a hit-and-run driver in a roadster and buried across the road. UNIVERSITY OF QUITO DESTROYED BY FIRE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Nov. 10.—A fire which destroyed Quito University last night created a panic because it menaced the arsenal of the artillery barracks in the same block, threatening an explosion and the general spread of the flames to other buildings. The fire was controlled at midnight after a hard fight.

President Ysidro Ayora personally directed the fight against the fire, which was started by a rocket from an Indian fiesta. No lives were lost, but several volunteer firemen were injured. A religious procession with sacred images and a multitude of the faithful paraded the streets calling on God to spare the venerated old Jesuit Church and prevent an explosion in the arsenal.

The university buildings were gutted and it is estimated that the loss was more than 1,000,000 sucres (nearly $500,000), as well as museum specimens of incalculable value.

The only other damage was to the Jesuit Church, which is considered the finest building in the city of Quito. The university occupied the site of the former Jesuit college founded more than three centuries ago. The founders of the college brought to South America its first printing press.

Chinese Bandits Threaten Death to Father Kreutzen Failing Payment.

HANKOW, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Chinese servant of the Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen, Franciscan missionary held captive by bandits at Weiyuenkow, seventy-five miles north of Wuchang, arrived here today from the bandits' camp with a letter from the captors demanding $10,000 Mexican within four days and adding "Kreutzen will be tortured and killed" if payment was not made.

The mission to which the letter was addressed applied to the Foreign Ministry Bureau of the National Government here for assistance in rescuing the pastor. The government agency promised to send troops to Weiyuenkow to oppose the bandits.

The raid during which Father Kreutzen was captured began Friday morning when bandits attacked and looted the town of Weiyuenkow, routing the small garrison. Bandits have been extremely active in Southern Hupeh Province since the withdrawal of troops to aid the Nationalist campaign against the revolting Kwominchun in Northern Honan Province.
